TO THE

WHOSE LONG LIFE AND RETENTIVE MIND ENABLED HER TO RENDER INVALUABLE AID IN THE PREPARATION OF THE FOLLOWING PAGES,
IS

Affectionately Dedicated.

P R E F A C E.

THIS book was not designed to afford literary entertainment, or to give what have so often been set forth in town histories, pictures of old-time life, and tradition, which in the eyes of many would have made the work more attractive, has, in the main, been discarded. Charles Reade expressed the general sentiment of modern historians when he wrote: "No one can approach the history of perhaps any age without finding that the truth is all but buried under mountains of chaff and dirt." The prominent facts in the Town's annals are herein given as gathered from the archives of the State, County and Town, Church and Society records, etc., with little of comment or elaboration. Oxford being among the earliest of the Worcester County settlements, materials were found to be abundant, and many pages show the constraint thus placed on the writer and the necessity for brief and summary treatment. And yet a full history of the town is an impossibility, because so much not within the scope of records has lapsed in the unknown past.

The story of the French Colony has been chiefly reproduced from the author's monograph published ten years ago.

The history of the homesteads, an unusual feature of works of this kind, will serve not only to determine the localities of ancestral domains, but, perhaps, as no other means can, to bring up in review the personality of the long procession of those who have lived, toiled and passed away within the town in the last two hundred years.

The extent of the genealogies indicates the large and important place they occupy in the records, and numerous descendants of the old households now dispersed over our broad land who have not access to the originals, will, it is believed, appreciate the labor bestowed on this department. The entries of births, marriages and deaths have been copied, and embrace (coming nearly to the present time) all families having births recorded up to 1850, and none has been intentionally omitted. In the nature of the case family history in most instances must be fragmentary and incomplete, and errors (the sources of information being diverse and imperfect) are unavoidable.

Several important matters coming to hand too late for insertion in their proper places, are contained in the chapter of notes at the close of the volume.

The existence of this work is largely due to the kindly interest and liberality of the late Hon. George L. Davis of North Andover,¹ a native of Oxford, who gave substantial aid in the preliminary studies and researches and also contributed generously to the printing fund.

The repeated favorable action of the Town upon it and the appropriation of means to aid in the publication are hereby gratefully acknowledged.

Acknowledgments are due to Dr. Samuel A. Green, librarian of the Massachusetts Historical Society, John W. Dean, librarian of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, Dr. Edward Strong of the office of the Secretary of State, Abner C. Goodell, Jr., Commissioner for publication of Province Laws, and C. B. Tillinghast of the State Library, all of Boston; to Edmund M. Barton, librarian of the American Antiquarian Society, William T. Harlow, Assistant Clerk of Courts, and Harvey B. Wilder, Registrar of Deeds, all of Worcester, for assistance and courtesies extended in their several official positions; to Misses Clara Barton and Martha E. Stone for matter relating to family affairs and North Oxford history, and to many others in various parts of the country who cannot be here personally designated who have kindly contributed to give value to the volume.

Obligations are hereby acknowledged to Peter B. Olney of New York City through whose efficient aid plans for publication were consummated. The neatness and correctness of the typography are due largely to the thorough supervision of Benjamin J. Dodge of Worcester. The illustrations are the production of the press of W. P. Allen of Gardner.

HISTORY OF OXFORD.

CHAPTER I.

TOPOGRAPHICAL. THE NIPMUCKS. PHILIP'S WAR. DISASTROUS RESULTS.
LAND PURCHASES. INDIAN RESERVE. GRANTS. THE VILLAGE. GRAND LOTS. NATURAL ATTRACTIONS. EARLY ROADS.

Location. The town of Oxford is situated in the southern central part of Worcester County, eleven miles distant from Worcester, on the line of the Norwich and Worcester railroad. Leicester and Auburn adjoin it on the north, Millbury on the northeast, Sutton on the east, Douglas on the southeast, Webster on the south, Dudley on the southwest and Charlton on the west; Webster separates it by about five miles from the State of Connecticut. Its estimated area is a little over 25 square miles, or 16,400 acres. It was a part of Suffolk County until 1731, the date of the establishment of the County of Worcester.

It has the usual diversity of surface of the central Massachusetts towns, ranges of hills running northerly and southerly skirt its eastern and western borders, between which lie the plains which constitute its natural peculiarity. On the central or "Great Plain" is the principal village, and its main street, a mile in length and seven rods in width, is attractive and has few equals in the State.¹ The highway from Sutton to Charlton crossing at the centre forms also an avenue on which are located dwellings and business establishments.

Streams. One mile westerly of the main street, running the length of the town from Leicester to Webster line, is the principal river, the Maanexit, which, rising ten or twelve miles northwesterly and passing through parts of Spencer and Leicester, furnishes water power for eight mill-wheels at North Oxford, and one at Howarth's, is utilized by many mills below Oxford and joins the Quinebaug at Mechanicville, Conn. Its largest tributary in Oxford is Little River, which comes in two branches, the Pierpont from Dudley, and Collicump from Charlton, furnishing power at Buffumville, in the west part of the town, and joining the main stream a half-mile below. Mill-brook, coming from Long Hill in the northeast part of the town, joined by a branch from a swamp on the southeast, and running southwesterly on the east side of the main street, joins the Maanexit in the southwesterly part of the town. Elliott's Mill-brook, once much larger than now, rises in the Auburn swamps and running southerly crosses the Worcester road near North Oxford and joins the Maanexit on the Kidder farm.

¹This feature of the location probably had its weight in the proposition which tradition tells us was made to establish here the seat of the

Ponds. Of natural ponds there are: 1. Town's Pond, one-fourth of a mile northerly of the north common, a body of very clear water fed by springs, and having a small outlet on the westerly side. It has an area of about 14 acres. 2. Augutteback Pond, a natural basin of the Maanexit, below the falls, one mile westerly of the centre. Its area is about 10 acres. 3. Grassy Pond, in the southwesterly part of the town, is, perhaps, 8 or 10 acres in extent, the surface being covered largely by floating grass, whence its name. It is fed by springs and has a small outlet into the river.

Hills. There are three principal hills in the northerly part of the town. On the northwest is Rocky Hill or Mount Pleasant. On the north, and projecting into the Maanexit valley, is Prospect Hill, embracing many acres, abrupt and wooded on the south, but sloping gradually on the north into Auburn. On the northeast is Long or Federal Hill, which extends southerly, embracing Barton Hill, to near the Sutton road. A part of this region extending into Millbury is called in the records Flat Hill. A spur of the same, called Brush Hill, lies southeasterly of, and overlooks, the Norwich and Worcester railroad station at North Oxford. Easterly of the centre, on the borders of Sutton, lie the Manchaug Hills, which cover a large area of this part of the town. Fort Hill, named from the Huguenot fort, and Bondet Hill, named for the Huguenot minister, are parts of this elevated tract nearer the village on the southeast. On the southwest lie the steep slopes of the Dudley hills, which are chiefly covered with wood. Camp Hill is a lower eminence near the centre on the west and was named from the fact of the encampment here of a body of United States troops in 1799.

Meadows. The most important tract of meadow in town at the time of the settlement was the Great Meadow, which lies nearly a mile northeasterly of the centre, and is now largely covered with wood or reclaimed for tillage. It was divided into small sections and allotted among the settlers. Bell's Meadow and Hudson's Bay were parts of the lands on the Maanexit between Howarth's and North Oxford. Mendon Meadow, east of the centre, once valuable, is now covered by the reservoir known as Robinson's Pond. Bondet Meadow is a beautiful spot of a few acres, situated in the southerly part of the town, and named for the former owner, the Huguenot minister.

THE PLAIN FROM CAMP HILL, FORT HILL IN THE DISTANCE.

Cedar Swamps. These swamps were valued as furnishing fencing stuff, clapboards, shingles and coopers' materials. Great Cedar Swamp was located in what is now Auburn and was allotted to settlers in the same manner as were the meadows. Little Cedar Swamp lies westerly of Town's Pond, between that and the river.

Products. The soil of the town is moderately productive, the hill lands are good for hay, grazing and fruit-growing, and the plains being a warm alluvial soil are easily cultivated, and yield the common farm products, and garden vegetables, grapes, strawberries and the small fruits, especially, flourish.

Nipmucks. The site of the town is near the middle of a territory mainly in the southern central part of Massachusetts, known at the time of the settlement of Boston, 1630, as the "Nipmuck Country." Much of this tract was then wild hunting ground, but portions were thinly inhabited by the natives whose numbers had been much reduced by wars with western tribes and fatal disease.¹ They were an inferior people, and owned fealty to the Pokanokets.² Miss Larned, in her History of Windham County, aptly describes them:—

"They were subject clans of little spirit or distinctive character. Their number was small. A few families occupied favorite localities, while large sections were left vacant and desolate. Their dwellings were poor, their weapons and utensils rude and scanty. They raised corn and beans, and wove mats and baskets. Their lives were chiefly spent in hunting, fishing and idling."

Gaming, of which they were excessively fond, might be added.

Through the efforts of John Eliot and Daniel Gookin these people had been partially civilized and had to an extent accepted the Christian religion, and were known as "praying Indians." The earliest mention we find of the natives of this locality is in 1674, when Eliot and Gookin visited them. The latter thus wrote:—

"The first of these [New Praying towns] is Manchaug, which lyeth to the westward of Nipmuck [Blackstone] river about 8 miles and is from Hassanamessit west and by south about 10 miles and it is from Boston about 50 miles. To it belongeth about twelve families and about sixty souls. For this place we appointed Waabertamin, a hopeful young man for their minister."

Philip's War. We know no more of this minister, but his term of service must have been short. A few months only elapsed after Eliot's visit before the whole region was under the excitement of Philip's War, and these apparently inoffensive men, to quote Mr. Gookin:—

"Being raw and lately initiated in the Christian profession, most of them fell off . . . and joined the enemy." Palfrey says "A taste for havoc was established between heathen Wampanoag and half converted Nipmuck. Without provocation and without warning they gave full sway to the inhuman passions of their savage nature and broke into a wild riot of pillage, arson and massacre."¹

To the Nipmucks the results of the war were disastrous, and only a spiritless remnant of the tribe was found here when the English began negotiations for land for settlement.²

Grant. The first movement toward a settlement in the region was the petition of Mr. Hugh Campbell, a Scotch merchant of Boston, February, 1680, for land for a colony, to which the Court replied:—

"This Court judgeth it meete to allow to the petitioner, on behalfe of such as may on that account transport themselves hither, such accomodation to their number in the Nepmug country as it will afford, provided they come w^{thin} two yeares next after this grant."³

From the index to this record we learn that the grant was made in behalf of a company of Scotch emigrants who were purposing to settle in Massachusetts, but we have no evidence that any progress was made in the matter.

Indian Titles. At about the same time two prominent men in Boston, William Stoughton and Joseph Dudley, were also contemplating a settlement, and in proceeding with their plan, the first point was to inquire into the matter of the ownership of the lands and the rights of the Indians. On this subject they petitioned the General Court, which replied, May 11, 1681, as follows:—

"The Court judgeth it meete to grant this motion, and doe further desire & impower the wor^{pp}l Wm. Stoughton & Joseph Dudley, Esqs, to take particular care & inspection into the matter of the land in the Nipmug Country, what titles are pretended to by Indians or others, and the validity of them, and make returne of what they find therein to this Court as soone as may be."⁴

This commission reported October 16, 1681, that in June they had a general meeting of all the claimants at Cambridge, but finding them at variance as to their several claims, they dismissed them until they could agree among themselves. They further reported:—

"Since which time, in September last, perceiving a better vnderstanding amongst them, wee warned severall of the principall claymers to attend vs into the country, & travajle the same in company with us as farr & as much as one weeke would allow us, & find that the southerne part, clajmed by Black James and company is capable of good settlement, if not too scant of meadow, though vncertaine what will fall w^{thin} bounds if our lyne be to be quæstioned."⁵

² "This war was very disastrous to the labors of

Mr. Elliot and almost entirely suspended them. The irritation against the Indians was very great and jealousy and distrust of his converts were everywhere rife, and the rage of the people was violent and alarming. Mr. Gookin and Mr. Elliot incurred much abuse." Morton, N. E. Mem., 391.

⁴ Mass. Col. Rec., V., 315.

⁵ Mass. Col. Rec., V., 328.—The boundary line between Massachusetts and Connecticut was at this time unsettled.

Purchase of Indian Lands. Stoughton and Dudley were empowered to make purchases, and on 18 Feb., 1681-2, reported that with the Hassanamesit and Natick Indians they had agreed for all their land "lying fower miles northward of the present Springfield road, & southward to that, haue agreed betweene Blacke James & them, of which wee aduised in our late returne, wee haue purchased at thirty pounds money & a coate.

"The southern halfe of sajd countrey wee haue purchased of Blacke James & company, for twenty pounds."¹

Deeds. The deeds of conveyance dated Feb. 10th, 1681-2, were presented to the Court May 27, 1682, and by it confirmed.² The descriptions are somewhat indefinite, but indicate that with Waban and company, Natick men, the bargain was for all the lands they claimed west of the Blackstone river, between the southern line of Massachusetts and an imaginary line beginning at the Blackstone river at a point four miles northerly of the Springfield road, and running southwesterly till it joined said Massachusetts southern line, thus enclosing a triangle.³

With "Black James," the bargain was for the southern part of the same territory, including lands extending into Connecticut.⁴

These deeds were delivered at Natick, May 19, 1682, and on the 27th the commissioners reported that they had effected a purchase "from the principall men of Naticke . . . of a parcell of remote & wast land belonging to said Indians, lying at the vtmost westerly bounds of Naticke, and, as wee are informed,—is for quantity about —acres, more or lesse, being mean land."⁵

Indian Reserve. In the second deed was a reservation of five miles square for the exclusive use of this branch of the tribe, which was chosen in two localities.⁶

³ The consideration in the first deed was £30, and the description as follows:—"all that part of the Nipmug Country . . . lying, and being beyond the great ryuer called Kuttatuck, or Nipmug [Blackstone] Ryver, and betweene a raiinge of marked trees, beginning at sajd riuier and running south east till it fall vpon the south lyne of the sajd Massachusetts colbny on the south, and a certaine imaginary lyne fowre miles on the north side of the road, as it now lyeth, to Springfield on the north, the sajd great riuier . . . on the eastward, and the sajd patent lyne on the westward." In the second deed (consideration £20 and a black coat) It is as follows:—"all that part of the sajd Nipmug country . . . lying, & being on the south part of the sajd colony of the Mattachusetts, beyond the great riuier . . . bounded with the Mattachusetts patent line . . . on the south, and certaine marked trees, beginning at sajd riuier and running south east, till it strike vpon the bounds the of sajd patent line; on the north, the sajd great riuier; on the east, and coming to a point on the west." Mass. Col. Rec., V., 362-365.

The commissioners say in their report Feb., 1681-2, "The whole tract in both deeds conteyned is in a forme of a trjangle & reduced to a square, conteyneth a tract about fifty miles long & twenty miles wide." Ibid., 342.

"This Plat running from the west side of Chaubunagungamaug Pond over Mayanexit River contains 11 thousand acres, being the complement of the other plat of five thousand to sixteen thousand which is the contents of 5 miles square reserved by the generall Indian deed made

Special Grants. The Court duly acknowledged the services of Stoughton and Dudley in this purchase, and 1,000 acres of land were voted to each for their "great care and paines." Associated with them was another man of ability and high standing, Robert Thompson, merchant, of London, who became warmly interested in the success of the colonies as early as 1650, and in 1670 was chosen president of the "Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in New England."¹ He ably served the public interests, both here and in England, in acknowledgment of which a grant of land was made to him, as follows:—

"This Court, being informed by our agents, now in England, of the good will & freindship of Major Robert Thompson, of London, & his readiness vpon all occasions to be assistants to them in the service of this colony, wherein they are, according doe, by way of gratuity, give vnto the said Major Thompson & his heires, fvee hundred acres of land in the Nipmug cuntry, to be lajd out to him wth all reasonable convenience." Dated May 16, 1683.²

Stoughton was also a man of wealth and high position, and was in 1694 and 1700 acting governor of the Province.

Dudley was a leading spirit of his time, whose eminent executive talents cannot be questioned. Doctor Daniel Cox and John Blackwell of London, and Thomas Freak of Hannington, Wiltshire, all men of influence, were also proprietors.³ It would seem that under the fostering care of such patrons, any enterprise which they might undertake would prosper. But in this case progress was slow, and influences beyond human control prevented the initiation of the scheme. For two years after the date of the grant no progress towards a settlement seems to have been made. The scarcity of men of sufficient courage and ability to face the existing difficulties was doubtless a great hindrance to the movement. The demand for men in the older plantations was pressing, and especially in those which had suffered most from the war, the proprietors were anxious to re-build as fast as possible. The grant for Woodstock had been made November 7, 1683, and so great were the obstacles that in the spring of 1686 only thirteen men could be mustered who were ready to go and take possession. Confidence in the peaceful professions of the natives had nearly vanished. The horrors of the recent war were by hlack James and company to Wm. Stoughton & Joseph Dudley Esq's in behalf of the country —Surveyed by John Gore. Oct. 1684."

The plot of 5,000 acres was surveyed at Quinnatisset, southerly of the first tract, in the present town of Thompson.

On 20 June, 1685, the Court ratified and confirmed to Black James and company two plots of land surveyed by John Gore, one at Quinnatisset and the other at Mayanexit. Col. Rec., V., 488.

² Mass. Col. Rec., V., 409. An old plan in the Oxford records shows, among other lots of land in the territory lying southerly of the town and northeasterly of Chauhunagungamaug Pond, one designated as "Thompson's five hundred acres." After his death the legislature of Connecticut granted two thousand acres to his grandson in London, as a tribute to his memory. This grant was located in North Killingly, which place was afterwards made a town and named "Thompson," in honor of the family.

still fresh in mind, and those who lived in the safer places near the coast were slow to go out and endure the hardships of a pioneer life in a wilderness where roving bands of hostile Indians were scouting, and the resident tribes had proved themselves untrustworthy.

Grant to Dudley, etc., for a Town. The grant for Oxford is as follows:—

“This court having information that some gentlemen in England are desirous to remove themselves into this colony & (if it may be) to settle themselves under the Massachusetts; for the encouragement of such persons, & that they may have some from among themselves, according to their motion, to assist & direct them in such a designe, this Court doth grant to Major Robert Thompson Willjam Stoughton and Joseph Dudley, Esq., and such others as they shall associate to them, a tract of land, in any free place, conteyning eight miles square, for a towneship, they settling in the said place w^{thin} fower yeares, thirty families & an able orthodox minister, and doe allow to the said towneship freedom from country rates for fower yeares from the time about l^ymitted.” Dated May 16th, 1683.¹

First Survey. The survey of this grant was made by John Gore of Roxbury, an order having been issued by Edmund Andros, Kt., 19 Sept., 1687, for laying out a plat “near Worcester,” on a grant made in 1683.² The place was named Oxford after the city of that name in England.³

The plan, a copy of which is now in the Town Clerk’s office, comprehended 41,250 acres or a little less than 65 square miles, and was 2,114 rods or six and two-thirds miles on the east side; 3,340 rods or about ten and one-half miles on the south; 1,968 rods or about six miles on the west and 3,216 rods or about ten miles on the north. The description in the deed of division—hereafter described—begins at the southwest corner of Worcester, which was not far from the present Auburn centre, and from thence the line ran nearly south to the northwest corner of Mr. Dudley’s grant of 1,000 acres before alluded to, and thence S. 15° E. by the west line of said grant to a point about one and a quarter miles southwest of West Sutton, and a mile and a half west of Manchaug Pond, called Manchaug Corner, thence W. 15° S. to a point north of Peter Pond in the east part of Dudley, and thence nearly on the same course crossing the Quinebaug to a point about one mile south of Southbridge centre, thence north including the main water power at Southbridge centre, to a point about two miles west of Charlton City on the Sturbridge line, thence N. 85° E. to the southwest corner of Worcester, enclosing besides the present Oxford, the larger part of Charlton, about one-fourth of

³ This fact does not appear clearly from the record, but is confirmed by the memorandum of Judge Sewall, of Boston, who in his diary wrote,

“I gave New Roxbury the name of Woodstock, because of its nearness to Oxford, for the sake of Queen Elizabeth and the notable meetings that have been held at that place bearing the name in England.” [Hólmes’s Annals, II., 240.] These places are about eight miles distant from each other, and are places of note in English history.

Auburn, one-fifth of Dudley, and several square miles of the northeast portion of Southbridge.

Common way. Through this tract on the Village west line was laid out due north and south a "way" 20 rods in width called "the common way,"—probably a reserve for access to the lands adjoining on the west. This "way" became later a part of the Village.

The Village. This "common way," cut off from the main grant 11,250 acres of the eastern portion, a plot six and two-thirds miles long, and nearly three miles wide, which was given to the settlers for a Village, or "General Plantation."

"Grand lots." The remaining 30,000-acre tract was divided into five equal parts, the division lines running easterly and westerly. These were allotted as follows: the northernmost to Robert Thompson, the second to Daniel Cox, the third to William Stoughton, the fourth to John Blackwell, and the southernmost to Joseph Dudley. Mr. Cox's portion is subdivided on the plan between Blackwell, Freak and Cox.¹ All the bounds mentioned in this deed were of a transient nature—marked trees, a heap of stones, or a stake, constituting them all—excepting one, which was at the northeast corner of Augutteback Pond at the present Howarth's village.²

So far as appears, Dudley assumed the entire management of the preliminaries of the settlement. Blackwell early sold, having obtained a new grant in the Quinebaug valley in Connecticut, 28 Jan., 1685.³

The Deed of Division is a valuable document, found in 1872 in London, and now in the possession of the New York Historical Society. Its date is July 3, 1688, and its point of special interest is in the description of Mr. Dudley's tract, where his northeast bound is given as a "white oak stake, square, driven in the meadow, by the river which runs by and from the French houses."⁴

A fact of interest learned from this document is the Indian name of the beautiful pond referred to, "Augutteback."⁵

Attractions of the locality. The features of the locality which, in Dudley's estimation, made it "capable of good settlement," were, doubtless, its meadows and plains. The western portion was ¹Diagram 1, under "Changes in Town lines," shows the form and chief divisions of the grant.

²A fact on which the records give no light, is that of the change of the location of this "Village Line." By removing it a few rods to the west the very desirable water power at Augutteback or lower falls, and also a large amount of meadow on the river above were given to the village and the change was made undoubtedly as an inducement to settlers to come in. Whatever may have been the motive, the line was before 1713 removed about one-fourth of a mile to the westward, and at Augutteback was near the brow of the hill west of the river at the west boundary of Howarth's estate.

³Mass. Col. Rec., V., 467.

⁴Cox's copy of this deed has recently come to light. It was in the possession of Ezra Taylor, Esq., of Southboro, attorney of Cox's heirs, who resided in New Jersey, and is now in the library of the Am. Antiq. Soc. at Worcester. See also Wor. Co. Rec., XXIX., 228.

⁵This name, though not as pleasing as the lake itself, should be retained. The river which runs through it should also be known as the Maanexit, the appellation "French" being inappropriate, as no French settled near it.

rough and hilly but the hundreds of acres of warm alluvial soil embraced in the village plot were specially suited to the main crop of those early times, Indian corn. Gookin said of it, "it is situated in a fertile country for good land," and he asserts he had seen in the region fields yielding 40 bushels to the acre. The country was not unbroken forest, but on the plains especially were open areas planted over by the natives.

"There is no underwood, save in swamps and low places; for it being the custom of the Indians to burn the woods in November . . . it consumes all the underwood and rubbish. There is good fodder in the woods where the trees are thin; and in the spring the grass grows rapidly on the burnt lands. . . . The woods are open and the forests penetrated without difficulty. The only obstructions are streams, hills and swamps."¹

Meadows. These were considered as of great value on account of their yielding hay.² Water power available and fitting was at hand.

Game. Wild game in plenty, especially deer, important as a means of living, roamed the forests, and the ponds and rivers abounded in fish.³

Roads. The grant was easy of access. A road from Boston to Springfield crossed it on the north, and through the southern part ran the thoroughfare from Boston to Hartford and vicinity, called in the records the Great Trail and the Connecticut Path.

Undoubtedly the first white man to tread Oxford soil was John Oldham, who, in 1633, having learned of the "trail" from the incident of the Indians of Wabquasset carrying corn to the Bay colonists when in need in 1630, passed over it westward to Windsor.

In July, 1675, Ephraim Curtis was employed to conduct "Uncas his six men" from Boston home. He says "I conducted [them] safely while I com in sight of Wabquesesue new planting fielde; first to Natuck, from thence to Marelborrow, thence to Esnemisco, thence to Mumchogg [Oxford], thence to Chabanagonkomug, thence to Mayenecket thence over the river to Seneksig, while wee cam nere to Wabaquasesu wher they were willing that wee should leve them."⁴ This indicates the line of travel at that time.

² Sudbury, Concord, Lancaster and Brookfield, early settled, all were chosen for their productive meadows. Robinson's Pond in the east part of Oxford covers "Mendon Meadow," so called from the fact that the people of Mendon came here for hay before the settlement.

Bears and wolves were not uncommon. Mrs. Lee in her history of the Huguenots says, quoting from the manuscript of Mr. John Mayo, "I heard Joseph Rockwood, who served in the fort, tell of having got lost in the woods when out for the cows. He heard at a distance the cries of wild beasts, and ascending a tree for safety was surrounded during the night by half famished, howling wolves."

Mrs. Isaac Moffitt, b. 1738, dau. of John Larned, living west of the river in the southwest part of the town, said she had lain awake many a time in her childhood and heard the night-long serenade of the wolves from a knoll a short distance from the dwelling.

At Jonathan Ballard's, who bought in 1735 (now Howarth's), it was necessary at times to house the sheep and calves for safety, and on a certain winter morning tradition says seven wolves were counted on the lee of the mill pond.

Huguenots as Colonists. In the spring of 1686 no progress had been made toward occupying the grant, and on petition of the grantees, the stipulated time for settlement was extended three years.¹ Before the expiration of that time, the requisite number of families of a strange nationality and a remarkable history were here as settlers. These were French Protestants who a short time before had been driven out of their native land on account of their religion and had taken refuge in London. Mr. Thompson, one of the grantees then residing there, entered into negotiations with Gabriel Bernon, an influential man among them, which resulted in an agreement with him and his agent, Isaac Bertrand DuTuffeau, to bring over and settle 30 families upon the Oxford lands.²

A grant of 2,500 acres was made by Dudley and Company to Bernon and DuTuffeau in common, Bernon's portion thereof being 1,750 acres in his own right, and 750 in co-partnership with Du Tuffeau. This tract was laid out in the southeast corner of the village plot, and was 352 rods on the south line, and ran north "as far as will complete the full quantity of 2,872 acres."³ DuTuffeau after a time left the colony while indebted to Bernon, who by legal process came into possession of the whole. This he sold in the spring of 1721, eight years after the permanent settlement, for 1,200 pounds to Thomas Mayo, Samuel Davis and William Weld, all of Roxbury.⁴

² In 1720, Bernon represented to the authorities at Boston, that he was "one of the most ancient families in Rochel, France; that upon the breach of the Edict of Nantes, to shun persecution he fled to London; that on his arrival, — Tuffereau, Esq., treasurer of the Protestant churches of France, presented him to the honorable society for propagating the gospel among the Indians in New England; that Mr. Thompson the governor [President] offered to 'instal him in the society' and offered him land in the government of the Massachusetts Bay; whereupon Isaac Bertrand du Tuffeau desired him 'to assist him to come over to New England to settle a plantation for their refuge,' that he did advance him such sums, as, 'with the exchange and interest from that time would amount to above one thousand pounds,' etc. . . . and that he shipped himself, his family, and servants, with other families and paid passage for above forty persons."

During the summer and autumn of 1686 and the winter following most of these emigrants arrived at Boston, and according to Rev. Charles W. Baird, D.D., author of "History of the Huguenot emigration to America," came to Oxford in 1687.¹ The settlement was made near the stream easterly of the present Main Street, the houses having been built on its higher banks, mostly on the westerly side, from near the present Sutton road on the northeast, down one mile to the Webster road and Johnson's Plain on the southwest, the most thickly settled part having been near the "old mill" at the south end of the Plain.

Chapel. Southeasterly from the central portion of the village on the Humphrey farm upon a rise of land about 100 rods from the stream, on the road to the fort, stood their church building, and near it was their burying-ground, and a stockade for refuge in case of an attack during religious service.

Fort. Still farther to the southeast about three-fourths of a mile, rising to an eminence overlooking the country for many miles, was their fort or stronghold, and a short distance from it westerly on Bondet Hill, within the village limits, was a building called in the records the "Great house," supposed to have been the home of the minister, Daniel Bondet.

Mills. On the stream near the south end of the Plain, was built the first mill, a sawmill, and three-fourths of a mile above at the northeastern extremity of the settlement on Bernon's land, stood the grist-mill, built by Mr. Church in 1689.

Progress. Concerning the progress of the colony, but little can be known, as all official papers were carried away by the pastor, Daniel Bondet, when he left, and have never been recovered.² A few miscellaneous papers, petitions, letters, etc., remain, chiefly in the State archives and among the Bernon papers now in the possession of William D. Ely, Esq., Providence, R. I., quotations from which will give indications of the state of affairs from time to time. A letter from a French refugee in Boston, dated Nov., 1687, recites as follows:

"The Nicmok country belongs to the President himself and the land costs nothing. I do not know as yet the precise quantity that is given to each family; some have told me it is from fifty to a hundred acres according to the size of a family. . . . It lies with those who wish to take up lands whether to take them in the one or the other plantation—on the sea board or in the interior. The Nicmok plantation is inland, at a distance of twenty leagues from Boston and equally distant from the sea; so that when the settlers wish to send anything to Boston or to obtain anything from thence, they are obliged to transport it in wagons. In the neighborhood of this settlement there are small rivers and ponds abounding in fish, and woods full of game. M. Bondet is their minister. The inhabitants as yet number only fifty-two persons."³

² Whitney, referring to the early records of

Oxford, says they were kept in Boston, and burned in the old State House.

Mill Contract. A contract dated March, 1689, between Caleb Church of Watertown and Mr. Bernon, by which the former agrees to build a grist-mill at Oxford, appears among the Bernon papers. This mill was completed prior to Feb., 1690, as before stated.

The Rum Traffic. In 1691 the peace of the settlement was seriously disturbed by some "incorrigible persons" therein who were carrying on a pernicious traffic with the natives. The following is a memorial from the minister, Mr. Bondet, on this subject, dated 6 July:—

"It is an occasion which fills my heart with sorrow and my life of trouble, but my humble request will be at least before God, and before you a solemn protestation against the guilt of those incorrigible persons who dwell in our place. The rome is always sold to the Indians without order or measure, insomuch that according the complaint sent to me by master Dickesteane with advice to present it to your honours. The 26 of last month there was about twenti indians so furious by drunkenness that they fought like bears and fell upon one called remes . . . who is appointed for preaching the gospel amongst them he had been so much disfigured by his wounds that there is no hope of his recovery. If it was your pleasure to signifie to the instrumens of that evil the jalosie of your authoriti and of the publique tranquillity, you would do great good maintaining the honour of God in a Christian habitation, confortng some honest souls wich being incompatible with such abominations feel every day the burden of afflixon of their honorable perigrination aggravated. Hear us pray and so God be with you and prosper all your just undertakins and applications tis the sincere wish of your most respectuous servant.

minister of the gospell in a French Congregation at newoxford."

No action upon this petition appears.

Sigourney's Affirmation. Several years later the same evil continued, "to the great shame and danger of all the company," the agent now being one of the Huguenots, as appears from the following document, the original of which is in the possession of Peter Butler, Esq., of Quincy, a descendant of André Sigourney:—

"André Sigourney aged of about fifty years doe affirme that the 28 day of nouemb^r last past he was with all the others of the village in the mill for to take the rum in the hands of Peter Canton and when they asked him way hee do abuse soe the Indiens in seleing them liquor to the great shame and dangers of all the company hee s^d Canton answered that itt was his will and that hee hath right soe to doe and asking him further if itt was noe him how make soe many Indiens drunk he did answer that hee had sell to one Indien and one squa the valew of four gills and that itt is all upon w^{ch} one of the company named Ellias Dupeux told him that hee have meet an Indien drunk w^{ch} have get a bott^(le) fool and said that itt was to the mill how (who) sell itt he answered that itt may bee trueth.

"ANDRÉ SIGOURNEY. [Constable.]

"BOSTON, Dec. 5, 1693."

Representative. In the early part of 1693 the plantation, having been by a general law of 1692 empowered thereto, chose as representative to the General Court, Daniel Allen of Boston. Little can be learned of this first representative of the town, but it can hardly be doubted that he was half-brother of Dudley, and son of Rev. John Allin of Dedham, by his wife Catharine, who had been previously wife of Samuel Hagborne and of Thomas Dudley, and was mother of Joseph Dudley. He was born 5 Aug. 1656; grad. Harv. Col. 1675; physician at Boston; died 7 Nov. 1693. His kinship to Dudley explains his having been elected to the office, and the fact attests Dudley's continued interest in the settlement.¹

Hostile Indians. In the summer of 1693 the northern Indians became a source of alarm. At Brookfield a band of 40 made an assault, 27th July, killing six persons and carrying away three others, one an infant, which was killed soon after the capture. Both Oxford and Woodstock having fears that unless precautionary measures were taken like disasters might come to these places, the case was laid before the authorities, and on 1 Aug., 1693, in Council, it was advised and ordered that the Indians of the Plantation of Tohkokomoowadchunt [Kekamoochong, adjoining Oxford] "as well for their own security as that the Enemy may be better known," be drawn into the town of Woodstock to be under the watch of the English.² Nothing further appears to show that the settlement was not in a fairly prosperous condition up to 1694, seven years from the beginning. At this date the community numbered probably 70 or 80 persons.

In the summer of 1694 the colonists first learned by experience the cruel and sanguinary nature of the people among whom their lot had been cast. A daughter of one Alard, with two younger children of the family, left their home one day to return no more. Search was made, the body of the murdered girl was found but the children had been captured and carried away to Quebec.³

Sigourney's Memorial. The effect of this occurrence was greatly to dishearten the villagers, as will appear from the following document. In October, 1694, a warrant having been sent to Andrew Sigourney, the constable, for the collection of £8. 6s. taxes, he replied as follows:—

" . . . Now whereas the Indians have appeared several times this summer, we were forced to garrison ourselves for three months together and several families fled, so that our summer harvest of hay and corn hath gone to ruin by the beasts and cattle which hath brought us so low that we have not enough to supply our own necessities, many other families abandoning likewise so that we have none left but Mr. Bondet our minister and the poorest

² Council Rec.

³ Tradition gives us this story, and says these children were a daughter and two sons, and fixes

the location of Alard's dwelling as at the south end of the plain, about three rods westerly of the railroad track on the northerly side of the road to the fort. The Bernon papers give—"The daughter of Sr. Alord was killed, and the two children of Alord taken prisoners and taken to Quebec."—Baird, II., 274.

of our plantation, so that we are incapable of paying said Poll unless we dispose of what little we have and quit our plantations. Wherefore humbly entreat the Honorable Council to consider our miseries and incapacity of paying the poll, and as in duty bound we shall ever pray."¹

In Province Laws of 1698, p. 341, we find an act remitting taxes to Oxford for £33. 6s.

Bondet leaves. For nearly two years afterward we have very little by which to judge of the condition of affairs. Soon after the date of the above memorial, according to Laborie's representations, hereafter given, Bondet, the pastor, doubtless with a feeling of hopelessness as to the future, and to the regret and discouragement of the people, left and returned to Boston.

Johnson Massacre. On 25 Aug., 1696, occurred the Johnson massacre. This deed was perpetrated under the instigation of the Canadian authorities and the Jesuits by a willing servant of theirs, Toby, a Nipmuck Indian, dwelling at Woodstock, and was a precursor of the long series of atrocities later enacted on the frontier.²

The house of Johnson stood on the southern outskirts of the village, near the Woodstock trail, on the plain which bears his name. Toby and his band stealthily approached it on the afternoon of Tuesday, the 25th of August, 1696, and entering, seized his three children, Andrew, Peter and Mary, and ruthlessly crushed their heads against the stones of the fireplace. With the help of Andrew-Johnnot, her cousin, the mother fled toward Woodstock, whither her husband had gone on business. Tradition runs that in parts of the way there were two paths and that in going and coming the husband and wife passed each other, she going on to Woodstock and he coming to his home, where he was met by the assassins and shared the fate of his children.³

A rough stone monument was raised on the site of the Johnson house by an assembly of the people of Oxford on 25 Aug., 1875. Dr. O. W. Holmes, replying to an invitation to be present, wrote: "The occasion you propose to celebrate is a very interesting one, in an exceptional kind of way, and deserves an orator quite as much as many more widely known events of history . . . I must content myself with sending my most cordial good wishes to my friends of the ing his uncle Andrew Sigourney, probably in 1686, lived at Oxford with those other noble exiles, until driven away by the Indians in Aug., 1696, when he saved, says tradition, that may in this case be nearer the truth than common, his cousin, Susan Johnson, whose husband and three children were then killed." [Savage.] Johnson came as an attendant of DuTuffeau. He was b. at Alveton or Alton, Staffordshire, Eng. lovely town which records so touching, beautiful and romantic a story in its annals." In another connection he says :

² In a letter dated at New London, 29 Jan., 1700, from Gov. Winthrop to Bellomont at Boston, he refers to "one Toby, formerly belonging to the Indians that live at New Roxbury, who had a particular hand in killing one Johnson, near the same town, in the last war with the Indians."—N. Y. Col. MSS., IV., 612.

"My father visited the site of the little colony in 1819 and 1825. He traced the lines of the fort, and was regaled with the perfumes of the shrubbery and the grapes then hanging in clusters on the vines planted by the Huguenots above a century before. I visited the place between twenty and thirty years ago and found many traces of the old settlement. After Plymouth, I do not think there is any locality in New England more interesting. This little band of French families, transported from the shore of the Bay of Biscay to the wilds of our New England interior, reminds me of the isolated group of magnolias which we find surrounded by the ordinary forest trees in our Massachusetts town of Manchester. It is a surprise to meet with them and we wonder how they came there, but they glorify the scenery with their tropical flowers and sweeten it with their fragrance. Such a pleasing surprise is the effect of coming upon this small and transitory abiding-place of the men and women who left their beloved and beautiful land for the sake of their religion. The lines of their fort may be obliterated, 'the perfumes of the shrubbery' may no longer be perceived, but the ground they hallowed by their footsteps is sacred, and the air around their old Oxford home is sweet with their memory."¹

This event filled the settlement with consternation, and after burying in one grave the murdered husband and "ses trois enfans," the inhabitants gathered their small stores of movables and hastened away to a place of safety.²

The Departure. Tradition says that early in the morning of their leaving—each family having bade adieu to its plantation and home—they assembled at the little church, where they had a season of worship. They afterward repaired to the burying-ground to take leave of the graves of departed friends, and thence in a procession, moved onward over the rough forest road, toward Boston.

Second Settlement. As early as the spring of 1699, eight or ten families returned and occupied their plantations. But of the fortunes of the second colony we know little. The facts however set forth in the citations which follow, indicate clearly that with the rum traffic with the resident natives and the plottings of the neighboring tribes, there could have been but very little of growth or quiet.

² The news of this disaster spread speedily through the Province, and a band of 12 soldiers from Worcester, accompanied by 38 friendly Indians, hastened to the protection of the frontier towns of Oxford and Woodstock. The woods were ranged for days, and some fresh tracks were found at a place called Half-way River north of the French settlement. Captain Daniel Fitch, the leader of the expedition, made a report to Lieut. Gov. Stoughton, and asked for a supply of provisions and ammunition in order that the search might be pursued. It does not appear that any clue to the perpetrators was discovered. Lincoln's Hist. of Worcester, p. 37.

This Half-way River was undoubtedly the Maanexit, which is about midway between Boston and Springfield. Sixty years or more ago, George Alverson while ploughing on the Intervale near the river on the land of Luther Stone, N. Gore, turned up a brass kettle, a draught chain and a mattock, which had evidently been a very long time buried, and which it is thought the marauders may have taken with them from the scene of the murder and finding them cumbersome secreted them here.

Laborie Memorial. A petition of the second Minister, James Laborie, in behalf of the settlers, dated Oct. 1, 1699, is as follows:¹

"James Laborie tou his Excellencie and tou the Honorable Council."

"MY LORD AND MOST HONORABLE COUNCIL."

"Mr. Bondet, formerly minister of this town, not only satisfied to leave us almost two years before the Indians did commit any act of hostility in this place, but carried away all the books which had been given for the use of the plantation, with the acts and papers of the village, we most humbly supplicate your Excellency and the most Honorable Council to oblige Mr. Bondet to send back again said books, acts and papers belonging to said plantation.

"The inhabitants, knowing that all disturbance that hath been before in this plantation, have happened only that some people of this plantation did give the Indians drink without measure, and that at present there is some continuing to do the same, we most humbly supplicate your Excellency and Honorable Council to give to Mr. James Laborie, our minister, full order to hinder these disturbances which put us in great danger of our lives. The said inhabitants also complain against John Ingall, that not only he gives to said Indians drink without measure, but buy all the meat they bring, and goes and sell it in other villages, and so hinders the inhabitants of putting up any provisions against the winter. We most humbly supplicate your Excellency and most Honorable Council to forbid said John Ingall to sell any rroom, and to transport any meat out of the plantation that he hath bought of the Indians before the said inhabitants be provided."²

"James Laborie in his particular most humbly supplicate your Excellency and the most Honorable Council to give him a peculiar order to oblige the Indians to observe the Sabbath day, many of said Indians to whom the said Laborie hath often exhorted to piety—having declared to submit themselves to the said Laborie's exhortations if he would bring an order with him from your Excellency, or from your honorable Lieut. Governor, Mr. Stauton, or the most Honorable Council.

"Expecting these favors we shall continue to pray God for the preservation of your Excellency, and most Honorable Council" etc.

"JAMES LABORISH."

Endorsed—"Lre written 1st X br 99 w'th a proclama'con for the observance of the Sabbath day inclosed."³

The action of the authorities on this petition does not appear.

Laborie to Bellomont. The following, addressed to Earl Bellomont, indicates that a certificate of the inhabitants had been required in reference to the charges against Bondet. The writer then opens the subject of the intrigues of the natives.

"At New Oxford this 17 June, 1700.

"My Lord: When I had the honor to write to your Excellency, I did not send the certificate of our inhabitants with reference to Monsieur Bondet,

In the Council Records, p. 95, we find—"Advised and consented that his Excellency issue forth his warrant to Mr. Treasurer, to pay forty shillings unto John Ingall, sent with an express from Oxford, bringing the news, 7 Feb., 1699."

We infer that Ingall was trader in Oxford, bringing goods from Boston, dealing with colonists and Indians, and that with the latter rum was a leading article in exchange for wild meats, furs, etc.

³ Mass. Arch., II., 140.

for the reason they were not all here, I have at length procured it, and send it to your Excellency. As to our Indians, I feel constrained to inform your Excellency that the four who came back, notwithstanding all the protestations which they made to me upon arriving, had no other object in returning than to induce those who had been faithful, to depart with them. They have gained over the greater number, and to-day they leave for Penikook, twenty-five in all—men, women, and children. I preached to them yesterday in their own tongue. From all they say, I infer that the priests are vigorously at work, and that they are hatching some scheme which they will bring to light so soon as they find a favorable occasion.

Reports widely circulated that the King of England intended to cut them off, and at another time that it was his purpose to disarm them, aroused the hostility of the Indians and they engaged earnestly in executing the designs of the Canadians. The intrigue was busily prosecuted with the Wabquassetts with the hope that they through their chief men would succeed in winning over their neighbors, the Mohegans, who had continued the fast friends of the English.

Toby's Movements. For several years after the massacre, Toby, who had removed northward, was a very active agent in this work and brought to the Nipmuck, Wabquasset and Mohegan tribes much wampum for the purpose of influencing them to combine against the English.¹ On 1 Feb., 1700, Black James gave the information :

“He being in the woods a hunting came to a place near Massomuck [Pomfret], to a great wigwam of five fire places, and eleven hunting Indians, . . . the next morning they went out and called this James and bid him come and see the wampom they had gathered; he asked what that wampom was for, they said it was Mohawk's wampom; the Dutchman had told them that the English had ordered to cut off all Indians, and they had the same news from the french, and therefore we are gathering and sending wampom to all Indians, that we may agree to cutt off the English; and Cawgatwo [of Wabquasset] told this James that Toby brought that wampom and that news from the Mohawks.”²

On 3 Feb., 1700, a squaw, Spuna, gave information that two strange Indians, one of whom was Toby “a great man or Cap'n,” were two days at Wabquasset “consulting how they might come down upon the English and friendly Indians” and that the Wabquassetts agreed to go in February to Pennacook, with wives and children.

Mr. Sabin. On 28 Feb., Bellomont wrote to the Lords of Trade, London, saying that Mr. Sabin [of Woodstock] was at Boston “the past week, having come by night that it might not be known to his Indian neighbors,” that he was under great terror and apprehension having learned through “Owenico” the Mohegan Chief that the Governor of Canada through his “cunning men” was instigating a plot to cut off the English.

In another connection Sabin said, “The Indians are drawn off and gone eastward and some . . . being sent to recall them and having discoursed with the Sachem of the Pennacook about the aforesaid combination . . . he told him that he had the longest bow that ever was in New England, it reached from Penobscot to the Mohawk Country," meaning that all Indians were in the plot.

In June, 1700, French Protestants at Boston represented to the Court that they had "been at great charges" in maintaining the poor of New Oxford, "who by the occasion of the war withdrew themselves, and since that they have assisted many who returned to Oxford in order to resettlement."¹

Bellomont to Lords of Trade. On 9 July, 1700, Bellomont wrote :—

"The Indians about the town of Woodstock and New Oxford, consisting of about 40 families have lately deserted their houses and corn, and are gone to live with the Penicook indians, which has much alarmed the English thereabouts, and some of the English have forsaken their houses and farms and removed to towns for better security. That the Jesuits have seduced these 40 families is plain from several accounts I have received, some whereof I now send . . . Labourie's letter to me is very plain evidence that French Jesuits debauched those Indians . . . Mr. Sabin is so terrified . . . that he has thought fit to forsake his dwelling and is gone to live in a town. All the thinking people here believe the Eastern Indians will break out against the English in a little time."²

Queen Anne's War. In May, 1702, England declared war against France, initiating the contest known as Queen Anne's War, thus giving an additional incentive to hostilities, which was eagerly improved by the French Governor of Canada, and the Indian tribes were stirred up afresh to engage in their atrocious warfare. Bernon became fearful for Oxford, and called upon Dudley, who had then recently come to the Governor's chair, for aid and protection, who replied as follows :—

"Herewith I send you a commission for Captain of New Oxford. I desire you forthwith to repair thither and show your said commission, and take care that the people be armed, and take them in your own house with a palisade, for the security of the inhabitants; and if they are at such a distance . . . that there should be need of another place to draw them together in case of danger, consider of another proper house and write me, and you shall have order therein.

"I am your humble servant,

"J. DUDLEY."³

"July 7, 1702."

² N. Y. Col. MSS., IV., 684. The Pennacooks inhabited the Connecticut valley about the site of Concord, N. H., and were largely under the influence of the Canadian Jesuits, and received presents from them, notably silver crosses as ornaments, and through them the tribes in this vicinage, who thought the religion of the Pennacooks finer than that of the Huguenots, were prejudiced against the latter, and were induced to remove northward. Baird, II., 285.

³ Bernon came to Oxford and had his commission read according to his instructions, assuring the people that he did not look on them as soldiers but as friends. From the tone of his letter to Dudley later he seems to have approved of what had been done, but still was solicitous as to the safety of the colony and suggested that in case of further trouble Providence should send succor, and names Captain Arnold and Lieut. Wilkinson as persons to be relied on for efficient aid. Ibid., 288.

Perry to Dudley. In a letter of John Perry to Gov. Dudley, Brookfield, 4 Jan., 1703, he says:—

“We have a few rambling Indians frequenting our place whose words & carriage is such as gives reason to suspect them to be evil minded men and disposed to mischief . . . Their names the one is Joseph Ninnequabon, who was the man the last year that received a wampum belt of our Enemies, and presented it to the Moheggs to ingage them in a war with us, for which the Authority imprisoned said Ninnequabon many weeks, the then plott being discovered by our Moheeken friends, that storm went over. . . . It is said that Ninnequabon was bred & born at New Roxbury . . . [He names Black James and] another Indian whose name is Moamaug, who told Mr. Buroe a french gentleman [Francois Bureau, an Oxford Huguenot], that he had been at Canada this last summer, and the french had given him a gun, a coat and a hatchet, to ingage him against the English. These Indians are designed to draw off norward to be out of your Excellency's reach: for they are informed that your Excellency desires to settle them, which they declare against.”¹

Soldiers. From the Council records, p. 509, we learn that 13 soldiers, one a sergeant, were here for protection in the summer of 1703. The Bernon papers show business transactions here in 1704. The same year Laborie removed to New York. No further mention of the settlement appears in the records.

The Frontier Attacked. In 1704 the long threatened stroke came upon the frontier towns of Massachusetts, and hundreds of the inhabitants were barbarously cut off. On 29 Feb., by the French and Indians, the fearful blow was struck at Deerfield. “This affair,” says Mr. Temple, “paralyzed temporarily our Hampshire County settlements and was the predominant factor of Brookfield history [and Oxford as well] for that year.”²

Oxford Abandoned. The condition of Oxford at this period may be readily inferred, and it is not in the least surprising that its inhabitants some time in 1704 bade a final adieu to their plantations and again sought a refuge in the friendly towns on the coast.

Huguenot Character. We have not space for eulogy nor is it required. Many a glowing tribute has already been paid to this people. Michelet says:—

“Their flight was a noble act of loyalty and sincerity. It is glorious for human nature that so many for truth's sake should have sacrificed every thing in a flight so perilous and difficult; some see in these people only obstinate sectaries, I see in them people of lofty ideas of honor, who over all the earth have proved themselves to have been the élite of France.”

The value of their influence upon American character and institutions cannot be estimated. In politics, in religion, in the arts and manufactures, and specially in social and domestic life and the finer amenities which mark an advanced civilization we are greatly their debtors. Among the array of brilliant names in our country's history “none stand higher than those which from their foreign cast indicate a descent" from the Huguenots. As with the Pilgrims, loyalty to God and the truth was the first grand principle by which they were actuated.

. "They felt
And did acknowledge, wheresoe'er they moved,
A spiritual Presence,
. a high dependance, a divine
Bounty and government that filled their hearts
With joy and gratitude, and fear and love;
And from their fervent lips drew hymns of praise
With which the desert rung.
Beyond their own poor nature, and above
They looked: were humbly thankful for the good
Which the warm sun solicited—and earth
Bestowed: were gladsome—and their moral sense
They fortified with reverence for the Gods.
And they had hopes which overstepped the grave."

Worship. Their form of worship was simple yet impressive. They were well versed in the scriptures, and excelled in music, having a translation of the Psalms and the hymns of Beza and Marot—called the French Watts—set to the sweet harmonies of Goudamel, an early French composer, and followed a liturgy modelled by John Calvin, which had been long used in their native land. Dr. Baird gives something of their mode of Sabbath worship: First, several chapters of the Bible were read by a lecteur (who was also precentor or chorister) closing with the ten commandments; then began a service by the pastor, an invocation, and an invitation to prayer and general confession, the congregation the while standing; next came the singing of a psalm by the congregation, seated. "This was the people's part,—the song in a ritual without other audible responses, and all the Huguenot fervor broke out in those strains that had for generations expressed the faith and religious joy of a persecuted race." After a short extempore prayer came the sermon, and after that general supplications, closing with the Lord's Prayer and the apostles' creed. The benediction followed, with the word of peace. Their form of Church government appears to have been as simple as their worship, as the pastor, with the elders, elected by the membership, controlled all the interests of the body.¹

own elders, by whom they were in turn governed. . . . The body of believers settling at a certain place constituted themselves into a church, elected their elders and chose some minister, if they could get one, for their pastor. Sometimes it would seem the ministers 'conformed' while the churches did not. At least Pierre Daillé had submitted to Episcopal ordination at the hands of the Bishop of London, while the church to which he ministered, at Boston, was not 'conformable to the Church of England.'" Baird, Hug. Em. to Am., II., 236.

Personal. GABRIEL BERNON, as has been seen, was the capitalist and chief guardian of the material interests of the place, although he never resided here. He came to Boston in 1688, remaining until 1697, and removed to Rhode Island. He was a worthy and honorable man, and in France as well as in Canada, where he for a time resided, a wealthy and influential merchant, but his ventures in New England were unfortunate, and those in Oxford a source of great perplexity and pecuniary loss. Dr. Baird says he was, perhaps, the most remarkable of the Huguenots who came to America after the Revocation. He was a leading merchant of La Rochelle with a large foreign trade, especially with Canada. While living at Quebec he was considered the principal French merchant of the city, and was a generous benefactor of the colony. He was firm in his religious opinions, and a special object of the enmity of the priests, who were bent on his ruin. The governor wrote "It is a pity he cannot be converted. As he is a Huguenot the bishop wants me to order him home, which I have done." It was recantation or ruin. He reached home in the height of the persecution and was thrown into prison where he continued several months, but was released, perhaps through the influence of his Catholic brothers. He sold his property and in May or June, 1686, fled to Amsterdam, and the next February to London. His only son Gabriel died at sea about 1706. The descendants of his daughters are now among the prominent families of Providence.

DANIEL BONDET. Of the pastor who for eight or nine years guided and fed his little flock in this wilderness of New Oxford, not much can now be known. He was of a noble family in France, his mother having been a daughter of Philippe de Nautonnier, Sieur de Castelfranc. His wife was "a most virtuous lady of a ducal family." He was not only the minister of the French Church, but was also a missionary to the Nipmucks under the auspices of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in New England, and preached in three languages, English, French and Indian.¹ He left Oxford before the breaking up of the first colony in a manner apparently not altogether creditable; resided in Boston two years, removed to New York and was pastor of a French Church at New Rochelle, where he died in 1722. His letter to the authorities on the rum traffic in New Oxford, previously quoted, and that to Lord Cornbury at New York, given below, show us somewhat of his spirit, and the difficulties he encountered in the discharge of his duties.

[NEW ROCHELLE, 1702.]

"MY LORD. I most humbly pray your Excellency to be pleased to take cognizance of the petitioner's condition. I am a French Refugee Minister, incorporated into the body of the Ministry of the Anglican Church. I removed about fifteen years ago into New England, with a company of poor refugees to whom lands were granted for their settlement, and to provide for my subsistence I was allowed one hundred and five pieces per annum, from the funds of the Corporation for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Savages. I performed that duty during nine years with a success approved and attested by those who presided over the affairs of that Province. The murders which the Indians committed in those countries caused the dispersion of our company, some of whom fell by the hands of the barbarians. I remained after that two years in that Province expecting a favorable season for the re-establishment of affairs; but after waiting two years seeing no appearance and being invited to this Province of New York by Col. Heathcote who always evinces an affection for the public good and distinguishes himself by a special application for the advancement of religion and good order by the establishment of churches and schools, and the fittest means to strengthen and encourage the people, I complied with his request, and that of the company of New Rochelle in this Province where I passed five years on a small allowance promised me by New Rochelle, of one hundred pieces and lodging, with that of one hundred and five pieces which the Corporation continued to me until the arrival of my Lord Bellomont, who, after indicating his willingness to take charge of me and my canton, ordered me thirty pieces in the Council of York, and did me the favor to promise me that, at his journey to Boston, he would procure me the continuation of that stipend that I had in times past. But having learned at Boston through M. Nanfan, his Lieutenant, that I annexed my signature to an ecclesiastical certificate which the churches and pastors of this Province had given to Sieur Delius minister of Albany, who had not the good fortune to please his late lordship, his defunct Excellency cut off his thirty pieces which he had ordered me in his Council at York, deprived me of the Boston pension of twenty-five pieces, writing to London to have that deduction approved and left me during three years last past in extreme destitution of the means of subsistence.

"I believe, my Lord, that in so important service as that in which I am employed, I ought not to discourage myself, and that the Providence of God which does not abandon those who have recourse to his aid by well doing, would provide in its time for my relief.

"Your Excellency's equity, the affection you have evinced to us for the encouragement of those who employ themselves constantly and faithfully in God's service, induce me to hope that I shall have a share in the dispensation of your justice, to relieve me from my suffering, so that I may be aided and encouraged to continue my service in which by duty and gratitude I shall continue with my flock to pray God for the preservation of your person, of your illustrious family, and the prosperity of your government.

"Remaining your Excellency's humble and most respectful servant,

"DANIEL BONDET."¹

This letter was referred to Col. Heathcote, who after investigation reported that Bondet's representations were in the main true, and that he was in New Oxford about eight years, during which time as appeared by a certificate of Lieut. Gov. Stoughton, Increase Mather and others "he with great faithfulness care & industry discharged his duty both to Xtians and Indians, and was of unblemished reputation."²

ISAAC BERTRAND DuTUFFEAU, born about 1646, styled "gentleman," was of considerable ability and fair education. Although nominally magistrate of the village, being authorized to try cases of 40 shillings and under, he is seldom named in its annals. He perhaps lived at the site of Fred L. Snow's present house, on Johnson's Plain, as his residence is named as near the Johnson house.¹ He was of New Rochelle, 1698, where he was recorder, and resigned with credit in 1702. Bernon in his petition to Gov. Shute says, "DuTuffeau, being through poverty obliged to abandon said Plantation, sold his cattle and other movables . . . went to London, and there died in a hospital."

ANDRÉ SIGOURNEY was perhaps the most influential resident layman of the place.² He was of mature age, familiar with business routine, and as constable was the right arm of the law, having to an extent the oversight of the civil affairs of the village, and the tradition that he exercised authority at the fort is not improbable. We find no evidence of his owning land in that vicinity. He imported commodities for the colony as a bill of lading of plants and nursery stock in his name in the possession of a descendant fifty years ago proved. The only member of his family who figures in the history of the settlement was his daughter Suzanne, the wife of Johnson. He returned to Boston and there died 16 April, 1727, aged 89.³

JAMES LABORIE, the minister of the second colony, on leaving went to New York City as successor of Rev. Pierre Peiret, officiating from 1704 to 1706, when he was discharged by the Consistory.⁴

FRANCOIS BUREAU, styled "gentleman," was of a noble family in Rochelle. His eldest daughter Anne became the wife of Benjamin Faneuil, and mother of the noted Peter Faneuil of Boston. He removed to New York after the desertion of the Oxford colony.⁵

Of BOURDILLE (?) there is no mention in the records, but his connection with the place is attested by Dea. Ebenezer Humphrey, who informed Hon. Ira M. Barton that he was a blacksmith and lived near the old mill on the 40-acre lot taken up by his father, Ebenezer Humphrey, as one of the English settlers. The deacon's mother once told him that she saw Bourdille after his return to Boston, and that he pleasantly told her that he was coming back to Oxford to claim his farm.⁶

RENÉ GRIGNON, partner with Bernon in the Chamoiserie, was also of the first colony, returned to Boston after the final abandonment and later resided at Norwich, was master of a vessel, and afterward a goldsmith. He was a liberal and esteemed citizen, and gave to the part of their effects to a vessel in the harbor. On a certain holiday they provided a sumptuous dinner for the soldiers quartered upon them, and in the midst of the festivities left unobserved and hastened on board the vessel which soon took them safely to England. Ibid., I., 325.

town a bell long known as the Grignon bell. Tradition, probably ill-founded, says it once hung in the tower of the French Church in Oxford. Grignon, Guillaume Barbut, Thomas Mousset and Jean Millet, all of the Oxford colony, were later elders in the French Church at Boston. The following, according to Dr. Baird, were also of the Oxford company: Jean Germon or Germaine of Tremblade, Charles Germon, Paix Cassaneau or Cazneau of Languedoc, Elie Dupeux of Port des Barques, wife Elizabeth and four children, Jean Martin of Saintonge, wife Anne, two children, Jean and Francois, born at Oxford, later of N. Rochelle, Jean Baudoin, lived later in Virginia, Jacques Depont, nephew of Bernon, later lived in Connecticut, Pierre Canton, miller or trader.

Others were Alard, Baudrit, Jean Dupeu, Montier, Depont, Cornilly, Mourgue, Thibaud, Maillet, Montel, Cante, Boutineau.

Industries. The line of industries was narrow. Agriculture as the means of subsistence was of course the chief occupation. Business projects were, however, initiated through the enterprise of Bernon, one of which was the production of naval stores, pitch, tar, etc., from the forests, for the London market. He crossed the sea in 1693 to promote this scheme and made sales in spite of much opposition, and in 1696 repeated his visit, when being befriended by Lord Bellomont his appointment as Superintendent of the Manufacture in America was strongly urged before the Board of Trade, but failed, the policy of the government being to discourage colonial industries.

Hat making was a specialty with the French people. They "alone possessed the secret of a liquid composition to prepare rabbit, hare and beaver skins." The dressing of chamois skins and the making of gloves were also among the arts in which they excelled.¹ Oxford in 1703 had its "Chamoiserie," or "Wash-leather Mill," at or near the upper location, in which René Grignon and Jean Papineau were partners with Bernon, from which dressed skins were sent to the hatters in Boston and Newport. In a consignment August, 1703, were otter, beaver, raccoon, deer and other skins valued at £44.²

Relics. Relics of the colony still exist, as the fort and the dam, raceway, etc., of the upper mill. The fort was an enclosure about 105 by 75 feet, built of the rough surface stones, without mortar, the wall being surmounted, as supposed, by logs in which were loopholes for defence. Within were a house, a well and other appliances for the convenience of a garrison. Through the instrumentality of the Huguenot Memorial Society of Oxford a large quantity of débris, chiefly stones, which had been accumulating for many years was in 1884 removed from these ruins, which brought to light the cellar of the house, the chimneys and other details of the original structure.

In a description of the place contributed to Dr. Baird's memorial, Mr. William D. Ely says :—

"The main block-house was thirty feet long and eighteen feet wide, with a double-walled cellar twenty-four feet long by twelve feet wide, and about six feet deep. The inner walls supported the floor beams; the outer wall three feet from this was made of heavy boulders, on a foundation about three feet deep and supported the logs forming the walls of the house. . . . After two days' work in digging . . . the workmen came upon the top of a covered drain seventy feet long . . . most of it in good condition, though choked at the upper end. . . . The main fire place was in the middle of the north side of the house, it was nearly ten feet wide at the opening . . . The broad foundation supporting it and the chimney, almost wholly outside the house, gave ample room . . . for an oven besides. A smaller fire place was on the opposite side. Attached to the main house was an annex sixteen by fourteen feet without a cellar . . . in its northwest corner a flight of steps led to the main cellar. On the east side was a wide foundation . . . for a fire place and chimney extending five feet . . . from the house.

"In the rear of the annex and doubtless opening into it was a separate log house twelve feet square . . . near the centre of the fort and was used, it would seem, for arms and stores. Beneath it was an underground chamber about six feet deep . . . walled in a circular form which was evidently the magazine." [The main enclosure] "was a substantial structure, scientifically planned, and strongly built . . . It was a complete quadrangular fort of two bastions, with a fire flanking every face; while the main bastion at the southwest angle more fully developed than that at the northeast, also enfiladed an outer breast work and ditch, extending westerly from it for a distance of six rods. This breast work was clearly the south line of a stockade . . . protecting the main approach on the west side as well as cattle and chattels too bulky to be brought within the fort, . . . a drive way for carts was made through the wall on the west side . . . not far from the drive way are broad stones said to have been steps . . . for those who went on foot," etc.

A description given ten years since recites :—

"Many years ago the walls of the structure were removed down to the foundation stones, excepting on the south line, where parts of the original wall may be seen, but which is mainly a confused mass three or four feet high, overgrown with wild grape-vines and bushes, among which are cinnamon roses, currants and asparagus, believed to be the remains of the garden which flourished in the vicinity at the time of the occupation."

Mrs. Lee, quoting from the manuscript of John Mayo, says :—

"There was a garden outside the fort on the west, containing asparagus, grapes, plums, cherries and gooseberries. There were more than ten [two?] acres cultivated about the fort."

Mrs. L. H. Sigourney said of the plants : "They were living tokens of the loved clime whence they were exiled."

This mass of stones of the southern wall with all its suggestive "shrubby" has been removed.¹

The Mill. The following description of the remains at the upper mill is from "The Huguenots in the Nipmuck Country" :—

"The most complete memento of the extinct colony is at the site of the upper mill, one mile easterly from the main street. It is in the midst of a small meadow which is skirted by wooded uplands, and so shut in by trees and wild undergrowth as to be hidden from the casual observer. Here the substantial dam, about 60 feet in length, both wall and embankment, stands almost entire,—a deep trench to convey the water from the pond to the mill-wheel, a distance of 75 feet, is distinctly to be seen,—the position of the mill can be fixed,—and the raceway, running from the wheel about 100 feet to the stream below, seems to have been but recently made, so little has it been obstructed.”¹

The Garden. A third memorial, a spot of much natural beauty, exists on the Mayo farm in the woods about 100 rods south of the fort. Here the ground suddenly falls off to the southward at a high ledge of rocks, which forms a covert for a sunny nook in which are the remains of an old garden. From the top is a fine view several miles in extent, embracing parts of the waters of Chaubunagungamaug. The place was cultivated by the Mayo family in the last century and was known as the “French Garden,” and the “Vineyard.”² Its principal shelter is a straight, even faced, almost perpendicular cliff of about 30 feet in height and nearly 100 in length running northeast and southwest, under which is a plot of about 30 square rods, originally wild and rocky, which has been enclosed, subdued and cultivated. A large part of the surrounding wall—from two to three feet high—is now standing. At the east end, near the cliff, are two well preserved terraces of about a square rod each, made by filling between the larger rocks and walled at the outer side. Sequestration is here so complete that the work has been well preserved. Larger gardens, as we have seen, existed around the fort, but the exposed situation was unfavorable for the growth of other than hardy plants, and among the exotics imported there must have been some which could exist and thrive only in a sheltered position. This place, near at hand on Bernon’s land, was well adapted to the purpose, and was doubtless a cherished spot where were nursed the choicest mementos of the far away home land.

Bernon’s Troubles. Although the breaking up of the colony was a severe blow to Bernon he did not relinquish his hopes, but employed one Cooper and a “negro Tom” to occupy his lands and hold possession, it having been a condition of the grant that forfeiture should follow desertion. Samuel Hagburn was also here as manager for his

A short distance below the old dam, on the northern border of the meadows, may now be seen portions of a ditch by means of which water was formerly taken from near the mill site down stream, perhaps 100 rods, for the purpose of irrigation. A document on record dated 7 June, 1748, recites “that John Willson, Jr., Thomas Hunkins and Capt. Elijah Moore, owners of these meadows, then entered into an agreement under a penalty of £500, to maintain each his proportion of this channel. Willson’s share was £10. 8d., Hunkins’ £13. 7s. 8d., and Moore’s £16. 7s. 8d., these sums making nearly £40, having been expended on the project.”

half-brother, the governor. On 20 May, 1707, Dudley wrote to Bernon as follows :—

"SR: I am very unhappy in my affayres at Oxford, both with your Cooper & the negro Tom. I must desire you to take other care of your affayres than to improve such ill men that disquiet the place, that I have more trouble with them than with seven other towns. If you do not remove them yourself, I shall be obliged to send for the Negro & turn him out of the place, & I understand Cooper is so criminal that the law will dispose of him. I pray you use your own there not to Destroy or Disturb the Governour or your best friend, who is, Sr, your humble servt.

"J. DUDLEY.

"Send an honest man and he shall be welcome. I pray you to show what I write to Mr. Grignon.

"To Mr. Gabriel Bernon, Newport, Road Island."

Soon after, as appears, Bernon came to Oxford and "bargained with and let unto" Oliver Collier and Nathaniel Collier his house and farm called the "old mill," for five years.

On 1 March, 1710, Bernon writes thus to Dudley—[translation] :—

"Mr. Dudley, your son told me the last time I had the honor to see him that it was your Excellency's design to re-establish New Oxford; as it also appears through the public news.

"I hope your Excellency will be so good as to take into consideration the fact that Mr. Hoogborn has done his utmost to ruin my interest in the said Oxford. He has caused Cooper to abandon the old mill, and Thomas Allerton my other house, threatening that he would hinder them from haying, and [declaring] that I had no power to settle them. When I made complaint of this to him he told me that he would drive me from the place myself. Thus it is that I have been treated after spending at the said Oxford more than fifteen hundred pistoles [and], the better part of my time during more than twenty years possession.

"Should it please your Excellency to examine the case you will find that I have chiefly at heart the furtherance of your Excellency's wishes. I have been found singularly attached to your person, more than to all else that I have had in the world.

"It is notorious that the said Mr. Hoogborn, your brother, has caused the planks of my granary to be torn up; that he has conveyed them elsewhere, and that by his orders the oxen that I reserved to be fattened have been put to work."

Bernon had neither courage or tact to contend with this opposition, and gracefully yielded, as appears from the following to the Governor, dated 19 April, 1710 :—

"Your Excellency, always benevolently disposed, informs me that you purpose to obtain for me a good price for one-half of that which I own in the village of Oxford. I wish to defer entirely to your counsel. Accordingly I will proceed to Boston as soon as possible to pay my respects to your Excellency."¹

These expectations were never realized. There is no further record until the date of the proclamation in 1712.

Mill. Almost the first want of the English settlement was a mill. Through Dudley's influence, doubtless, Bernon in 1715 gave the old mill-stones and irons to Daniel Eliott, on condition that he should build a mill for the town. Upon which Dudley writes, 6 April, 1715, "We are now in a way to thrive at Oxford," thanks him for his gift, and desires him to write Eliott to finish the mill as agreed "or order the said mill-stones and irons to be given to such other person as will go forward with the work that they be not starved the next winter." Bernon complied and the town soon had a mill.¹

Bernon's Title. Up to this date Dudley had failed to complete his conveyance to Bernon who consequently had no legal title to his land. He had indeed, with ceremony, been "put in possession," he had bestowed great effort and much money upon the two earlier colonies, he had been sorely tried in his transactions with agents and tenants, and vigilant in retaining possession, which he was relying upon as ground of ownership as his many allusions to it indicate. Squatters, believing perhaps he had no legal rights, settled on his estate greatly annoying him, and now as his last effort to further his interests he had given the valuable mill-stones and irons to the town. All he was able to do apparently for the benefit of Oxford had been done. At this date after twenty-eight years of waiting upon Mr. Dudley, and after his hopes had again and again been disappointed, that gentleman completed the execution of the document on 5 Feb., 1716, and passed it over to him.

Disputed Tract. But Bernon's troubles were not yet at an end. The town as a corporation evidently conceded his rights to the 2,500 acres, as is shown by repeated action. But the point of dispute was the 500 acres additional, on which Bernon had expended most of his money, but which was not included in Dudley and company's deed. This was a long narrow gore lying between the 2,500-acre tract and the village land, measuring 125 rods on the south and 584 rods on the west line, and on it stood the fort with much improved ground about it, the upper mill with one or two houses near, and other improvements. His efforts to sell were vain because of the unsettled question of ownership.²

Bernon's Petition. In Nov., 1720, he made application to the Colonial authorities for relief, stating that he had "spent above 2,000 pounds to defend the same from the Indians and had built a corn miln, a wash leather miln and a saw miln" and done considerable more to improve the town, and asking that his title might be confirmed. He represented "that Oxford inhabitants disputed his right and title in order to hinder him from the sale of said plantation." He desired to obtain such title as would confirm to him the said lands "without any misunderstanding, clear and free from any molestation either from the inhabitants of New Oxford or any pretensions of Bertrand DuTuffeau."¹ Letter. To supplement this application he addressed Oct., 1720, the son of Gov. Dudley, entreating his assistance, as the people of New Oxford "opposed his rights to lands." He says:—

² A plan of Mr. Bernon's Oxford lands is among his papers, on which is endorsed a certificate of the Selectmen of Oxford, 11 Jan., 1717, estimating its value at £1,000. This plan includes the disputed tract.

"The Court and Government can confirm my title, and I can then dispose of what I have there. . . . The above said inhabitants oppress me as I can make it appear by Maj. Buor who would have bought my plantation. The inhabitants told him not to do it;—that my title was nothing worth, that they also pretended that they would dispute my title with Mr. Dudley and Mr. Thompson. They also abused me in a very outrageous manner in Maj. Buor's presence; as he states in his certificate." . . . "Ephraim Town, John Elliott, and John Chamberlin for whom I have advanced considerably to uphold my said plantation, will not pay me what they owe me."² Besides the loss of my servant who was drowned, was fifty pounds loss to me. These men and one Josiah Owen, my last tenant, hugger-mugger together to cheat me out of a hundred pounds in cattle and movables that I had upon the place so that I am not able to advance any more." "I see myself about ruined by this oppression and malice."

"Sir—You are perfectly acquainted with the affairs at New Oxford, and I do not understand things as well as I would. Therefore I entreat of you Sir to help me. Your charity and generosity are (so to speak) interested in it. I am so hard driven by my dunning creditors—the masons and carpenters and others that I employed to build my house in Providence, that I know not what to do; and, besides my wife now lying in, six or seven children implore my compassion, which makes me implore that of Government and yours, Sir, that my title may be confirmed, after a possession of 36 years, so that I may sell it. Within 30 years I have laid out on it £200, for which reason my family did slight me, as well as my best friends. I have always been protected by Mr. Dudley, your honored father, who always thought as I did that I might sell it, and not be in anywise molested. But I don't know whether it won't be a mistake. Indeed one cannot always foresee the events of things, often hid from the wisest. But this I see—the Evil one still reigns, and God suffers it, to try his children. My great desire is to keep myself in the fear of God, and to love my neighbor, and to seek lawful means to maintain my family. My great age of nearly 80 years does not dispense me of this duty. I address myself to you with all humility to assist me, that I may be assisted by the Governor. Such a testimony of your love and favor will rescue me, to terminate my days in America, or to return once again to Europe. Surely my going or staying depends upon the action of the Assembly. But be it as it will, Sir, as an honest, well-minded man ought, I pray for the Government, and all the faithful in Christ.

"GABRIEL BERNON."

Bernon's Sale. We have no evidence that favorable action was taken on this application. A few months later Bernon sold his rights as before stated, the purchasers doubtless having full knowledge of the circumstances. In conveying the property he gave a title to the

² Ephraim Town and John Chamberlin were among the thirty English proprietors and John Elliott was the son of Daniel, another of the same.

2,500 acres only, but the purchasers took possession of the disputed tract and settled upon it.

Town Action. Almost immediately after the sale the proprietors of the village held a meeting to consider the matter and "to act as shall be thought best to come at their own rights," and chose Dea. John Town, Benoni Twitchel and Isaac Larned to act as committee to establish the lines. This committee obtained the services of John Chandler as surveyor, and the matter was settled by a compromise. Davis and Mayo retained the disputed tract with its improvements and released to the village a portion of the north end of the premises lying on Long Hill. The report of the committee was accepted and the controversy ended.

Proclamation. On 12 April, 1712, was issued the following:—
PROCLAMATION.

"We the under written with other owners and proprietors of the lands at Oxford in the neepmug country granted to us by the general assembly of the Massachusetts colony, and since otherwise ratified and confirmed to ourselves in the Kingdom of Great Britain, having long time determined and surveyed ten or twelve thousand acres for a village and settlement of inhabitants and accordingly established a number of French Famalyes, Refugees, who have since deserted the place whereby all improvements are lost which is a detriment to the province as well as to ourselves in the hope of our own private advantage, by our other lands—do hereby agree and offer to thirty English families that shall settle there to give grant and confirm to them all the lands of the said village containing the said ten thousand acres, except what is already granted to Mr. Bernon which is ——— acres, to be laid out to them, first a quantity of it in house lots not exceeding forty acres a family, and after the rest in proper divisions as they may agree among themselves always provided they be thirty families, and in the meantime if ten families or more shall proceed forthwith within a year to settle there, they shall have their house lots set out to them, and they as they have the use of the other land meadows until the number be thirty, and then they have liberty to divide the whole. If any of the French families choose to come thither we do hereby save to ourselves liberty to establish them with other inhabitants, and Capt. Chandler the surveyor is hereby allowed to lay out lots accordingly, taking care always that he do not intrench upon the land of the proprietors.

House Lots Surveyed. Queen Anne's War continued until Oct., 1712. Meantime there was no effective movement toward a re-occupation of the deserted town. In May, 1713, quiet having been restored the surveying of house lots to settlers began. By July the requisite number was complete, and on the eighth day of that month a deed from the proprietors to the thirty English colonists was executed, conveying to them the plot called the Village.

Town Incorporation. Oxford had no formal incorporation, and its status for the first few years was in doubt in the minds of the inhabitants. On 31 July, 1716, it was voted that John Town and Ebenezer Learned "should go to y^e Court to search y^e Records to see what may be found conserning Oxford's being granted for a township, and also to petetion the Court y^t we may be made a town if it be needful." No report of this committee appears. On 7 Jan., 1717, it was voted to employ Capt. Fullam, "to manage in our behalf at Court, with a petition in order to our being granted a township." This action is proof that up to that date no act of incorporation had been passed. From the absence of all allusion to this subject later in the records we infer that special legislation was considered unnecessary.¹

In 1693 a representative to General Court was chosen, Daniel Allen, as previously noted, and his name appears as from Oxford in the official list, at the beginning of the session, 31 May of that year.²

In this act the place took upon itself legally the functions of a town, and the seating of its representative as a member of the Court was a recognition by that body of the validity of its action, and of the existence de facto of the town of Oxford.

some instances to have been equivalent to an act of Incorporation." In Gen. Court Rec., VII., 344, Jan., 1703; IX., 129, Oct., 1711, and IX., 305, Feb., 1714, Oxford is called a town.

Proprietors and Lots. The accompanying plan shows the relative location of the home lots of the settlers. These were surveyed and laid out under the direction of John Town, Benjamin Chamberlin, Abial Lamb and Benoni Twitchel, committee, by John Chandler, Jr., of Woodstock, then about 21 years of age, and by order of the original proprietors "approved and established" to the settlers by John Chandler, sen. So far as appears each settler chose his own location of a home lot.

EBENEZER LEARNED. No. 1: undoubtedly chosen with reference to the water power, "at or neare a place called y^e uper falls," now the lower privilege at North Oxford, H.² 130; embracing 44½ acres, the overplus being meadow below the falls. This quantity was allowed, perhaps, in consideration of the rough nature of the tract, it being in the narrow gorge of the river. House now standing.

DANIEL ELLIOTT. No. 2: mill lot, H. 135; 40 acres with 3 acres allowance for Worcester road through it.

DANIEL ELLIOTT, Jr. No. 3: on Town's Plain, east of 8-rod way; now John A. Taft. H. 139.

ISRAEL TOWN. No. 4: next south of preceding, opposite Town's Pond; now Mary Myrick. H. 141.

JOHN TOWN. No. 5: next south; now Joseph Stevens, H. 176; house a little northwest of present one; old well now to be seen.

JAMES COLLER. No. 6: east of North common, fronting on 8-rod way; now James B. Campbell, H. 180.

EPHRAIM and JONATHAN TOWN. No. 7: west of North common, bounding north on Town's Pond; late Jasper Brown, H. 178.

JOSHUA CHANDLER. No. 8: minor son of John Chandler—Peter Shumway settled on his rights: east side of 8-rod way, south of N. common, now Ithiel T. Johnson, H. 185; house on site of present one.

BENONI TWITCHEL. No. 9: west of 8-rod way, between the north and south commons; exact location unknown.

dences as numbered and described in a subsequent chapter under the head, "Older Homesteads."

east of 8-rod way as first laid out, H. 189; house near the site of George Miller's present residence.

NATHANIEL CHAMBERLAIN. No. 11: west of 8-rod way, from the common south to Sigourney street; H. 240; house on site of present Mrs. Hyde's.

OLIVER COLLIER. No. 12: adjoining Rockett on the south, at the northeast corner of 8-rod and Sutton roads; now Sigourney's; $53\frac{1}{2}$ rods on Main street, 120 rods on Sutton road; H. 192; house near the corner.

BENJAMIN CHAMBERLAIN. No. 13: west of 8-rod way adjoining Nathaniel Chamberlain on the south; 65 rods on Main street from Sigourney street to Quaboag Lane at the Benjamin Paine place; called 40 but in fact nearer 50 acres; H. 235.

THOMAS GLEASON. No. 14: southeast corner of Main and Sutton streets, nominally $53\frac{1}{2}$ rods (in fact more) on Main street; H. 194; house on site of present brick house.

EDMUND TAYLOR. No. 15: assigned to John Chamberlain; west of 8-rod way, from Quaboag Lane south. No record of transfer has been found. It was early in possession of Richard Moore; later most of it was included in the Abijah Davis farm; H. 220.

SAMUEL HAGBURN. No. 16: east of 8-rod way, embracing the Israel Sibley homestead; H. 205; house in rear of Sibley house.

EBENEZER HUMPHREY. No. 17: east of 8-rod way, south end of the Plain, $53\frac{1}{2}$ rods in front, extending east over the brook, including part of the present Humphrey farm; H. 36, also 208 and 209; house on site of present one, east end of the lot.

JONATHAN TILLOTSON. No. 18: south end of the Plain in three lots; first, adjoining Humphrey on the south, including the old mill, $5\frac{1}{2}$ acres; second, near the first, but on the west side of the 8-rod way; third, east of 8-rod way south from the first, near the railroad arch bridge; H. 37; house near the mill.

EBENEZER CHAMBERLAIN. No. 19: west of 8-rod way below mill brook, the northwest bound being near the brook, including $2\frac{1}{2}$ acres on Johnson's Plain; has not been for many years a homestead. January, 1717, Richard Moore was by vote allowed to represent conditionally the rights of Chamberlain, his son-in-law. The land came early into Moore's possession.

ISAAC LARNED. No. 20: on Johnson's Plain, now Fred. L. Snow's; H. 64; perhaps originally a Huguenot homestead, joining Ebenezer Chamberlain on the south; house on the site of the present one.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN. No. 21: on Bondet Hill; H. 38. "May 13, 1713, surveyed for Joseph Chamberlain Sen. Round the great house, 40 acres . . . four acres and one rood being allowed for a highway," by John Chandler, Jr., Surveyor. "Approued and established p^r order of the original proprietors prouided he pay for the bettering of his Lott by former Improvement and building p^r JOHN CHANDLER who made such an agreement at the begining."¹

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Jr. No. 22: southwest side of Bondet Hill, in part adjoining his father; now Clark's; H. 39; house at site of present one.

THOMAS HUNKINS. No. 23: near No. 22, now McCabe; H. 42. Two years later Hunkins had changed homesteads with Daniel Pearson for No. 26. In Jan., 1717, Jeremiah Morse bought of Pearson No. 23, having been voted an inhabitant.²

BENJAMIN NEALAND. No. 24: not now a homestead; east of the Humphrey place, No. 17, extending north to the meadows. He had also 8 acres west of 8-rod way near south end of the Plain.

ABIAL LAMB. No. 25: adjoining Nealand on the north, extending to Sutton road; described as beginning at the northwest corner near Gleason's lot at the highway running on said way 64 perch, then southward 23 perch to an ash tree, from thence 64 perch to Nealand's lot as was agreed to be bounded by said Lamb and Nealand. This lot contained 32 acres. Eight acres more were set off to him on the west side the 8-rod way near the south end of the Plain, north of Nealand's eight acres. William H. Harrington's present estate was included in Lamb's lot.

DANIEL PEARSON. No. 26: east of Lamb and Nealand, bounding 160 rods on their lots, and south on the road to the fort; now George R. Larned; H. 34; house on site of present one.

JOSHUA WHITNEY. No. 27: on Sutton road, east of Pearson, bounding east on Bernon land; now John E. Kimball; H. 26.

WILLIAM HUDSON. No. 28: on Long Hill northeast of N. common; H. 168; now owned by his descendants; house part of present one.

ABRAHAM SKINNER. No. 29: at the "lower falls" near Augutteback Pond, now Howarth's; H. 83.

JOHN CHANDLER, Jr. No. 30: on the stream northeast of the Eliott mill; now Asa H. Pope; H. 132. Daniel Eliott took up this lot after selling his mill lot to his son Ebenezer.

MINISTER'S LOT. A: east of the 8-rod way one-fourth of a mile northeast of the South common—long known as the Hall place; H. 187; house on site of the present one.

MEETING-HOUSE LOT. B: north of the burying ground, fronting east on 8-rod way; H. 244; held by the town as a meeting-house lot until 1752.

Proprietors' Meetings. At a meeting 13 Sept., 1713, "Uoted that peter Shumway shal com in as an inhabatent into Oxford upon the rites of Joshua Candler."³ which the late John Mayo, living near, said was once a tavern. ²See Morse.

³Joshua Chandler was brother of John, Jr., of Woodstock, surveyor, who was also a proprietor. He was at this time 17 years of age and came in as did John, Jr., probably to fill the required number of 30 settlers.

On Jan. 25, 1714, Edmund Taylor relinquished his rights in favor of Benjamin Chamberlain, who took them for his son John. "Uoted that the inhabitance of the town Should cary thaer bouends In to the town Clarke to be Recorded of every house lote." "Uoted that Ebbenezur lannard should have liberty to tacke up an house lote in Som place whear it may be, previed [provided] it mite not be a dameag to any othre parcion, to be by waye of Exchng of his lote alredeay tacken up." No change appears to have been made. "Uoted that Jonathan Town should be an inhabitant upon a part of Ephraim Town's rights."

On 2 Mar., 1714, Ebenezer Eliott, son of Daniel, was voted in as an inhabitant, he having taken the lot previously his father's, on which was the mill. He soon admitted his brother James as partner. Also voted, that the 40-acre lot called Wesson's (the only mention we find of this name, perhaps Samuel of Framingham,) should be set apart for a minister's lot. It was also voted to make a first division of land to every freeholder "containing the sum of 60 acres in one tract to every lot man" to be laid out "as soon as the meadows are laid out." On Sept. 19 a committee was chosen "to employ Capten Chandler or some other Survayer to lay out our Village lines according to deed," and to notify "Mr. Gabrel Barnon to com and Joyn with us in settling dividen lins."

Meadows. Oct. 15. Voted that those who have no meadow in their home lots shall have four acres laid out convenient to them, first. Nov. 30. "John Town, Beniemam Chamberlin Sener, benony twichell" chosen to lay out the meadow. Also voted that "Mr twichell shall take care that the woode and timber" on the minister's lot be kept until improved. The lots were drawn for meadow at this meeting. Voted "that the committy shall begin to lay out meddow att East End of the great meddow, from thence to the meddow on Ellets mill brook, from thence to the croth of the Revier [crotch of the river near Kidder's] so down strame the Rivier: to the line, from thence to bundits meddow."

Jan. 18, 1715. Daniel Eliott having assigned his home lot to his son Ebenezer, was by vote settled on the 30th lot, originally that of John Chandler, Jr. At this meeting lots were drawn for the 60-acre division of lands before ordered to be laid out, a committee was also ordered to complete the laying out of the 30 house lots, and then proceed to lay out the 60-acre divisions.

Jonathan Tillottson protested against any alienation or division of lands or meadows whatsoever until the 30 house lots were laid out.

Sept. 21, widow Hannah Cooper was accepted as an inhabitant on the rights of Joshua Whitney, who had removed to Mendon.

Feb. 28, 1716, a meeting was held by virtue of a warrant from "Mr Justice Chandler for y^e orderly dividing and disposing the Lands within y^e" town, to confirm such lands as had already been laid out, to prevent the waste of timber, and to choose a Proprietors' Clerk. Isaac Larned was chosen clerk and all former divisions of land confirmed.

Dec. 25, 1716, chose Capt. Richard Moore, Ebenezer Learned and Ephraim Town a committee "to see y^t the Bounds of our Village are Completed and put upon the County Records."

Jan. 25, 1717, Capt. Richard Moore voted "an associat" on the rights of Samuel Hagbourn, also that Joseph Danna come in upon the half right bought of Oliver Collier, also that Jeremiah Morse be received "in y^e Room of Daniel Pearson," and that John Chamberlin be received upon the rights of Edmund Taylor. Mar. 19, a two-rod road between Israel Town and Daniel Elliot recognized.

Mar. 6, 1718, "Uoted that their be Twenty acers of Land Laid out to the Ministers Lot, and forty Acres more . . . for the in Coragement of a minister." Also that there should be no more cedar timber, neither for shingles, clapboards nor rails carried out of town from that time forward, under a forfeiture of 20s. a thousand. Also "voted by the desire of Lieut [John] Town" that David Town, be an associate, on the half right bought of Oliver Collier.

Cedar Swamp. April 7, voted to lay out every house lot a second division of 60 acres in a lot . . . to be drawn for, also to lay out the cedar swamp, each proprietor an equal proportion. Also that a committee proceed to lay out another division of 50-acre lots.

Dec. 12, 1720, lots were drawn for the second 60-acre division and also for the 50-acre division.

Jan. 2, 1721, it was voted to lay out a 12-acre division, and the draft for the same was then made. Feb. 27, lots in the cedar swamp were drawn. This was the great swamp so called, in what is now Auburn, "begining at or neare y^e North End of y^e great Swamp next Wossester Corner."

Mar. 19, 1723, chose Capt. Richard Moore, Ens. Ebenezer Learned and Benoni Twichell a committee to "measure all y^e undivided land in oxford village: and to lay it out into Thirty lots as Equally as they can as to quantety and qualety, so as to draw for them after they are laid out."

Apr. 8, 1728. This committee not having performed this difficult service was dismissed, and Benoni Twichell, Dea. John Town and Isaac Learned were chosen instead.

Mar. 5, 1733. This division was as yet not completed, and Capt. Richard Moore was added to the committee and authority given to open highways in undivided lands when necessary.

Feb. 13, 1734. A committee was chosen to take care of the undivided lands to see that strip and waste was not made, or wood and timber cut and carried off, and that the laying out be completed in six months.

Sept. 21, 1741. The 12-acre division had not been completed. John Town, one of the committee, having deceased, his son Jonathan was chosen in his place. Nov. 17, a return of the 12-acre division was made in part and accepted.

In Jan., 1745, this work was still uncompleted, and even the 12-acre division was not entirely finished. At that date Israel Town and Elijah Moore were added to the former committee to complete the 12-acre lots, and likewise to apportion the remaining part of undivided lands. Aug. 30, 1748, there being several small pieces of land "not lying convenient to divide" it was voted they might be sold to defray expenses of committees in making previous divisions. According to a tradition, which seems to be confirmed by the records, the affairs of the propriety at this time were in a very confused and unsettled condition, from which no one in the town was competent, or if able, was disposed to extricate them, except Mr. Campbell the minister. The 12-acre distribution had been made, but, lying chiefly upon the eastern and western borders of the town were lots, mostly woodland, of various sizes and values, which remained to be equitably divided among the 30 householders. It is said Mr. Campbell took the matter in hand only after much solicitation. June 19, 1749, a meeting was held of which he was the moderator, at which votes were passed confirming certain lands to certain persons, "notwithstanding all former votes,"—choosing a committee to perambulate lines with the proprietors of "Gabriel Bernon's Farm (so called) and to settle and establish the same,"—and accepting of and drawing for the fifth and last division of lands.

The list of proprietors at this time is of value as showing the changes made during the first 35 years of the town's history.

Proprietors in 1749. [Those in italics were new.] William Hudson, Col. Ebenezer Learned, Timothy Harris, John Eddy, Collins Moore, Isaac Larned, Jonas Pratt, Ebenezer Humphrey, Capt. Elijah Moore, John Town [Jr.], William Eddy, John Groo, John Campbell, Jacob Cummins, Joseph Pratt, Dea. Jonathan Town, Ens. Israel Town, Peter Shumway, Abial Lamb, Jr., Benoni Twichell's heirs. Whole number 20, of whom six only were in the first division.¹

Training field. At a meeting 15 Dec., 1751, a decisive vote was passed on the subject of a "Training field," a necessity of the day. It was laid out adjoining the burying-ground on the east, and "fronted on the Eight-rod way near the old meeting house," and two acres had been voted for the purpose 4 Sept., 1749. At this meeting, however, it was "voted and determined" unanimously that one acre should be and is set off for this purpose. The record describes it as "to be set off fronting on the eight rod way and joining on Samuel Manning's north line, said acre to always lye open and common." In 1752 the proprietors voted to confirm the sale of the lot on which the old meeting-house stood to Jabez Holden, and to appropriate money to pay expenses of committees and Mr. Campbell "for his time and trouble in recording their acts and votes" in the past.

Meetings for the adjustment of various questions of possessions, compensations for roads, settlement of lines, deficiencies in measurements, and minor differences between adjoining owners were held up to 21 Mar., 1763. A meeting of the "Proprietors of the fifth or last division" of land in the Village for the purpose of correcting errors and supplying omissions in the records and also to ascertain the location of the west line of the village was held Dec., 1773, and subsequent meetings for similar purposes were continued in 1774. There was no recorded action thereafter.

Changes in Town lines. In the plot of the present town the southern and a very small portion of the eastern lines only are identical with the original outlines.

Dudley set off. The first alteration was made in Dec., 1731, when the town of Dudley was incorporated, and Mr. Dudley's 6,000 acres, excepting "Paul Dudley's farm" of 1,000 acres at the eastern extremity thereof, were set off to the new town, as shown by the lower dotted line in diagram 1.¹ [See Plans.]

Kingsburys annexed. On 8 Dec., 1731, on petition of Isaac Larned, the farms of Josiah and Theodore Kingsbury, and adjoining land of the petitioner, lying east of Woodstock road, were annexed to Oxford, as shown in diagram 2, letter K, thus extending its southern limits to the great pond.²

Manchaug farm. The next change was when "Dudley's Manchaug farm" of 1,000 acres was added on the east, as shown in diagram 2, letter D. This was the tract granted for services in purchasing land of the Indians, as previously noted. It was surveyed by John Gore, with a similar grant to William Stoughton designated by dotted lines, and confirmed to them in one plot, 4 June, 1685, at what was called "Manchange," being at the southeast corner of Oxford and adjoining it on the east.³ These lands lay in common until 1712. Josiah Chapin and John Chandler on 23 May, "viewed and measured" the same and made a division, reporting that they found the length and breadth thereof to conform to

¹ This farm of 1,000 acres, remaining in Oxford, was long known as "Dudley entailed" land. The Calvin Aldrich farm—H. 57,—William Hurd—H. 60,—and Jacob Shumway—H. 61,—and also valuable meadows on the river, now part of the Ezekiel Davis farm—H. 53,—were taken from it. An important suit at law, involving the title to these lands, was brought about 1821 to gain possession by Mr. Williams, one of the Dudley heirs, vs. Jason Phipps of Thompson. William Pinkney of Maryland was counsel for Williams, and Phipps retained Daniel Webster. The trial was in Feb., 1822, and the case was strongly contested; decision for the defendants. Pinkney died a day or two after the trial.

³ Col. Rec., V., 488. In the act it is described as "conteyning 1,800 acres, with allowance of addition of 200 more next adjoining, to compleat the same to 2,000 acres . . . in the Nipmug Country at a place called Marichouge—the lyne being marked with raifging markes in the corners with S. D."

According to the earliest plan in Oxford records Manchaug Farm measured 674 rods by 424 rods—considerably short of 2,000 acres—including both Stoughton's and Dudley's shares. A plan made after 1731 gives "Manchaug Farm" 1,100 acres belonging to "the heirs of Mr. Dudley," and "belonging to Oxford." A plan made 1756 gives 1,020 acres in Oxford belonging to Thomas Dudley, and adjoining it on the east, the balance of the plot in Sutton, "now Richard Waters' and others."

Gore's survey, but that they were "wanting in complement." They consequently added 81 rods in length to the southward. Thus after Dudley's farm became a part of Oxford, the south line of the town turned at "Manchaug corner" to the southward, running at nearly a right angle 81 rods, and thence 212 rods easterly to Sutton line.¹

On 14 Sept., 1734, on petition of the town, Dudley's farm was annexed to Oxford, the lands being retained by his heirs until 1779.

Charlton set off. On 10 Jan., 1755, the District of Charlton was established. This took from Oxford all the original grant lying west of a line one mile west of the "Village line," leaving the out-lines of the towns as shown in diagram 3.²

Ward set off. The next dismemberment took place on the incorporation of the town of Ward. In May, 1770, a request of the inhabitants of the northeasterly part of the town to be set off as a separate district was refused in town meeting. On 17 Apr., 1772, William Bancroft with others of Worcester, Leicester, Oxford and Sutton, petitioned to be set off as a district. Anticipating this action the town in Mar., 1772, chose Edward Davis, Ebenezer Learned, Joseph Phillips, Daniel Griffith and Ephraim Ballard to "make answer" in the matter before the Court. The result was a dismissal of the application. In 1773 the effort was renewed. Action was taken favorable to the petitioners, and a committee appointed to select a site for a meeting-house. Oxford chose William Phips, Capt. Ebenezer Learned, Capt. Jeremiah Learned and Ephraim Ballard to wait on this committee. On 23 June, 1773, certain families, including Samuel Eddy, Levi Eddy, Peter Jennison, Ruth Stone, Jesse Stone, Isaac Pratt, Abraham Fitts, Alexander Nichols, David Gleason, all of Oxford, were "erected into a Precinct" called "the South Parish of Worcester." On 10 April, 1778, the same was made a town, named "Ward." All living within three miles of the site of the meeting-

² For several years previous to this action much dissatisfaction existed among the people of the westerly part of the town because of their want of privileges. Oxford in the important matter of locating the new meeting-house had apparently no regard to their interests, and considering the circumstances it seems that no valid objection could have been made to their being set off. The matter at last became so urgent that in May, 1750, Oxford voted to set off the west part of the town to within two miles of the west village line. But this was not satisfactory, and in Mar., 1754, the petitioners appealed to the Legislature, representing their privations on account of distance to meeting—that they were "disheartened, and as [they] had got timber for a meeting-house and were much encouraged by the gentlemen owning land [there] . . . but being taxed so high for the building the [Oxford] meeting-house and finishing it in the best manner, equal to, if not better than any in the country (?): paying for schools from which they derived no benefit—and "large herds of cattle brought among [them] breaking into [their] improved lands" . . . and living ten miles from the town pound it was "almost impossible to drive cattle there." . . . "All these things considered [they] feared [they should] be undone without the help of the court."

house by road, excepting in Sutton, where the distance was fixed at a mile and a half, were embraced in the act. This took from the corner of the town a tract resembling somewhat in form a quadrant. [See diagram 4.]

Moffit, etc., annexed. At March meeting, 1782, Isaac Moffit and Elijah Learned, living in the borders of Charlton, asked that they might be received as part of Oxford; on which the town voted affirmatively. On 3 June, 1788, these, with Ephraim Segar, presented the case to the Legislature, and on 2 Jan., 1789, they, with their farms—250 acres—were set to Oxford. On 23 Feb., 1809, on petition of Amasa Kingsbury, 26 acres adjoining the foregoing on the north were also added. [See dotted lines, diagram 4, letter M.]

Kidder, etc., annexed. In 1792, Jonathan Kidder, Samuel Blanchard and Arthur Daggett, living near the northeast corner of the town, in Sutton, requested to be received as inhabitants, which request was granted conditionally. On 18 Feb., 1793, the General Court annexed them to Oxford. [Diagram 5, letters D, K.]

South Gore land annexed. On 6 Feb., 1807, the Kingsbury neighborhood, with land north and west of the same to Dudley line, was annexed, the following being named in the act: Lemuel Cudworth, Craft Davis, Ezekiel Davis, David Fitts, Abijah Harris, Joseph Kingsbury, Ephraim Kingsbury, Samuel Kingsbury, Jeremiah Kingsbury, Jr., John Larned, John Larned, 3d, and James Wallis of Dudley.¹ [Diagram 6.]

Webster. The next change was at the incorporation of "Webster." The town opposed this project, and in September, 1831, Ira Barton, Stephen Davis and Richard Stone were chosen to protest against it before the Legislature. They say:—

"The area of the town before the setting off of Charlton was represented as having been about 45,000 acres. In 1754 a large portion of the rich agricultural town of Charlton was carved from the west part of Oxford, and in 1778 about one third part of Ward was also taken from said town so that when the town of Oxford was surveyed in 1794 . . . it contained but 17,336½ acres. Since that time another small portion of the south gore has been annexed to the town and by said survey Oxford now contains about 18,000 acres. The petitioners seek to carve off about 2,500 acres . . . by which the town will be reduced to about 15,000 acres or one third its original dimensions.—The land set off to Charlton and Ward as before mentioned constituted . . . [agriculturally considered] the best part of the former town, and a principal source of wealth and population remaining . . . consisted in the water power of the French River together with the outlet of the Chaubunagungamaug pond. By an appropriation of this power to manufacturing purposes the town now sustains a population of 2034 inhabitants. By [the proposed action] it will lose about one sixth of its taxable property—a population of about 600 together with a considerable portion of that water power upon which the business and prosperity of the town much depends."

Protests were unavailing and an act incorporating the new town—named in honor of the statesman—was passed 6 March, 1832.¹

North Gore annexed. The last alteration was the addition of the North Gore, 22 March, 1838, embracing about 738 acres, and lying between the north line of the town and Leicester. [Special Laws, 22.] Diagram 7 represents the lines as they now exist.

Indians. The English settlers did not suffer seriously from the incursions of the natives, although at times they prowled about the borders of the village, stealing pigs, chickens, garden vegetables, etc., and at the time of Father Ralle's war in Maine they were considerably aroused and caused alarm.

Garrison Houses. On 16 Aug., 1722, a law was passed requiring frontier towns, including Oxford, to be put in a posture of defence. Military officers and selectmen were ordered to cause houses to be fortified, to which families might repair for safety.² No mention is made in the town records of these houses, but, according to tradition, Col. Ebenezer Learned's, H. 120, and Peter Shumway's, H. 185, were two of them. Probably the old fort sufficed for the south part of the town. As late as 1845 there were the remains of a block house on the farm of Sanford A. Inman, H. 9, near Sutton line, perhaps built at this time. It was about 25 feet square, and the foundation stones and embankment were removed by Mr. Inman. The discovery of numerous Indian stone relics on these hills indicates that this was a resort of the Indians. Manchaug pond was a favorite haunt of theirs, and their village was not far distant. Lovett's farm, H. 17, and "Saccarappa," as indicated by stone implements found there, was another favorite locality, and probably a village existed at some time in that vicinity. Another place frequented by them was on Little River a short distance above Buffum's.

The accompanying illustration shows various specimens of Indian stone relics found in Oxford. No. 1, a natural stone used as a rubbing stone—found on the Plain; 2, pestle, length 12 inches, Edson's, H. 163; 3, gorget or neck ornament, two perforations, Wellington's, H. 129; 4, sinker, perforated, Plain; 5, use unknown, perforated, Humphrey's, H. 36; 6, awl or piercer, Lovett's, H. 17; 7, soapstone implement, use unknown, Lovett's; 8, chisel, Whiting farm, H. 14; 9, gouge, N. ¹ In this act the north line was defined as beginning at the northeast corner of said town and thence running due west across the river, etc. In March, 1839, the Selectmen of Oxford were instructed by the town to petition the Legislature to alter the course of this line "so that it may agree with the present Village line." The old line, W. 15° S., was restored. [See diagram 7.]

People armed. In these troublous times farmers were accustomed to go to their work with their implements in one hand and a gun in the other. Col. Learned, at the extreme north, as tradition informs us, was considerably annoyed at times by the sly manœuvres of the natives, but knowing his strength and courage they made no serious encroachments upon him. The occurrence related by Hutchinson is corroborated by tradition, the place having been at the site of the house later occupied by John Barton, H. 21, near "Barton Hill," in the easterly part of the town.

"On Aug. 6, 1724, four Indians came upon a small house which was built under a hill. They made a breach in the roof and as one of them was attempting to enter he received a shot in his belly from a courageous woman, the only person in the house, who had two muskets and two pistols charged, and was prepared for all four; but they thought fit to retreat, carrying off the dead or wounded man."

This locality was on the Bernon estate, the property of Samuel Davis, then of Roxbury, and the occupant is unknown.

The eastern troubles culminated in 1725 in the famous Lovewell's fight at Pequawket, and in December quiet was restored.

Accounts have come to us by trustworthy tradition of several personal encounters with the Indians. They, it appears, for some reason had a grudge against Abial Lamb, and at times lurked around his premises with evil intent, and once fired upon him when he was at a distance from home. He returned them as good as they sent, with fatal consequences it is said, after which he was unmolested.

The following is an incident in Col. Learned's experience:

"At candle-light on a cold evening, an Indian came to his door and asked for food and shelter. He was kindly received, and after supper was allowed to camp before the large open fire-place in the old-fashioned kitchen. Some time during the night the Colonel became conscious of a presence stooping over him as he lay in bed. The Indian, perceiving that he was awake, said to him in a scornful tone, 'You pale face!' Learned was out of bed in an instant, and with a well-directed blow laid the fellow upon the floor, and in a few seconds had him outside the house and the door shut upon him.

"Several months afterward his visitor again made his appearance, at evening, as before. He had in his hand a roll of valuable furs, which he presented respectfully to Learned, with the remark, 'You brave,' and left."

Collicump. So far as known, the last wild Indian living within the limits of the town was Collicump, whose dwelling was in the pleasant nook under the hills near the house of the first Joseph Brown, in the west part of the town, H. 88, within the sound of the brook which comes down through the rocky gorge near the old Charlton road and winds through the meadow below to the Maanexit. In this retired spot he lived to old age, runs the tradition, cultivating a little garden near his hut, hunting small game in the neighboring woods and fishing in the river and also the stream in the easterly part of Charlton known as Little River—sometimes called “Collicum.” He had deceased long before Mr. Brown’s purchase of this farm in 1791, but his garden and the ruins of his cabin were then to be seen, and traces of his dwelling still remain. He met a tragic fate having been drowned in the latter stream in a deep hole a short distance below the mills of the late John H. Rich. Interesting mementos of him were recently in the possession of the late Jasper Brown, Esq., being two brass spoons ploughed up on the site of his cabin by Mr. Joseph Brown. They were of a peculiar pattern, unlike the present form of this utensil, and were doubtless furnished him by the English.¹

Slaves. A return in State papers, 1754, gives Negro slaves in Oxford, three males, one female.

Richard Moore owned “Sharper,” and 26 Nov., 1736, sold him to Joshua Haynes, Sudbury.²

Moses Marcy of Oxford had an Indian woman, sold him by the Court prior to 1747. That year he was discharged from his bond, she having “made away with herself after having tried to murder her mistress—run off and not heard from since.”

In 1755, Cæsar, a slave, servant of Richard Moore, Jr., was arraigned before Worcester Court.³

Col. Ebenezer Learned owned a house servant named Mingo—was long in the family, and was dumb or successfully feigned himself to be so. He was provided for in Learned’s will.

Rev. John Campbell had a servant, Will, was in the army of 1775, at the siege of Boston, enrolled as a soldier, may have been servant to Capt. William Campbell.

In a tax list for 1771 Dea. Thomas Davis is named as owner of a “servant for life,” and William Watson is taxed for two, the same. In 1775 a negro was sold as part of his estate.

Josiah Wolcott had a house servant named Dinah who lived to be very aged, and died in 1829, a town charge.

Colonial Money. At the time of the permanent settlement almost the entire circulating medium consisted of Bills of Credit, issued by the Province, payable with interest, at short stated times. On 11 Oct., 1721, trustees were chosen to receive and care for the “Bank Money paid to the town.” The amount was £64, Oxford’s proportion of £50,000. The duty of these trustees was to loan this money in small amounts on security.⁴

Province, are grown scarce in proportion to the great Demand for the same—Be It enacted,” etc. Prov. Laws, II., 189. These bills varied in value from £5 to 3 shillings. In 1723 it was voted to issue £500 in one, two and three penny pieces, to be made of parchment about an inch in measurement, stamped, a round piece to pass as one penny, a square piece two-pence and a six-sided piece three-pence.

In March, 1728, it was voted "to leave the concern of the £50,000 loan to the selectmen to take account of y^e Trustees and report." This loan was redeemable in Boston, £10,000 on the last day of May in each year from 1726 to 1730. In Oxford the last payment was not made until Feb., 1736, when "Jer. Allen Treas." receipted "by Mr. Campbell, committee," for £12. 16s., "the last fifth" of said loan. On 20 Feb., 1728, another loan of £60,000 was issued, of which Oxford's share was £106. 10s. In April it was voted "to draw out y^e Town's part," and the trustees were instructed to loan it in sums not under ten or over twenty pounds to one man. In this loan 4 per cent. of the interest went to the Province and the balance to the towns.

Early levies. The first raising of money by the town was 19 Nov., 1713, when £6 was voted for necessary charges, to be raised on the 30 house lots. The first County tax was in 1718, when Suffolk County raised £350; Oxford's share, 15 shillings, 9½ pence. In 1721 a house of correction was to be built and £650 was raised; Oxford's share, £2. 18s. The first tax of Worcester County was in Nov., 1732; Oxford's share, £14. 0s. 4d. The first levy of a Colonial tax in Oxford was 5 July, 1719, for the sum of £5. Taxes were collected by constables until 1786 when collectors were chosen.

Public Funds. In Oct., 1791, the town holding £340. 13s. 1d. public securities, it was voted to divide the same among the religious societies, the First and Second and the Baptists, each their proportion. The amounts were as follows: Standing Society £206. 3s. 3d., the Second Society £119. 17s. 2d., the Baptists, to be paid individually, according to their valuation, the sum of £14. 12s. 8d. This shows the financial strength relatively of the religious organizations. In March, 1837, a committee of the town was chosen to receive from the Commonwealth its share of the surplus revenue ordered by Congress to be distributed, and to recommend some manner of disposing of the same, which advised that it be funded and the interest be divided among the school districts. In June, 1837, a report of the selectmen upon the division of this fund with Webster was accepted, as follows: Whole amount, $2,965.65; Oxford's share, allotted on 1,569 population, $2,287.66; Webster's share, on 465 population [in the part set off from Oxford], $677.99. In May, 1838, the town instructed the selectmen to pay out enough of this fund to clear the town from debt. The amount is not given; a balance was voted, 1839, toward building the town hall on the north common.

"Land Bank." In 1739, many people of small means being embarrassed, business much depressed and money scarce, a plan was laid to establish in Boston a private banking concern which resulted in the forming of the famous "Land and Manufactures Bank Company." This affair, while it had the sanction of a few influential men, was projected and managed chiefly by persons of limited resources, many of whom had land but little money and perhaps some of whom were insolvent. "This company [numbering some seven or eight hundred] were to give credit to 150,000 pounds to be issued in bills [payable in 20 years] to be loaned on mortgage, every subscriber to pay 3 per cent. and 5 per cent. of the principal, and those not paying bills might pay in produce or manufactures of the Province."¹

The Governor opposed the scheme, an act of incorporation was refused in the Legislature, proclamations were issued warning the public against it as dangerous, and all government officers, the courts and others within their influence were required to discountenance and obstruct the circulation of the bills. The leading merchants of the larger towns refused them in trade. Notwithstanding all opposition the plan flourished for a time, and Hutchinson says "perhaps a majority of the Province were well wishers to it." By great exertion and the purchase of every commodity for which its bills would be received, the directors succeeded in getting into circulation fifty or sixty thousand pounds of their paper. In country places it was popular, and passed freely among the traders and the people at large, and many towns voted to accept "Land Bank" in all their public financial affairs. As late as May, 1741, their bills were in circulation.² Its opposers appealed to Parliament and an act was obtained extending to America an old law of Britain that no transferable stock should be raised without legislative authority, which dealt it a blow under which it soon succumbed. In 1741 the General Court appointed commissioners with power to tax all who had been in the company in proportion to their interest, and with moneys thus raised to redeem the bills, and make equitable adjustment between the members. Heavy losses resulted and its pernicious influence was felt long afterward. Fortunately the people of this town did not engage in it to a great extent. Isaac Larned owned 40 shares, Jacob Cummings 30, Uriah Stone 40, Samuel Call 30 and Samuel Scott 30, all excepting Larned in the north part of the town. In 1748 the commissioners sold 46 acres of land of Samuel Call (now known as the Livermore place), H. 110, to pay his assessments.

First Ministers. In accordance with the terms of the grant and the usage of the day the town was from the beginning an ecclesiastical parish, and its early records refer constantly to ministerial affairs. The first minister named was Rev. John James, probably noted by Savage as having lived, and died 10 Aug., 1729, at Wethersfield. He had preached as early as 1683 at Haddam, and was at Derby from 1694 to 1706, and at Brookfield from 1711 to 1 May, 1714. On 29 July, 1714, it was "voted that every lot man shall pay his equal proportion of 10 shillings a sabbath for a quarter of a year to Mr. James for his preaching." On 30 Nov. it was voted that Mr. Moore [Richard] and John Town "take care and provide a minister as soon as convenient." On 25 March, 1715, voted that the money for the support of the gospel ministry among us, be raised on the lands in general belonging to the village. On 25 Sept., 1715, it was voted to send Daniel Eliott and Abraham Skinner to Jonathan Shattuck of Watertown "to treat with him concerning his coming to preach the Gospel to us." Mr. Shattuck preached at least two Sabbaths, for which he was paid 30 shillings. He was settled, 1717, at Littleton. On 10 May, 1716, it was voted to raise for the year 30 pounds on the 30 house lots for the support of the ministry, and Mr. Richard Moore was instructed "to go to the gentlemen that gave us the land [for the village] to see what they will give for the support of the Gospel among us." And on 31 July, John Town and Ebenezer Learned were chosen for the same purpose with directions that if said proprietors would not do their proportion to petition the General Court for help. The result of this effort we do not find, but in some way the people received encouragement.

On 29 Jan., 1717, it was voted that the selectmen should "take care to get a minister," and at the same date it was decided to build a meeting-house. Neither minister or the means of supporting one, however, was then settled upon, as on 19 Aug. a meeting was called to be held at 7 o'clock in the morning, to agree upon some way to raise money and "to take care to obtain a minister." At this meeting it was voted to raise 30 pounds for the support of the Gospel, and Richard Moore, Ebenezer Learned and Daniel Eliott were chosen to obtain a minister.¹

Non-residents taxed. On 14 June, 1718, John Town, as selectman, petitioned the General Court for leave to tax the lands of non-residents in Oxford for aid in supporting the ministry and building a new meeting-house. On which it was ordered that authority be given to tax 20 shillings on 1,000 acres five years. On 21 July, 1720, Richard Moore renewed this petition, on which it was again ordered that the town authorities be empowered to lay a tax of 20 shillings per annum per 1,000 acres during three years. The next year Richard Moore, being the town representative, submitted to the Court that the tax had been assessed as authorized but some of the proprietors refused to pay. By permission he presented a bill which was referred to the next session. On 22 March, 1722, an act was passed enabling the town to recover a tax on non-resident proprietors' lands towards building a new meeting-house, etc. On 16 May, 1726, Capt. Ebenezer Learned was chosen "to go to General Court with a petition for leave to tax non-residents' land toward the support of the gospel." On 7 June it was ordered that the town of Oxford be authorized to assess, levy and collect 20 shillings on each 1,000 acres on non-resident land for three years, and "said land is made liable for the payment of said taxes." On 4 Sept., 1729, on Isaac Larned's petition, "ordered that the town of Oxford be authorized to assess and collect one farthing per acre on non-residents' land for five years for the support of the ministry." On 2 July, 1731, a petition of Rev. John Campbell was presented to the General Court, setting forth that former laws made to meet the needs of the town had in them no provision to enforce the collection of the taxes on non-resident lands, by which the petitioner had been much straitened and had not the support designed for him, and praying that provision be made for the collecting of said taxes. Upon which it was enacted as follows:

"Whereas there have been several assessments of taxes heretofore ordered and directed by the General Court of this Province on the lands of the non-resident proprietors within the township of Oxford . . . as well for the building a meeting house as supporting the ministry in the said town, and whereas a considerable part thereof still remains due and unpaid by reason of the methods heretofore used for collecting the same being insufficient . . .

¹ From the first recorded tax list in the town, Sept., 1717, we learn that the sum voted at this meeting was raised by a tax on the inhabitants, without the aid of non-resident proprietors, with the single exception of Gabriel Bernon, who was taxed both for the current expenses of religious worship and for the building of the meeting-house.

Ordered that John Chandler Jr. Samuel Dudley of Sutton, and Benjamin Flagg of Worcester be a committee to collect said taxes, and pay the same to the Treasurer of Oxford."

They were authorized to sell lands and give deeds when necessary for the purpose.

On 14 Sept., 1734, Isaac Larned represented to the Court the difficulty of supporting the gospel since Dudley was set off, and asked leave to tax non-residents one-half penny an acre for five years, which was granted, and also ordered that the farm belonging to Hon. William Dudley, called Manchaug farm, be, and is hereby annexed to Oxford. On 26 Dec., 1739, permission was continued for five years to tax one farthing per acre, all lands without a legal fence included.

Mr. McKinstry. The third clerical name recorded is that of John McKinstry, who preached several months. On 7 Oct., 1718, Benoni Twichell was sent by the town "to fetch up the minister." On 2 March, 1719, a call was voted him which he declined. And on 9 Nov., 1720, he was settled as first minister of Sutton.

Mr. Andrew. In 1719 Rev. Samuel Andrew was preacher for a time. He was son of Samuel of Cambridge, b. in 1656, and was at this time 64 years of age. An attempt to settle him failed.

Mr. Campbell. Very soon after REV. JOHN CAMPBELL entered upon the scene of his life work. On 30 May, 1720, in expectation of his arrival, it was voted that Israel Town should entertain him, and Ens. Ebenezer Learned "should treat with him and agree with him as reasonably as he could with discretion, to obtain him for one or two months." Propositions for a settlement were voted him on 15 July with an offer of 60 pounds a year salary—the lot originally laid out for the minister, with the rights belonging to it—and 100 pounds settlement, "provided he shall be willing to live and die our minister," and John Town, Isaac Larned, John Comins, Abial Lamb and Abraham Skinner were chosen a committee to "treat with him." They reported as follows:

"We laid before Rev. Mr. Campbell the above voted particulars and left them with him under the following circumstances—In the name and by virtue of the power given us by the inhabitants of Oxford, we called the Reverend John Campbell to be our minister. Second, we promised the said Mr. Campbell Sixty pounds salary. Third, that the said Mr. Campbell have freely given him the lot laid out already for the first minister of Oxford, with the rights thereunto belonging, or one hundred acres to be laid out . . . where it can conveniently be had. Fourth, that we will give the said Mr. Campbell one hundred pounds settlement in work as reasonably as others have work for their money in Oxford—provided he shall be willing to live and die with us in the work of the ministry."

Mr. Campbell's reply, dated 12 Aug., 1720, is as follows:

"GENTLEMEN, I have had your call and proposals before me and upon mature deliberation I accept of your call and proposals to me as propounded, and hereby promise to be willing to continue with you in the work of the ministry as the Lord shall enable me, provided you continue a ministerial people.

“JOHN CAMPBELL.”

As Mr. Campbell became known, the people evidently recognized in him a fit man to continue their life-long minister, they having given a call and received his answer before a reply was returned from the association of ministers to which the selectmen had applied for an opinion concerning him. This reply, dated Woodstock, 7 Sept., 1720, was commendatory, and on the 12 Sept. the town chose a committee to oversee the work to be done in the settlement.

Church formed. The ordination did not, however, take place until several months later. Meantime the Church was organized. Mr. Campbell was chosen clerk and thus chronicles its initiation and progress :

“The Methode taken and pursued in laying a foundation for and gathering a Chh. of Christ in Oxford in New England was as follows viz—four men viz Lt. John Town, Abiel Lamb, Samuel Barton, Joseph Wiley, being already members of other Chhs meeting together sometime in September 1720: and having considered the obligations which they themselves were under, to promote the Kingdom of their Lord & Saviour Jesus Christ, (after social prayer and conference together) they declared each one to the other that they were desirous to lye in the foundation and build up a Chh. of Christ in Oxford: they also made known their Religious purpose in this matter to Capt. Richard Moore, another Chh. member, Inviting him and others . . . whose minds were disposed to advance the Religion of Jesus and his Interest, and thereby the special advantage of themselves and Posterity: to join with them in so good a work: Agreeing also to meet together at the house of Israel Town on thursday the 27th of October next following, at four of the clock post meridian.”

“The Society” met on said day and had prayers and a sermon, and decided to apply to the “Rev. Elders of Marlborough Association” who were to meet at Framingham, 2 Nov., following, asking “their Advice and Directions how to proceed in gathering a Chh. of Christ at said Oxford.” The reply was as follows :

“Dear Brethren, we highly approve of your Religious design to gather a church of Christ in Oxford and advise you that there be public notification thereof given in the Town, and that such as are already members lead in that affair, and that others who offer to join in the foundation of the said Church meet together with the said chh. members and give satisfaction to one another and to the said members of the saving work of grace in their hearts, either by verbal conference, or written Relation, after which hath been done & social prayer duly performed from time to time, by the said Religious Society we advise them to procure a Chh Covenant which they can all freely subscribe unto, and then to set apart a day of fasting and prayer, calling to them the Rev. Pastor of Woodstock, and the Rev. pastor of Mendon Chh. to assist on the said fast day in forming a church of Christ in Oxford.

“Sic Subscribitur JOSEPH BAXTER
in the name of the Association.”

At a Society meeting held 29 Dec., 1720, "after prayers and a sermon," chose Lt. John Town moderator and "appointed the third Wednesday in Jan. 1720-1 to be the day of fasting and prayer previous to the gathering a church of Christ in Oxford: and also desired Mr. John Campbell to write letters to the ministers [designated] to request their presence and assistance on the above said day."

"The Revd. ministers sent to for our assistance came at the time appointed, viz. January 18th, 1720-1 and the day was observed by fasting, prayers and sermons: and towards the close of the day . . . the following Church Covenant in which all the brethren were agreed was read, approved and accepted by the men whose names are underwritten and likewise by their wives respectively."

Covenant.

"We do under a soul humbling and abasing sense of our utter unworthiness of so high & great a privilege as God is graciously putting into our hands Own and Accept of God the Father, Son, & Holy Spirit for our God in Covenant with us, and do accordingly give up ourselves and our seed according to the terms of the Everlasting Covenant to him to be his under most sacred & inviolable Bonds, promising by the help & strength of his grace, without which we can do nothing that we will walk as becomes saints according to the rules of God's holy word. Submitting ourselves and seed to the government of the Lord Jesus Christ, as King of his Chh. and to the watch and discipline of this Chh. managing ourselves towards God and man all in civil & sacred authority as becomes those who are under the teachings of God's holy Word & Spirit: Alike declaring it to be our Resolution that in all things wherein we may fall short of duty we will wait upon God for his pardoning mercy and Grace in and through our Dear Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever.

"These were the persons who lay in the foundation of a Gospel Chh. in Oxford, New England Janury 18th 1720-1 in the presence and with the approbation of the Rev. Mr. Josiah Dwight pastor of Woodstock and the Rev. Mr. Joseph Dorr pastor of Mendon Chh."

The first meeting of the Church was at the house of John Comins near the old mill, at the south end of the Plain, "after prayers and a sermon, John Town was chosen Moderator, and then after a long and serious conference, the Chh unanimously chose Mr. John Campbell to be their pastor. To which choice Mr. Campbell . . . signified his Consent." It was also voted to request the selectmen to call a town meeting to act on the subject.

Campbell's Ordination. On 31 Jan., 1721, the Church met and voted to ask the aid of pastors and delegates to ordain Mr.

Campbell from the churches in Woodstock, Medfield, Framingham, Marlborough, Lancaster and Mendon; chose a committee to give invitations; voted that every member of the Church should pay six shillings to defray expenses of the council, "besides what other inhabitants of the town shall please to give," and chose Isaac Larned, John Comins and Abraham Skinner to provide for said council.

At a town meeting, the same day, an account being read of what the Church had done as to the choice of Mr. Campbell, and the time appointed for ordination, it was voted to concur. The following is Mr. Campbell's record of the ordination services:

"Wednesday March 1st 1720/1

"The ordination of the Rev. Mr. John Campbell to the pastoral office & Charge of the Chh. of Christ in Oxford was conducted with good order & decency. the several parts of the publick Service were performed by the following gentlemen, viz the Revd. Mr. John Prentice pastor of the Chh. in Lancaster preached the Ordination Sermon from Ephs. 6, 18, 19. the prayer before the charge was made by the Revd. Mr. Josiah Dwight pastor of the Chh in Woodstock, the charge was given by the Revd. Mr. Joseph Baxter pastor of the Chh. in Medfield, the prayer after the charge was made by the Revd. Mr. Robert Breck of Marlborough. The Right hand of fellowship was given by the Revd. Mr. John Swift pastor of the Chh in Framingham. The introductory prayer to all the publick service was made by the Revd Mr Joseph Dor pastor of the Chh in Mendon. The thanksgiving psalm or song was proposed, viz. Psal. 118 from the 24th verse to the end of the Psalm, and the blessing pronounced by the Rev'd. Mr John Campbell the then ordained pastor of the Chh. of Christ in Oxford."

The first celebration of the Lord's Supper was 14 May, 1721. In 1723 Richard Waters was by vote "desired" to unite with the Church by letter of recommendation, "in order to his being elected deacon," but did not comply. The Church Records under Mr. Campbell's ministry give little of the detail of affairs. With one or two exceptions they contain no entries of accessions, dismissals or baptisms. The particulars of a few cases of discipline are recorded and the election of officers, but more frequently than on any other subject occur entries concerning the "Hagburn Fund."

Hagburn Legacy. Under date of 1724 is entered a copy of the clause in the will of Mr. Samuel Hagburn giving 50 pounds "for the use and benefit of the church as they shall think fit to lay out or dispose of for any pious use." On 4 July, 1726, it was voted to put the said bequest out at interest, and Dea. John Town, Isaac Larned and Philip Amidown were chosen to take charge of it. In 1728 the town raised Mr. Campbell's salary to 80 pounds, as the currency was depreciating. In 1729 the town "voted to tax unimproved lands one farthing per acre towards paying our minister." 1731, Sept. 10, voted to expend the interest on the Hagburn Fund "for vessels for use of the church," and allowed £3 to pay expenses of pastor and delegate to an ecclesiastical council at Boston, £5 for a "mort-cloth" and a basin for baptismal use. 1731, Sept. 20, the town voted ten pounds additional for firewood for Mr. Campbell. 1734, Aug. 27, voted £90 and firewood to Mr. Campbell. As the currency depreciated the town increased the salary as follows: In 1735 to £100, in 1736 £120, in 1739 £130, in 1741 £150. On 18 May, 1743, the town heard the report of a committee chosen to compute the "odds" between the currency and silver, "so that Justice be done Mr. Campbell," and on it voted him £180. In 1745 £200 was voted, 1747 £225, in 1748 £250, in 1749 £400, "to make up deficiencies in years past and the present year." In May, 1750, the currency had been brought to a specie basis and £50 was voted. Under date, 12 June, 1741, is recorded "the distressing circumstances of some poor families amongst us occasioned by the scarcity of bread corn," on which it was voted that the interest then due on the Fund "be given to the most necessitous families in this congregation."

In Dec., 1741, a movement led by Ebenezer Lock began among the people of the N. Gore and the north part of Oxford to be set off as a new parish, and a petition to the town therefor was signed by Caleb Barton, Samuel Call, Uriah Gleason, Joseph Phillips, Samuel Town, Richard Gleason and Jonas Collier. But the project was given up, perhaps on account of the proposal to build the new meeting-house at a location north of the Plain.

The Awakening. The years 1741-2 witnessed the "Great Awakening," with which Mr. Campbell had no sympathy. There was great excitement and much heated controversy, and the lines between the adherents to the old methods and the "New Scheme" were closely drawn. Rev. David Hall of Sutton was a strenuous adherent of Edwards and Whitefield, and as a result a coolness arose between the two neighboring pastors. In his diary, 9 March, 1746, Dr. Hall says "I have of late been to Oxford, where I have not been to visit before scarce these seven years. I find there has been reports carried to my disadvantage. A shyness among ministers is attended with many mischiefs and disadvantages."

Campbell's Treatise. In 1743 Mr. Campbell, "at the desire of his constant hearers and others," published his "Treatise on Conversion," etc., a 12mo. volume of 215 pages, being extracts of sermons preached under the pressure of this movement. Near the close he says:

"Suffer me, I beseech you, who am the weakest and most unworthy in the Sacred Order of the Ministry, to intreat both Ministers and People of the NEW SCHEME to desist from invading the Provinces and Districts of their Fellow Laborers and Brethren: And thereby disturbing the Peace, and Spoiling the good Order of the Churches upon Pretence of little differences between you and them and so exclude yourselves their Communion. Such a practice was early condemned in the Christian Church, III. John, 10.

"The Ordinances of God are understood by some Interpreters to be the Hedge and Wall of a People: when God takes away the Hedge and Wall, the Breach is made wide for every wild Beast to enter and tread it down. There are two or three things it would be well if the Exhorters and their Followers could be persuaded to refrain, viz: 1 To keep each of them in their proper Business.—‘Ne sutor ultra crepidam,’ that is blind Folks should not judge of colors.—2. That they no longer traduce the sacred Scriptures, that is laying aside some Parts of them . . . and esteeming others necessary, as they agree with the peculiar sentiments.—3. Using humane Compositions in the Public Worship of God, in Room of sacred Scriptures: I mean their using Hymns, so as almost to have superseded the Psalms of David and other spiritual Songs. This is a manifest Violation and Reproach of the Wisdom and Law of God . . . I am far from thinking that the good Gentleman [Dr Watts] whose hymns are mostly used by our giddy Zealots ever intended that Composure of his should ever supersede the Psalms of David . . . Singing of Hymns composed by men uninspired by God in his Worship was no part of our Forefather’s Religion . . . No, this smells a little of that industrious source of all Religious Forgeries, viz—the Church of Rome which hath impudently introduced their Te Deums, Anthems, and Ave Marias. These *Cockatrices*¹ do not consider what they do and the guilt they are bringing upon themselves.”

Davidson Case. As early as 1748 a controversy arose in Sutton Church and William Davidson and wife were excommunicated or suspended. In Dec., 1748, he brought his case before an ex parte council in Oxford at the house of Elisha Davis, from which we infer that he here found encouragement and sympathy. Dr. Hall in his diary says, “26 Dec., to morrow am to go to a Council at Oxford called by an offending brother. 27, went to Davidson’s Council, was, I think poorly treated. 28, grievously exercised to day, y^e council’s Result appearing most injurious, I became angry and spoke indecently. 21, discoursed with Parkman [Westboro’] he admired [wondered] at the result of Council.” This result was against the action of Sutton Church. The diary continues, “12 July 1749, a time in which we need y^e greatest wisdom and courage. The Chh. beset on y^e right hand and left, by Davidson Council and y^e separatists. 15, have been carried through the Church meeting without any jarring in regard to Davidson’s affair.” [Adhering to former action.] An entry 31 Oct., 1749, indicates that another Council had been held on the case “which wholly approved of our conduct.”

On 15 Sept., 1750, Davidson and wife “desired occasional communion” with Oxford Church, which by a vote with but one dissenting voice was granted. This action placed the Church in the position of a defender of Davidson and implied censure was cast upon Sutton. The result was a long period of estrangement and ill feeling between the two bodies. Thomas Gleason, Jr., of Oxford, who opposed the church action, was disciplined and suspended, but in July, 1745, confessed his fault and was restored. The record of this matter by Mr. Campbell, being the last of his entries, is of special interest. He says:

“At a meeting of the Chh. in Oxford, March 8th, 1754, Thomas Gleason Junr personally notified and then present being asked the question if he was now sensible of the evil of his continued neglect of attending on his duty with this Chh. in sealing ordinances: expressed no repentance, but pretended to justify his contumacious omission, and base conduct: and then being meekly discoursed with, and earnestly exhorted to return to his duty, but without success, and the least token of Relenting.

"1. The question being put to the brethren whether any of them objected against pronouncing the due Ecclesiastical censure against the said Thomas Gleason: there appeared a profound and universal silence—then the question being put in the following form, viz. 2. Brethren if it be your minds that Thomas Gleason Junr by his unlawful and sinful separation from this chh. for many years together from communion in sealing Ordinances, hath rendered himself unworthy of such special priveleges as heretofore he has had with us, and is accordingly Suspended from Communion in Sealing Ordinances with this Chh. until he shew repentance for his multiplied enormities, and make Gospel Satisfaction: manifest it by the usual sign of uplifted hands: Voted in the affirmative unanimously. 3. The case of William Davison being mentioned, and some discourse had thereon, it was left as it stood before without any alteration or emendation. 4. A letter being read, Directed to be Communicated, by Rev. David Hall pastor of the first church in Sutton after brief observations made thereon, it was rejected . . . as it seemed to be stuffed with many fallacies and inconsistencies."

Church Action. On 29 June, 1762, the Church voted:

"Whereas there has been a difficulty and uneasiness for some time Subsisting between us and the first chh. of Christ in Sutton, and the Pastors of said churches for their parts have made up their own differences, before the death of our Revd. Pastor, we desire that all uneasiness between us and you may be removed, and that we may live in Peace, Unity and Harmony as sister Chhs ought to do. And by a vote at the same meeting Abigail Davison the wife of William Davison is debarred of communion with us in special ordinances till she has made her peace with you, according as was proposed at Uxbridge October 22d 1751."¹

A plain inference from this record is that a third council had decided in effect against the Oxford action of Sept., 1750.²

Rev. John Campbell died 25 May, 1761. On 3 July, 1761, Dea. Jonathan Town was chosen moderator of the Church. On 1 Feb., 1762, a call was voted, 58 to 8, to Rev. Ebenezer Grosvenor which he declined. On 24 Aug., a second unsuccessful effort was made to settle him.³

Mr. Bowman. On 2 March, 1764, REV. JOSEPH BOWMAN of Westboro' was called by the Church by a "great majority vote." On 20 March the town concurred, and voted a "settlement" of £133. 6s. 8d. and a salary of £70. At a town meeting 24 Sept., the "settlement" grant was raised to £200 and on 15 Oct., the salary was raised to £100.

On 12 November, 1764, the Church—"voted that we will take the word of God for our rule of Church government and where the form of Church government is not particularly pointed out in Scripture, we will have reference to the Cambridge Platform . . . Lay elders and Lay ordination excepted."

Mr. Bowman was installed on 14 Nov., 1764. Sermon by his pastor, Rev. Ebenezer Parkman of Westboro. Sept. 26, 1771, "voted—that Thursday, 24 Oct., next y^e Church will meet at y^e meeting-house to discourse on y^e affairs of singing a new version of y^e Psalms," etc. No record of this meeting appears. Dec. 31, 1775, William Phips, Esq., and wife, Lieut. Thomas Gleason, Capt. Samuel Eddy and wife, William Parker and wife, Levi Eddy and wife were dismissed from the Church to form a new Church at Ward. May 24, 1776, Lieut. Abijah Harris, Richard Coburn and Amasa Kingsbury were chosen Choristers. "June 8, 1780, It was proposed to choose some one to assist Mr. Richard Coburn, in setting or tuning the Psalm on y^e Sabbath, and chose Levi Davis, John Pratt, and Allen Hancock for this purpose."

During Mr. Bowman's ministry the additions to the Church were as follows:—admitted to full communion 64; covenanted [brought under the watch of the Church, and had children baptized]—25; dismissals 27. The baptisms between the date of Mr. Campbell's death and Mr. Bowman's installation were 87, and during Mr. Bowman's ministry 366.

Bowman embarrassed. Fourteen eventful years succeeded Mr. Bowman's installation and he felt very seriously the pressure of the times brought by the Revolutionary War. On 18 March, 1779, he "laid before the Church some matters of difficulty respecting his support, and difficulties in the town and church, and asked a dismissal," upon which the Church chose as a committee Edward Davis, Esq., Dr. Alex. Campbell, Dea. Samuel Harris, Gen. Ebenezer Learned and Mr. Amos Shumway, "to wait on the pastor to see if there can be no method of an accommodation." At the same meeting "voted, that the same committee inquire of delinquent members the reasons of their absenting themselves from the worship and ordinances."

This committee reported 22 April, 1779, "that they had conferred with the pastor and had found his circumstances very difficult and necessitous, and that something further ought to be done for his support, which they assured him of the willingness of the people to do, so far as they could learn . . . on which he had consented to tarry for the present." The town had previously moved in the matter and had on 1 March, 1779, voted an increase of salary of £230 making £300 for 1778. But this does not appear to have been satisfactory to Mr. Bowman, as the town on account of war expenses was not fulfilling its previous obligations. It was evident that a large majority of the people were very reluctant to part with their minister, and early in 1780 a committee of the town was sent to him to attempt an adjustment of affairs so that he could be retained. In reply he says:

"To Adjutant EZRA BOWMAN, Mr. AMOS SHUMWAY, Deacon JOHN DAVIS and Mr EPHRAIM RUSSELL.

GENTLEMEN :

Whereas, you as a Committee from y^e town of Oxford, waited upon me yesterday, to know what would be satisfactory to me for my support, to continue with y^e town as their minister; & did then desire me to give my answer in writing—therefore in compliance to your Request, I would make y^e following proposals: viz

1. If y^e town will make good to me in Real value, or produce all y^e arrearages y^t are due since y^e times thro y^e depreciation of y^e paper currency, allowing me y^e advantage of all y^e private donations which I have Received within this two years past, as a Compensation for being kept out of my due & will make my Sallery good for y^e future, & pay it punctually, at y^e time it becomes due, every year; & will generally, & constantly attend publick worship; regulate y^e disorders in town & Church; & y^t y^e Laws for y^e observation of y^e Sabbath, y^e regulating of public Houses, & for y^e suppression of profanity, & all other vices, be put in strict execution, y^t we might have order & government; when these things are done, I shall be content to stay, & not Else—

2. If the town shall not think proper to comply with y^e above Request, If they will grant me a dismissal from my pastoral Relation to them; the town shall have Credit for all that I have Received either in a publick or private way, & I will allow my full proportion in all extraordinary Charges since y^e times, according to what I possess, providing y^e town will make good to me the remainder of the Rereges y^t will then be due me, but if neither of the above proposals are agreeable, I will submit y^e matter to be determined by indifferent Judges, who shall say what terms we shall part upon, from, Gentlemen, your most obedient, & humble servant,

JOSEPH BOWMAN."

"Oxford, April 5th, 1780."

Debt and Credit. He adds,

"The following is what I have Received for four years service viz, in 1777 £35, in 1778 £31, 13s. 1d.—in 1779 £27, 6s.—in 1780, nothing—making a total of £93, 19s. 1d. including presents.

"of the above £12. 5s. was received by subscription
28. 9s. 5d. presents from individuals total, 40. 14. 5.

"which subtract from £93, 19s. leaves £52, 4s. 8d. to [be paid by] y^e town."

People divided. Upon this, three town meetings were holden in quick succession. At the first, the first proposition of Mr. Bowman was acceded to and a sum sufficient to pay all arrearages in full was voted. At the second this action was rescinded, at the third the friends of the pastor rallied and the first vote was re-affirmed, and for the time Mr. Bowman consented to remain. The opposition however persisted, and at a fourth meeting called to see if the town would clear from responsibility "those who thought it not right to pay the minister by a tax," a vote was passed not to release such persons.

Little appears to indicate the state of affairs afterward for a year or more, but we know the town did not redeem its pledges.

Council. On 10 Jan., 1782, "there appearing no prospect of sufficient relief," Mr. Bowman renewed his request for a dismission, and asked for a mutual council. The Church demurred and asked time to consider. The request was later twice renewed, and on 3 Feb., was refused, on which "the pastor declared that he should call a council himself, and that with the leave of Providence it would meet at his house on Tuesday the 12th inst. and notified the Church to meet at the Meeting-house on said day. The council did not however convene, but a meeting of the Church was held, and strong efforts were made to induce the members to exert themselves to give relief to the pastor, and in case sufficient means could not be raised for the purpose, to consent to a mutual council for his dismission. Meantime an unsuccessful effort was made to raise needed funds by a voluntary tax. At a Church meeting, 1 Aug., it was voted;—"considering the circumstances of the Church and town," both being "in a broken and divided state, it is best that the relation between the pastor and this people be dissolved." Arrangements were made for a council which met at the house of James Butler 28 Aug., 1782, at which were present, David Hall, D.D., of Sutton, Rev. Charles Gleason of Dudley, Rev. Benjamin Conklin, Rev. Noadiah Russell of Thompson, with delegates. The result recognized "the sufferings of the pastor for several years—no prospect of improvement, and that affairs were growing worse," and advised that the pastoral relation of Mr. Bowman to the Church be dissolved.

Opposition organized. Before Nov., 1782, the opposition had, in some form of which there is no record, become organized. An article in a town warrant of that date was as follows:

"To see if the Society that have dissented from the Congregational¹ Church shall enjoy the free and uninterrupted liberties and privileges equal with their fellow townsmen, in particular that they should have free liberty to provide preaching for themselves and be under no obligations to pay any thing towards hiring or settling a minister of any denomination whatever, except it is their free voluntary act and choice: also that they shall have the privilege of the free use of the meeting house so much of the time as is adequate to the proportion they pay in taxes in common with the rest of the town (at set times) and upon a full compliance with the above said request, said society will give as much money as is their full proportion of the arrearages now due to Rev. Mr. Bowman . . . and will be assessed for the same in common with the town.

"If the town shall not vote to improve the meeting house mutually according to the above proposal—to see if the town will vote that the standing party or society shall appraise the house, that the dissenting Society may have liberty to sell their rights, or buy the other part as they may choose."

These articles the town refused to consider.

Lawsuit. Mr. Bowman had been dismissed, five years' salary was due him, and a suit at law impending. The great question was, who shall meet the issue? The records of 1783 contain but little concerning ecclesiastical affairs. In the March town warrant was an article "For the Congregational society to choose a committee to supply the pulpit," which was dismissed. In May, Amos Shumway, John Davis and John Dana were chosen by the town a supply committee. In November a town meeting was called to see what should be done "in respect to a large sum of money Mr. Bowman has sued the town for," and the selectmen were authorized to defend the action. The case came on at the March term, 1784. A few days after notification the town chose Gen. Ebenezer Learned and Dr. Daniel Fisk to go to Worcester with Mr. Bowman for the purpose of effecting a settlement if possible, but the effort failed. The following document is in the town archives :

"Oxford Mar. 25, 1784—This Day Waited on the Rev^d. Mr. Bowman And have as far as was in our power investigated the matter Respecting his Demand on the town and find that he must have £287. 18s. principal and interest & Cost this being his Demand which if he is not paid he Choses to have the matter tryed in Law that It may be Decided in that way.

Town defaulted. The case went to court and when called the town did not respond and was defaulted. An execution in favor of Mr. Bowman was issued 24 April, 1784. On 27 April, three days later, a warrant was drawn for a town meeting "to see if the town will come into any measure to settle the dispute who shall pay the money due to Mr. Bowman." On 11 May the meeting was held and John Dana, Elias Pratt, John Ballard, Samuel Davis, Jr., Marvin Moore and Daniel Fisk were chosen to consider the subject and "bring in proposals" to settle the case, who reported as follows :

Plan of Settlement.

"1st Every person shall pay monies already assessed for the purpose. 2nd The whole town shall be assessed for the additional sum of £90.—the remainder [no sum named] shall be assessed on the town excepting the following, John Barton Jr, Ezra Conant, Solomon Cook, Samuel Davis Jr, Elijah Davis, Learned Davis, Joseph Davis, Craft Davis, Charles Dabney, Samuel Davidson, Abijah Harris, Samuel Kingsbury, John Mayo, Collins Moore, David Mellen, Marvin Moore, Ephraim Russell, Jacob Shumway Jr., Andrew Walker, Abiel Atwood, Thomas Clark, Daniel Fisk, Jeremiah Learned, Benjamin Learned, Ebenezer Redding, Abner Town.¹ [26.] 3^d After this settlement, every man to be governed by the present Constitution."

This report was accepted and was the basis of a settlement. On 2 June, 1784, Mr. Bowman received satisfaction in cash and notes of hand for £292. 16s. 1½d., and receipted in full of all demands.

period of the Church's history. Dea. Samuel Harris was its moderator, and Dea. John Davis scribe. No entry by him, however, appears excepting the noting of a few baptisms and a memorandum 1784, 1785, as follows:

"The Churches in Sutton, Sutton parish, Sturbridge, Killingly, Dudley, Douglas, Woodstock, Leicester, Charlton, Northbridge each gave one sabbath's preaching by their respective pastors."

The effects of the Revolutionary struggle were not only to reduce the resources of the people and their ability to sustain religious institutions, but the prevailing liberal ideas concerning civil matters extended themselves into ecclesiastical affairs, and many left the "standing order" and transferred their support to other denominations, leaving on an impoverished Church a burden which the strength of the town had scarcely been able to carry.¹ This was a crisis in the town's history and a new order of things based on the provisions of the new State constitution ensued. Socially the results in the community were deplorable. Members of the same family became alienated, heated discussions were common and many personal enmities engendered, which continued many years.²

Candidating. In Sept., 1784, it was voted in town meeting to contribute each Sabbath after service to pay expenses of public worship, and on 22 Dec. voted "to hear Mr. Avery further on probation."³ At the same meeting it was voted that "those who do not intend to join with those that attend public worship at the meeting house, send in their names to the town clerk, by next March meeting," probably that they might be exempted from the ministerial tax.

Society formed. At April meeting, 1785, the town granted money for the support of preaching, and dissenters numbering 21 protested, "being of a different denomination and persuasion of Christians than those that meet in said meeting-house." A few months later the Universalist Society was formed, and shortly afterward requested the use of the meeting-house "to have a lecture preached . . . when it is known to stand empty and out of use by the Congregational Society," which the town refused. On 19 Oct., 1785, the majority memorialized the Legislature as follows:

"TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

"We the subscribers in Behalf of the town of Oxford humbly shew—That whereas the said Town now labors under Great Disadvantage with respect to the Support of the Gospel among us by reason of a large number that have separated from us called Universalists, who have opposed the raising of Candidates. In Jan., 1787, the town voted £80 for preaching, and in July of that year concurred with the Church in a call to Rev. Daniel Farrington, proposing a salary of £85 money and 30 cords of wood, which offer was declined.² In Aug., 1789, the town united with the Church in a call to Rev. Caleb Blake, later of Westford, proposing a salary of £70 and parsonage “to the value of £200.” This offer, although strongly pressed, was also declined.

Mr. Dudley. In 1790 a young man of good ability came as a candidate, and under date, 26 Nov., occurs the following:

“The Church met, and proceeded to give Mr. Elias Dudley a call to settle with them in the Gospel ministry by a unanimous vote.”

The town concurred, offering a salary of £75 and £150 settlement, one-half cash and one-half neat stock, to be paid in three years. This call was accepted and the ordination council met 13 April, 1791; sermon by Rev. Nathaniel Emmons, with whom the new pastor had studied his profession.

Mr. Dudley's ministry began with a reduced Church and congregation. He was a man of progressive ideas, and under him the Church formulated and adopted its first creed, and also a new covenant. Through his influence, doubtless, £30 of the Hagburn fund was appropriated in Jan., 1792, toward founding a library, which became a prized and useful institution. July 10, 1791, it was voted that Mr. Daniel Kingsbury, Mr. William Stone and Mr. Ambrose Stone be desired to assist as choristers. According to tradition Mr.

² Mr. Farrington was paid 17 Sept. for 18 Sabbaths' preaching.

Dudley's ministrations were highly appreciated by his people, and were attended by a good measure of success. Twenty persons, most of them on confession, were admitted to the Church during his ministry. His health, however, gradually failed, and at a church meeting on 23 Nov., 1797, he offered his resignation on the ground, first, that study and speaking were injurious to his health and that his feebleness caused him personal discouragement; and second, his salary was insufficient to meet the needs of his family, which fact had called him "to labors, cares and fatigues more and greater than he had strength and constitution to bear." The meeting adjourned without decisive action. At a meeting, 3 Jan., 1798, the Church desired the pastor to withdraw his resignation, and deferred the matter until spring, at which time, so far as appears, no action was taken on the subject. On 30 Aug. the Church met and voted to hire a supply—if the town concurred—the pastor's ill health continuing. Under the date, 12 Nov., 1798, occurs "the health of the pastor was such there was no preaching since August," and as there was no prospect of his preaching at present it was voted that the churches in the vicinity be requested "to consider them and give a sabbath preaching of their respective pastors."

1798, May 3, Capt. Kingsbury was dismissed with a vote of thanks for his long services, and Peter Spaulding, Elias Pratt, Jeremiah Dana and James Collier were chosen as choristers to lead the singing.

Dudley's Letter. On 12 Dec., 1798, at a church meeting, Mr. Dudley communicated the following:

"My Christian Brethren and Friends: As you now are and have been a long time acquainted with the low estate of my health and the great improbability of my being able again to preach the Gospel, I think it incumbent upon you and upon me, to take into serious consideration the contract and connection subsisting between us. As I have full evidence that study and public preaching have been very injurious to me and, as I fully believe have been the principal cause in divine providence of reducing me to the low and uncomfortable state I have been so long in I think it my duty to inform you that after serious consideration and as I trust humble and fervent prayer to God for direction I have come to the determination it can no longer be my duty to preach the gospel . . . Your hope of my future labors in the ministry should entirely cease . . . as there has been always a good understanding between us . . . and as the times since my residence with you have been greatly to my temporal disadvantage, and much in your favor, while I have lost my health in your service, I request my salary do not cease till the year be up in April."

The meeting adjourned without action to 2 Jan., 1799, at which time it was voted unanimously to defer a decision on the subject until conference could be had with the town, indicating an extreme reluctance to meet fairly the issue. On 9 Jan., 1799, the town voted that under existing circumstances a separation might take place "in an amicable manner," and at an adjourned meeting, 4 Feb., the day of the church meeting, voted to concur with the Church in its action concerning the dismissal of Mr. Dudley.

Dismission voted. On 4 Feb., 1799, the Church "took into consideration the proposals laid before them at a former meeting by the pastor," and voted that they agree to a separation of the pastoral relation, and fixed on the first Wednesday in March as the day for the meeting of a council for the purpose, which council, consisting of Mr. Bailey of Ward, Mr. Mills of Sutton, Mr. Learned of Charlton and delegates, met on 6 March, 1799, and unanimously advised that Mr. Dudley's relation to Oxford Church should be dissolved.

On 12 Sept., 1799, a call was voted—the town proposing a salary of $300—to Rev. James Davis, to which he gave a negative response. On 17 Sept., 1800, the town voted "to hire Mr. Underwood for one month longer." This was Rev. Almon, later settled at West Woodstock. On 30 July, 1801, a unanimous call was given to Rev. Samuel Brown, which he declined in a letter, dated "Oxford 28 Nov. 1801," from which we learn he had for several months preached here and had become much attached to the people. A meeting of the Church was held 28 Dec., 1802, and a unanimous call voted to Rev. Hubbell Loomis, the town concurring, which was declined.

Mr. Moulton. Other candidates were heard but no pastor invited until 2 Jan., 1805, when REV. JOSIAH MOULTON of Upton received a unanimous call. He was installed 27 March, 1805, his pastor, Rev. Benjamin Wood, preaching the sermon. During his ministry there was a revival of interest in the Church and a steady accession of worthy members, about 60 having been added in the eight years of his service. He was the first minister of the town to hold social meetings in private houses and school-houses. Votes were passed by the Church soon after his settlement as follows: To hold a conference immediately after each sacramental lecture, and to choose a committee of three to assist the pastor in the examination of candidates for church membership. For this committee were chosen Ebenezer Humphrey, Dea. John Dana, and Jonathan Harris.

The matter of calling to account those members of the Church who withdrew during the pastorate of Mr. Bowman was brought up, discussed, and deferred from time to time and abandoned without action. Thanksgiving Day, Dec. 1, 1808, Mr. Andrew Sigourney presented the Church and Society with a Bible and Psalm-book for the desk of the North Meeting-house and received a vote of thanks therefor.

Moulton embarrassed. About 1812 dissatisfaction with Mr. Moulton sprang up, and to some extent the experiences of former years were repeated. So many withdrew from his support that his friends were unable to sustain him and appealed to the town for aid, which was refused.

Society formed. In this exigency on 15 March, 1813, the First Congregational Society of Oxford was organized at the house of Mr. Moulton, and he was one of its first board of officers. Its first action was to choose a committee to circulate subscription papers through the town for aid to sustain the pastor. But the effort was unsuccessful, and on 29 March, a vote was passed both by Church and Society that it was expedient that the Church join with the pastor in calling a council for his dismissal, which council was called for 6 April, 1813.

Moulton dismissed. This council embracing pastor and delegates from the following Churches: Sutton, Ward, Worcester, Sutton Second and Dudley, met at the proposed date and advised the termination of Mr. Moulton's pastorate. In the result it deprecated the condition of affairs which led to this action, distinctly conveyed censure of the people, and commended highly Mr. Moulton, saying, "no charge whatever is brought against him," but that while the majority have been faithful in sustaining him, individuals have very unjustly and dishonorably abandoned the obligation of their contract, and have discouraged the pastor in his labors.¹

On 19 May, 1814, is recorded the receipt by the Church of thirty dollars as a donation from the Religious Charitable Society for Worcester County.

On 8 May, 1815, an instrument was drawn up, and signed by certain individuals whereby they were bound under a forfeiture of five hundred dollars, to raise in the aggregate the sum of five hundred dollars per annum for ten years for the support of the Gospel in the Congregational Society in Oxford, the assessment to begin at the settlement of a minister. The signers were:—

Samuel Hartwell, Jonathan Harris, William T. Fisk, Peter Shumway, Samuel Coburn, Martha Kingsbury, Joseph Brown, William Cargel, Peter Butler, Nathan Hall, Joshua Turner, Thomas Russell, Joseph Stone, Abigail Plummer, Jonas Eddy, Amos Shumway, Jr., Jonas Eddy, Jr., Elias Pratt, Sylvanus Pratt, Elias Pratt, Jr., Archibald Campbell, Stearns Witt, Jeremiah Dana, Parley Eddy, Rufus Harris, Isaac Harris, Joseph Hurd, John Hurd, Russell Clark, Ebenezer Humphrey, John Dana, Samuel Smith, Charles P. Nichols, Benjamin F. Town, Delano Pierce, Peleg Foster, Charles Town, James Moulton, Alpheus Eddy, Lewis Shumway, William Hudson, Bradford Hudson, John Waite, John Hudson, Lemuel Crane, Ebenezer Dana, Benjamin Eddy, Jotham Eddy, Sylvanus Coburn, Sylvanus Town, Naomi Wolcott, Martin Sigournay, Jason Collier, Richard Gleason, Baxter Pratt.

This was a well advised and important movement and, as it were, placed the Society upon its feet financially, giving it an impetus which was felt for many succeeding years.

Mr. Batcheller. The next settled minister was REV. DAVID BATCHELLER. The first mention of him in the records is of date 11 Sept., 1815, when the Society instructed a committee to hire him "for two months more." On 4 Dec., 1815, the Church passed a unanimous vote inviting him to the pastorate in which the Society concurred, tendering him a salary of 375 dollars per annum, which he accepted. The council for installation met 13 Feb., 1816, for his examination, and on the 14th the public services were held. The churches represented were Sutton, Millbury, Dudley, Sturbridge, Charlton, and Ward. Rev. Mr. Whipple of Charlton preached the sermon. The new minister, by his earnestness, sympathetic temperament and social manners, gained rapidly in favor with the people and as affairs were unsettled in the Universalist Society and public services were held irregularly, many, who had been attendants came to the "North meeting," and several who had been supporters of that Society now gave their aid and influence to Mr. Batcheller. A list of 18 names not previously members of the Society appears in the records, of those who agreed to be taxed "during Mr. Batcheller's settlement," among whom were: Richard Olney, Jonathan Sibley, Charles J. Stratford, Elihu Harwood, Jr., John Tyson, Andrew W. Porter, and Dexter Tiffany.

South Meeting-house. At a Society meeting, 6 July, 1816, a proposition was received from the Second Religious Society, that Mr. Batcheller preach a part of the time in the South Meeting-house, on which a committee was chosen which, 10 Aug., reported that a committee of the Second Society had "consulted with the owners of the house and found no objections, but rather a wish that the experiment might be tried for the present." . . . they offering the use of "said house one or two Sabbaths in each month." So far as comfort and convenience were concerned a change was desirable, as the North Meeting-house had then become old and almost unfit for use. But for some reason the plan was not immediately acted upon. At a society meeting, 14 Sept., 1818, Mr. Batcheller made a request that he be permitted to preach twelve Sabbaths in a year at the South house, to which the meeting assented. Peter Butler, Bela Tiffany and John Merriam were chosen a committee to carry out the proposition, who reported 26 Oct., 1818, that the request for the use of the South house had been unanimously granted, on which it was voted that meetings commence there in November next, the third Sunday, and continue through the year the third Sunday in each month. On 27 Sept., 1819, a vote was passed to hold meetings in the South house two Sabbaths in each month through the year. In Sept., 1820, the Society voted to adopt the same plan for five years, "providing the house be free of rent, and the subscriptions the same they now are, during said term." This plan was adopted and continued until 1829, the date of the building of the new house on the south common.

On 7 Sept., 1820, the following persons not members of the Congregational Society, signed an agreement to pay a certain sum annually, for the support of public worship while Mr. Batcheller remained as minister provided he should preach half of the time in the South Meeting-house:

Jonathan Davis, Stephen Davis, Jonathan Davis, Jr., Calvin Aldrich, Calvin Phipps, Nehemiah Davis, Alice Fisk, Samuel Kingsbury, Jeremiah Kingsbury, William Moore, Charles Davis, Samuel Mayo, John Mayo, Abisha Learned, John B. Blanchard, William Sigourney, William Hurd, West Pope, Chester

Boyden, Joseph Lamb, Pope & Warner, Thomas Davis, Jr., Ebenezer Rich, Samuel Dowse, Solomon Harwood, Hopestill Harris, Samuel Merriam. The following agreed to be taxed for the same purpose—Richard Olney, Jonathan Sibley, Lucy Stratford, Charles J. Stratford, Abijah Nichols, Elihu Harwood, Jr., Henry Puffer, Reuel Moffit, Jesse Bigelow, Calvin Tucker, John Tyson, Andrew W. Porter, William Clark, Alexander Campbell, Stephen Webster, Samuel Harris, Dexter Tiffany, Roger Jewett, Hiram Moffit, Lyman Tiffany.

The ministry of Mr. Batcheller was very successful. The Society was much enlarged and strengthened, large numbers including people from other towns attended public worship, and the number of members added to the Church was over one hundred.¹ He did not, however, escape the trials and discouragements of his predecessors. At a Society meeting on 10 Dec., 1821, he communicated the following:

"Painful necessity compels me to inform you that unless there are more effective measures taken for my support and a greater promptitude in fulfilling your engagements to me, I shall hold myself at liberty to close my ministry in Oxford in six months from this date."

On this a committee was chosen to hold consultation and report—constituted as follows: Abijah Davis, Esq., Richard Olney, Peter Butler, Dr. Delano Pierce, Jonathan Davis, Esq., which recommended "considering the critical standing of religious institutions in this place," a subscription for four years, "binding to each and every individual." A committee was chosen to carry the plan into effect, but the records furnish no information as to the definite result. It was, however, in a measure successful and the spring and summer of 1822, was marked by a revival which brought in July an accession of 39 new members to the Church, a larger number than had before been admitted at one time.

Mr. Batcheller's death. A few weeks afterward the much loved pastor was stricken down and a short illness brought his decease on 25 Oct., 1822. His funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Wood of Upton. The Church erected a headstone at his grave, for which Rev. Enoch Pond furnished the inscription.²

In 1823, Rev. Amzi Benedict preached several weeks during the early part of the year and on 2 June the Church voted him a unanimous call, which he declined.

Mr. Newhall. On 23 Oct., 1823, EBENEZER NEWHALL received a unanimous invitation to the pastorate, the Society concurring, proposing a salary of $500 and a subscription settlement of $150 additional. He was installed 17 Dec., 1823, Rev. John Nelson of Leicester preaching the sermon.

Temperance. In the autumn of 1827 the evils of the use of ardent spirits were publicly recognized in a Church meeting, and on 7 Oct. the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

"As it is obvious to every observer that the evils of the prevalent use of strong drink are immense, that the importance of temperance is vastly great, and that new customs must be introduced by the concurrent effort of numbers, the Church of Oxford pass the following resolutions :

"1. It is the sense of this Church that no benefit is derived from the use of strong drink, not even from a moderate use of it.

"2. It is the sense of this Church that the prevailing use of strong drink is productive of great evils.

"3. Resolved that expediency and Christian duty now require all the members and communicants of this Church to abstain from all common use of strong drink in family, in company, at labor; that it be not used except in uncommon infrequent cases where it is decidedly advisable.

"4. Resolved that expediency and Christian duty require that in all ordinary cases strong drink be not used at funerals."

In 1831 dissatisfaction with the pastor began to appear, and in the warning for a meeting, 14 April, 1832, was an article "To Choose a committee to consider the subject of the future employment and support of a minister and report." This committee reported it expedient to communicate with Mr. Newhall as follows :

"That he continue his services until the expiration of the current half year, 17th of June next, and in consideration of his services and the respect the society bears toward him, they recommend that his salary be paid for six additional months, he to render such services during said time as may suit his convenience."

This report was accepted, and Mr. Newhall signified his acquiescence in a letter to the Society 5 May, 1832.

Newhall's Dismission. In a Church meeting, 17 May, it was voted to call a council for the dismission of Mr. Newhall on the ground of the action of the Society on this subject, which council was held 19 June, and the pastoral relation dissolved. During his ministry there was harmony and steady growth. Manufacturing had become fairly established at North Oxford, the Oxford Woolen Mill and the Thread Village, now Buffum's, the result of which was a general thrift in the town, and a valuable accession of members to the congregation and Church, and the building of the new meeting-house upon the Plain in 1829.

Union proposed. Immediately after the dismissal of Mr. Newhall the Second Religious Society unanimously, through a committee, made to the First Society a proposition for a union of the two bodies, in a communication setting forth the evils of divisions in the town and the multiplication of sects, and suggesting the settling of a minister over the united body, "orthodox in sentiment, but liberal in intercourse with other ministers, of proper qualifications and character." A committee of the First Society composed of Ira Barton, Peter Butler, Peter Shumway, Stephen Davis and Alexander DeWitt reported 6 Oct., 1832, upon the said proposition as follows :

"Resolved, that the members of this society cordially reciprocate the friendly sentiments expressed in said communication,—that we regard the division and multiplication of religious societies as an evil and that in order to correct it, it is the duty of ministers and all members of a Christian community to exercise great forbearance towards each other in all their religious concerns,—that an able administration of the Gospel in one Church and Society in this town would be adequate to the wants of the people provided they can walk together in harmony and Christian concord.—that in establishing such an administration of the Gospel, this society invites the co-operation of the members of the Second Society.—that a transfer of membership from one religious society to another must be individual, and not a corporate act, and that hence a vote of one Society to unite with another would in no wise bind the individual members of the Society so voting,—that the entire independence of each Church and Society with their minister, of every other religious or ecclesiastical body is a principle essential to civil and religious liberty,—that it is the sense of this Society that the minister should be ‘liberal in his intercourse with other ministers of proper qualifications and character,’ leaving it however to the ministers to regulate such intercourse according to his own discretion and that in case such discretion should be abused by the minister, the people would have an ample and rightful remedy in dismissing him.”

These resolutions were transmitted to the clerk of the Second Society, but the records of neither body show further action on the subject.

Mr. Robbins. On 25 Sept., 1832, a call was extended to Rev. LOREN ROBBINS, the Society concurring 6 Oct. and proposing a salary of $600 per annum, which was accepted, and on 26 Dec., 1832, he was installed, sermon by Rev. Prof. Fitch of New Haven. Until the spring of 1835 Mr. Robbins officiated with general satisfaction, but the additions to the Church were few. He being unmarried was unsettled in his home and study arrangements, and on the Sabbath preceding Fast Day, 1835, gave notice there would be no services on that occasion. Such an innovation on time-honored custom was a surprise to the people, a Society meeting was held to consider the matter and a committee chosen to confer with the pastor on the subject, which reported in effect that Mr. Robbins’ reasons for his course were unsatisfactory, and on 2 May the Society voted it expedient that the pastoral relation should be dissolved. He was formally dismissed by the council which met to install his successor, Rev. Horatio Bardwell, 8 June, 1836.

In the autumn of 1835 Rev. Almon Underwood, an evangelist, preached for several weeks, Mr. Robbins, nominal pastor, taking little part in the work. Extra meetings were held and a great interest awakened throughout the town, resulting in the greatest revival work the Church has ever witnessed. As the fruits thereof, in December 89 persons, several of them leading and influential citizens, were received to the Church on confession.¹

On 15 Dec., 1835, a unanimous call was voted to Rev. Barnabas Phinney, the Society concurring. Mr. Phinney at about the same time received a call to settle at Westboro’, which he accepted.

Mr. Bardwell. On 10 March, 1836, REV. HORATIO BARDWELL was invited to a settlement by a unanimous vote, in which the Society

¹ Mr. Underwood was a very energetic and fervent preacher, but not extreme in method or doctrine. He labored very successfully for many years in various parts of the country, living during his later years at Irvington, N. J., where he died 10 June, 1887.

concurred, proposing a salary of $750 per annum, which was accepted, and the installation took place on 8 June, 1836, Rev. John Nelson of Leicester preaching the sermon.

"Vestry" built. On 1 Dec., 1836, it was voted to appropriate the "Hagburn Fund," or the sum of $300, toward the building of a "vestry," on condition "enough can be made up by subscription to complete such building." Seth Daniels, Alexander DeWitt and Samuel Dowse were chosen to solicit subscriptions, procure a site, and contract for the completion of the same. This building was erected opposite the northeast corner of the cemetery and was used as a chapel until the removal of the meeting-house to its present location in the autumn of 1853.

Temperance. At a Church meeting, 2 July, 1836, it was voted :

"That in the present enlightened state of the public mind in regard to the evils and the remedy of intemperance, we feel ourselves bound by the spirit of the gospel to refrain entirely from the manufacture, sale and use of ardent spirits except as an article of medicine and that hereafter no person be considered as a candidate for admission to this church who does not act on this principle."

Under Mr. Bardwell's wise and able ministry for ten years there was steady growth and prosperity. On 23 May, 1847, he requested a dismission for the following reasons: that the Church had failed to act on the apostolic injunction to "bear one another's burdens." He had, as he stated, been endeavoring for years to remove this evil, which he considered serious and one which if suffered to continue would effectually prevent the prosperity of the Church and Society. But as he had failed to induce the members to act on this true basis of Christian equity, he asked to be excused from further service "in the hope that some other man [might] have the wisdom and influence to bring all the members of the Church to this rule of duty." The effect of this action was to remove in the main the difficulty, and the resignation was withdrawn. On 29 June, 1857, there was a reorganization of the Society in accordance with the State laws, which continued until 1887, at which date its corporate existence was relinquished and the Church assumed all its responsibilities.

In the autumn of 1857 Rev. Almon Underwood came for the second time; a revival followed, and in March, 1858, 40 new members were received into the Church.

Bardwell dismissed. On 20 July, 1862, Dr. Bardwell, feeling the infirmities of his years, asked a dismission, which, on 14 Aug., the Church granted, expressing a desire that he remain as nominal or senior pastor.¹

On 22 Nov., 1862, a call was voted to Rev. Tryon Edwards, D.D., in which, on 7 Feb., 1863, the Society concurred; the call was accepted, but there being a lack of unanimity among the people was withdrawn. On 31 March, 1864, a unanimous call was voted to Rev. Robert G. Hutchins which was declined.

On 29 April, 1864, the Church extended an invitation to REV. SAMUEL J. AUSTIN of Gardner, in which the Society concurred 4 May, proposing a salary of $1,000. Rev. John D. Potter had for several weeks been preaching, and there was during the winter of 1863-4 an unusual religious interest. On 1 May, 1864, 21 members were added to the Church. On 8 June, 1864, Rev. Mr. Austin was installed; the same council having at his own request dissolved the pastoral relation between Dr. Bardwell and the Church. The sermon was by Rev. Ebenezer Cutler, D. D., of Worcester. Mr. Austin resigned 26 Oct., 1868, and a council for his dismissal met 9 Nov., following.¹ From the spring of 1869 to 1 May, 1870, Rev. William W. Belden preached as stated supply. On 13 Sept., 1870, a unanimous call was voted by the Church to Rev. E. W. Allen, which he declined.

On 29 Jan., 1871, the Church celebrated with appropriate ceremonies the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of its formation. A historic address was given by Rev. Wilbur Johnson.

On 4 April, 1871, both Church and Society voted a unanimous call to Rev. THOMAS E. BABB of Eastport, Me., which was accepted, the salary being $1,400. He was installed on 20 September; sermon by Rev. A. H. Plumb of Chelsea. He resigned 18 Feb., 1877, the council for his dismissal convening 1 May.² Shortly after Mr. Babb's dismissal REV. AMZI B. EMMONS of Jamaica, Vt., occupied the pulpit, and in August was engaged as stated supply for a year at a salary of $1,000 and parsonage. On 16 Oct., 1878, he was installed as pastor; sermon by Rev. C. M. Lamson of Worcester. His pastorate continued until the close of 1881, when his health failed, and he died suddenly 18 Jan., 1882. On 16 Nov., 1882, Rev. B. A. Robie of Groton, later of Grafton, was voted a call in which the Society concurred, which was declined. On 22 Feb., 1883, Rev. Rufus B. Tobey received a unanimous invitation to the pastorate, the Society concurring, which was accepted. Ill health, however, obliged him to withdraw his acceptance.

On 9 April, 1883, REV. GEORGE B. FROST was voted a unanimous call, the Society concurring and proposing a salary of $1,000 with parsonage, which was accepted. He was ordained and installed 7 June, 1883; sermon by Prof. Wm. J. Tucker of Andover. Three years later his health being precarious, and an urgent call having been extended to him to remove to Dakota, he resigned, and was dismissed 15 Sept., 1886.³

REV. WILLIAM N. T. DEAN began his labor as supply in Jan., 1887, and was installed as pastor on 16 Nov. of that year, sermon by Rev. W. V. W. Davis, D.D., of Worcester, and continues, 1890.¹

John Town, 18 March, 1721, d. 1740; Daniel Hovey, 31 Jan., 1729, d. 1742; Samuel Davis, 26 Nov., 1735, d. 1760; Jonathan Town, 29 June, 1739, d. 1771; John Willson, 24 June, 1743, d. 1778; Thomas Davis, 26 Sept., 1760, d. 1778; Samuel Harris, 26 Sept., 1771, d. 1798; John Davis, 19 March, 1778, d. 1800; Ebenezer Humphrey (d. 1836) and John Dana (d. 1816), 24 Nov., 1798; Luke R. Stone (d. 1862) and John Hurd (d. 1866), 27 April, 1819; Seth Daniels (d. 1878) and Washburn Lumbard (d. 1872), 1835; Alvan G. Underwood, 2 Jan., 1852, d. 1885; Moses Stone, 2 Sept., 1858, d. 1882; Edward S. Pease, 1 Sept., 1865; Samuel Boyden, 5 Jan., 1866, d. 1884; Samuel C. Paine, 7 May, 1878, d. 1888; Daniel M. Howe, 2 May, 1882; George F. Daniels, 1 May, 1883; John E. Kimball, 10 Dec., 1888.

Membership. The number of members of the Church in May, 1886, was 183; males, 48; females, 135; non-residents, 20.

DeWitt Legacy. The following is an extract from the will of Col. Alexander DeWitt, dated 17 Jan., 1877 :

"I give and bequeath to the first Congregational Church in Oxford the sum of two thousand dollars, to be held in trust by the said church for the following purposes, to wit: First, to furnish in each successive year after my decease, to all the inmates of the poor-house on the 4th of July and on Christmas day with a fine dinner, to furnish everything necessary for the accomplishment of this object, aside from the products of the farm, such meats as they may think proper, oranges, lemons, pies, &c., and at Christmas fine turkey with all its fixings.

"Second, the residue or remainder of the income of the said legacy of two thousand dollars, I direct first, to be paid to feeble indigent women, members of the church aforesaid, to prevent if possible their ever becoming inmates of the poor-house, Second, should said women not need all of said income the remainder to be disposed of as said church may think proper.

"To the first Congregational Society in Oxford [I give] One thousand dollars to be held by said Society in trust, as follows, to wit: First, to keep the same at all times hereafter invested in safe and profitable securities . . . Second to devote so much of the income of said legacy as may be necessary to the care, keeping and proper adornment of my cemetery lot . . . for all time, hereafter. Third the balance of such income as may remain unexpended after care of my cemetery lot as aforesaid, shall be devoted to the purchase of books for the library of the Sabbath School connected with the said society.

"To the American Tract Society of New York I give the sum of one thousand dollars . . . upon the express condition that if at any time hereafter any union shall be effected between said society and the Tract society at Boston, then, and in that case this bequest shall revert to the first Congregational Society in Oxford aforesaid."

The New York and Boston Tract Societies united and this bequest came to the Oxford Congregational Society.

Dea. Stone Legacy. The following is from the will of Moses Stone, dated 4 Sept., 1882:

"I give, devise and bequeath the rest and residue of my estate . . . to the First Congregational Church in Oxford of which I have been a member for fifty years, to be safely invested . . . and kept as a permanent fund, only the income of which is to be used and as follows: so much as may be necessary to keep my cemetery lot . . . in good order, for all coming time; one half of what remains of said income, and more if it be thought best by the Pastor and deacons of said church to be given for the same objects for which the benevolent offerings from the boxes in the said church are given: the remainder of said income to be used as the church may think proper."

Dea. Stone died 30 Sept., 1882. The amount of the above bequest was $9,449.

Mrs. DeWitt Legacy. Mrs. Mary M. DeWitt, widow of Col. Alexander DeWitt, died 6 April, 1887. In a codicil to her will, dated 22 Feb., 1879, she made the town of Oxford and the Congregational Church of Oxford equally, residuary legatees, unconditionally. Of this legacy the Church received, May, 1890, $14,000, with a balance in the hands of the executor.

Universalist Society. No religious organization other than the "standing order" existed in the town prior to 1785. Baptist Churches had been established in Sutton and Charlton, and a few Oxford families worshipped with them, and after the enactment of the Exemption law, in 1757, were free from ministerial taxation here, on the certificate of the officers of those bodies that they were there supporters of worship. The current of religious affairs seems to have run quietly until near the Revolution. In Jan., 1777, Jeremiah Learned, Samuel Davis, Jr., Marvin Moore, and Collins Moore petitioned the town to be exempted from the payment of the ministerial tax of 1776, which by a unanimous vote was refused. The following document, without date, is in the town archives. On it we find no recorded action. Most of its subscribers became active members of the Universalist Society.

"To the Selectmen of Oxford.

"We the Subscribers, Being Inhabitants of Said Town and the Denomination of Christians which are Friends, are Desirous of Common Justice With our Neighbors, Desire and Request you to Insert an article in your warrant for March meeting to see if the town will Vote to Leave us and all of Different Persuasions from your way of Worship and Do Not attend at your meeting out of the minister's Rates, as we Cannot in Conscience Pay them, it Being Contrary to God's word.

"Signed,

Jeremiah Learned.	Elijah Davis.	Joseph Davis, Jr.
Samuel Davis, Jr.	Simon Town.	John Mayo."
Marvin Moore.	Larned Davis.

The beginnings of Universalism in Oxford, according to tradition, are attributable to Isaac Davis, M.D., of Somers, Conn., who it is said made frequent visits to Oxford and in conversation made converts to his belief.¹

Another pioneer was Caleb Rich, a native of Sutton, previously a Baptist, who removed to Warwick and was a soldier from that town at Cambridge, in 1775, and while on a furlough visited his friends and relatives here and very earnestly pressed his then new theological opinions, making converts. The chief agent however in establishing the denomination appears to have been ADAMS STREETER, who was first a Baptist at Charlton and later at Douglas, changed his belief about 1777, and for several years prior to 1785 had preached not only here but in other towns in the vicinity, and was at the latter date a resident of Oxford.²

Society formed. The records of the Universalist Society under date 27 April, 1785, open with the declaration that a number of professors of the protestant religion in Oxford and adjacent towns had for a number of years assembled for public worship and attended the instructions of Rev. Adams Streeter, and supported him by their contributions, and being assembled at the school-house on Oxford Plain, in order to form themselves into a body corporate and to follow such measures as are provided for that purpose by the constitution of the State—chose Dr. Daniel Fisk, Moderator,—and voted to denominate themselves, “The second Religious Society in Oxford, and the third Independent Religious Society in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts called Universalists.” Samuel Davis, Jr., Collins Moore, and Jonathan Davis of Oxford, Ebenezer Davis of Charlton, Ebenezer Rich of Sutton, and Israel Stone of Ward, were chosen a Select Committee with power to give certificates to members “in case there should be a vacancy of a Public Teacher.” It was voted to adopt a “Charter of Compact” as received from the first Independent Christian Society in Gloucester which provided for an Annual Meeting for the choice of officers, whose duties it prescribed; declared that funds should be raised by voluntary subscription to pay all expenses, to repair the “public edifice,” and for the “relief of the poor distressed brethren,”—and closed thus:

“Whereas the privilege of choosing and professing our own religion is inestimable and in order to maintain that privilege unimpaired, in case any person associating with us should suffer persecution from undue exercise of power, we do agree and resolve to afford all legal means of extricating him from difficulty and of enjoying the freedom held forth by the constitution.”

A declaration follows, that the subscribers belong to the second Religious Society in Oxford—called Universalists.” A subscription for the support of Rev. Adams Streeter as “Teacher of Piety, Religion and Morality” is appended.

Members. The signers of the compact were:

Jeremiah Learned, Abijah Harris, Collins Moore, Benj. Hovey, Marvin Moore, Samuel Davis, Jr., Jacob Kingsbury, Joshua Barnard, Samuel

Kingsbury, Joseph Davis, Craft Davis, Benj. Davis, Jr., John Bounds, Isaac Moffitt, Caleb Smith, Josiah Kingsbury, John White, James Gleason, James Gleason, Jr., Levi Wight, Jonathan Corbin, Jacob Shumway, Jr., Asa Larned, Andrew Walker, Jacob Streeter, William Moore, Daniel Fisk, Abiel Atwood, Thomas Clark, Daniel Phillips, Ezra Conant, Joseph Rockwood, Larned Davis, James Streeter, Elijah Davis, David D. Town, Jeremiah Davis, John Mayo, Hovey Davis, Jonathan Shattuck, Ebenezer Redding, John Pratt, Jonathan Davis, Solomon Harwood, Elihu Moffitt, Benj. Learned, Aaron Parker, Jr., William Foster, Nathan Thurston, Abijah Davis, Solomon Cook, Thomas Wolcott, Abraham Fitts, Walter Fitts, James Phillips, Timothy Sparhawk, Thomas Davis, Ezekiel Davis, Edward Grow, David Mellen,—making 60 from Oxford and South Gore, 11 [not here named] were of Ward,—3 of Woodstock,—18 of Sutton,—4 of Dudley,—31 of Charlton,—2 of Holland,—and 1 of Sturbridge, a total of 130.

Mr. Streeter continued his labors as pastor. On 24 May, 1786, circular letters were voted to the sister Societies in Norwich and Portsmouth, and Choristers were chosen, viz.: Abijah Harris, Samuel Davis, Jr., and Jonathan Davis. On 16 Aug., of the same year, Adams Streeter, Ebenezer Rich of Sutton and Israel Stone of Ward were chosen delegates to the Annual Association to meet in Boston the Sept. following. Mr. Streeter was not privileged to attend this meeting as he died on the third day of the month in which it was held. After Mr. Streeter's decease the Society had no stated minister until 1788. On 20 April, an invitation was given to REV. ELKANAH INGALLS of Grafton to supply the pulpit for the ensuing year, which was accepted.¹ The next stated preacher was REV. THOMAS BARNES, who came in the Spring of 1789. He had been a Baptist but became a disciple of Caleb Rich and a co-laborer with him at Richmond, N. H., adjoining Warwick. He, it is said, in a large measure filled the place of Mr. Streeter. Under his preaching preparatory work was done toward building the Meeting-house, and the frame thereof had been raised and the exterior finished before his removal in the early part of 1793. At the annual meeting for that year the committee were instructed to hire "Public Teachers" for the first Sunday in each month.² The next regular preacher was MICHAEL COFFIN from the State of New York. He attended the Convention in 1793, and on 24 March, 1794, it was voted to invite him to preach one-half the time for the ensuing year. He continued until the early part of 1797, as appears, when he left town under somewhat discreditable circumstances.³

Mr. Ballou. We do not learn that the Society had a regular supply after Mr. Coffin until 1800, when it was voted to employ REV. HOSEA BALLOU for the ensuing year. In 1801, the vote was renewed, and in 1802, it was "voted, to engage him for the year, the first Sunday

¹ Mr. Ingalls was from Rehoboth, and settled Oct., 1784, as pastor of the Baptist Church in Grafton. Three years later he declared himself a Universalist. After leaving Oxford he returned to Rehoboth and died there.

² Mr. Barnes went from this town to Woodstock, Conn., and thence in 1798 or 1799 to Poland, Me., where, after laboring in that region until 1816, he died 3 Oct. of that year.

in each month as usual," and Rev. Edward Turner for six Sundays.¹ For about three years therefore the Oxford Society sat under the preaching of one of the ablest of the ministers of the denomination.²

Eighteen years of the Society's existence passed, and many changes had taken place. Other similar bodies had been formed in neighboring places, and instead of a large "Select Committee" from six or eight towns formerly chosen, the directors from 1804 to 1807, were of Oxford and Charlton only. In 1808, they were from Oxford and Ward and for that year the subscriptions were for the support of Rev. Edward Turner. There was no stated minister between 1803, when Mr. Ballou left, and 1811. Each year however there was a subscription to pay expenses, and for most of this time preaching was kept up at intervals, as the financial reports testify.

Convention. One of the first measures adopted by the Oxford Society was to call a Convention of all the bodies of like faith in the country, which was held 14 Sept., 1785. Rev. Elhanan Winchester was president, and Dr. Daniel Fisk, clerk.³

Ballou's Ordination. This Annual Session was held again here in 1791, and the celebrated John Murray was present. In 1794, again the Convention—which became a permanent institution in the denomination—assembled in the newly finished Meeting-house, and Winchester who had just returned from a long sojourn in England was a member. Hosea Ballou then 23 years of age was also present, and met Winchester for the first time. An interesting incident of this meeting was the impromptu ordination of Ballou who had then been preaching for three years. Rev. Thomas Whittemore describing this occurrence says :

"At one of the public services of the Convention Winchester preached. In the pulpit with him sat Ballou and Joab Young. As Winchester drew near the close of his sermon he began to have a clear reference to an ordination, especially to the 'Delivery of the Scriptures' to the candidate. He took up the Bible and pressing it against the breast of the young man said, 'Brother Ballou I press to your heart the written Jehovah!' The effect on the Congregation was sudden and powerful. After holding the sacred volume in this manner for a moment he said to Young in an imperative but affectionate tone, 'Brother Young, Charge him!' which the Elder proceeded to do."

Ballou was ignorant of Winchester's intentions until he began his remarks peculiar to the service.

The subscription for 1811 was for REV. JOHN NICHOLS of Woodstock, a liberal Baptist. He preached at least once a month for ¹Turner was an itinerant, residing at Sturbridge, a man of ability and culture.

²*Hosea Ballou* was born in Richmond, N. H., in 1771; spent his early life in itinerating; chiefly resided at Hardwick, now Dana, until 1803, when he removed to Barnard, Vt. He went thence in 1809, to Portsmouth, N. H., and in 1815 to Salem, and thence in 1817 to Boston, where he died 7 June, 1852, aged 81.

³*Elhanan Winchester* was born 1751, at Newton, Mass., preached at 21, and was called the father of the Baptist Church in that place. He was of an unsettled and roving disposition, travelled largely, and made deep impressions wherever he preached. He settled over a Baptist Church at Philadelphia and while there became a Universalist. His character was unquestioned and his piety universally admitted. [His. of Newton.]

about two years. On 22 Dec., 1813, it was voted to "engage REV. RICHARD CARRIQUE another year," indicating that he had supplied for 1813 and continued the next year.¹ REV. JACOB WOOD was the next minister, and resided in town, continuing several years. From about 1817 to 1824 no records appear. At the latter date officers were elected as follows: John Mayo, Moderator; Larned Davis, Clerk; Richard Olney, Treasurer; Stephen Barton, Charles J. Stratford, Davie B. Kingsbury, Assessors; John Mayo, Cyrus Lamb, Nathaniel Davis, Ebenezer Rich and John Field, Committee. In 1824 a vote was passed to raise money by subscription to support preaching, and in April, 1826, $200 was voted, to be raised by taxation for the same purpose, and 114 persons and firms were on the tax list. In 1827 and 1828 the subscription plan was adopted again, the latter year the sum of $275 being voted. Until now there was no regular stated preacher, but occasional services were held.

Mr. Maynard. On 18 Feb., 1828, it was voted to hire REV. LYMAN MAYNARD one-half the time for a year. On 24 Dec., 1828, under his ministry a Church of 16 members was formed, denominating itself the Second Christian Church, Oxford, on a broad basis of belief; the points distinguishing the Universalists proper from the Restorationists not being alluded to in the creed. In 1833 the Church numbered 22.² On 23 Jan., 1832, it was voted to terminate the Society's contract with Mr. Maynard at the end of six months, and at the same meeting voted to confer with REV. SETH CHANDLER, or some other "believer in the Restoration of all things" to supply the pulpit at the end of that time, which vote was amended so as to read "some Unitarian," instead of Rev. Seth Chandler. On 2 Feb., 1833, the Church again voted "that this Church be hereafter known as the SECOND CHRISTIAN CHURCH, Oxford, it having been previously called the Universalist Church." On 29 Oct., 1832, a call to MR. CHANDLER was voted to preach 32 Sabbaths in a year at a salary proportioned at $325 per annum. The Church, 11 Dec., concurred, and he was installed 29 May, 1833; sermon by Rev. Samuel J. May of Brooklyn, Conn. On the last Sunday in May, 1834, his labors closed, he having asked a dismissal.³ On 28 March, 1835, it was voted that the Meeting-house be opened for one year to any denomination at any time when the Society do not occupy it.

Mr. Paine. By invitation of several members of the Society Rev. Benjamin Paine began his labors, and for about two years preached in the Meeting-house, laying the foundations of the Methodist Church in Oxford. During this time an effort, which came near being successful, was made to buy up the pews and transfer the house to that denomination. On 7 June, 1837, it was voted that the house should be closed at the end of six months if the Methodists refused to pay the rent agreed on, viz.: "15 dollars for three fourths of the time for six months, or in that proportion." In March, 1839, it was voted to employ REV. GILMAN NOYES as preacher for one Sabbath in each month, and in 1840 the vote was renewed.¹ In March, 1841, it was voted to hire REV. ALVAN ABBOTT, the minister at West Sutton, one-half the time for a year; 1842, voted that he be hired for six months, and more if money is raised, and in 1843 the same for half the time if funds are sufficient.

The next stated minister was REV. ALFRED BARNES, who came in the spring of 1844 and continued for about two years, the house of worship having been remodelled during his ministry. The records at this period are very defective. In March, 1847, $197 had been paid for preaching to REV. ROTHEUS M. BYRAM of Kennebunkport, Me., who continued about two years.² In the spring of 1849, REV. JACOB BAKER of Dudley became stated supply, continuing three years, and was succeeded in April, 1852, by REV. ALBERT TYLER, now of Oxford, who resigned his office in Jan., 1854, but continued to preach until April. REV. HARRISON CLOSSON from Chicopee succeeded Mr. Tyler in the spring of 1854, and continued until Dec., 1855, when he resigned. On 5 March, 1856, the Society voted to hire as a supply REV. O. H. TILLOTSON of Worcester, who officiated during the spring and summer of 1856 and 1857, closing 1 Oct., 1857. On 10 April, 1856, the constitution of the Society was revised on the basis of the doctrine of Universal Salvation. In March, 1858, REV. GEORGE PROCTOR began his labors, continuing until 30 Dec., 1860. So far as appears there was no regular preaching in 1861. In 1862 REV. ZEPHANIAH BAKER of Dudley was stated supply, continuing about two years, when the Society voted to have a young minister to be settled in town. Upon this vote REV. THEODORE L. DEAN of Shrewsbury came in 1864. REV. FRANKLIN C. FLINT of Shrewsbury preached for a time in 1865, and the same year REV. GEORGE J. SANGER (pastor at Webster; later settled at Essex, Mass.) became stated supply, continuing a year or more. On 4 March, 1868, the committee reported they had engaged REV. J. E. DAVENPORT for the year at a salary of $900. He remained about two years and removed to Chicopee.³ On 8 March, 1871, the Society authorized its committee to hire REV. WILLIAM W. WILSON, who supplied until 30 Sept., 1872.⁴ Rev. Albert Tyler next supplied from the early continuing to 1856, when he removed to Southbridge where he was pastor eight years, leaving in 1864 and returning to West Haverhill. In 1867 he began preaching as pastor at Chatham, Mass., but the climate not agreeing with him removed, 1869, to Shirley, Mass. In Oct., 1870, he came to Oxford as supply, continuing until Sept., 1872, when his health failing he retired, and died 19 June, 1874.

part of 1873 to March, 1874, since which time there has been no resident minister. Preaching was continued by Rev. John H. Moore and Rev. Julius F. Simmons, pastors of the Webster Church, up to 1884. Later, meetings were irregular, until the spring of 1887, when they were resumed, and conducted first for a few weeks by Rev. Lucius Holmes of Charlton, and afterwards by Rev. E. W. Preble, the Webster pastor, who in 1890 continues to officiate.

Baptist Church and Society. A new Meeting-house having been erected at North Oxford, a Religious Society was formed 5 April, 1837, with the following members :

Jennison Barton, Amasa Eddy, William Copp, Smith Bruce, David Hall, Elbridge G. Warren, Robert Pitts, Waterman G. Warren, Maverick Jennison, Ebenezer Newton, Amos P. Newton, David Stone, David Holman, William Dalrymple, James Boomer, Martin Boomer, Ebenezer Cook, Warren Bruce, Fenner S. Hopkins, Daniel Jennison, Flavel Leach, Andrew J. Copp, Jonathan Flagg, Samuel Warren, William Boomer. [25.]

On 1 May a meeting of brethren recently dismissed from the Baptist Church in Auburn, chose as deacons of the new Church Jennison Barton and William Copp, and voted to call a council "to consider their case and if cause appears, to extend to them the hand of fellowship." This council met on 10 May, the day of the dedication of the house, and recognized the applicants as a Church, Rev. Harvey Pitts giving the right hand of fellowship. Thus became established the First Baptist Church at North Oxford, with a membership of 36, a majority of whom were from the Auburn Church.

Mr. Lyon. The first pastor was REV. ABIAH S. LYON of Sturbridge, ordained 13 March, 1838. He was a man of good ability; graduated at Brown University in 1837. Soon after his settlement a revival began, resulting in an addition to the Church of nearly 40 members. On 6 March, 1847, he resigned.¹ On 7 Aug., 1841, Samuel Jennison and Martin Boomer were chosen deacons. On 6 May, 1843, the following was voted as the sentiments of the Church on the slavery question :

"Whereas the silence of the Church of the North on the subject of Slavery is construed by the church of the South into an argument in favor of that institution—Resolved that we regard Slavery as a very great evil, and a sin, and as a most palpable violation of the inalienable rights of man, and as diametrically opposed to the spirit and precepts of the Gospel,—'Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you do ye even so to them.'—'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'"

On 3 Oct., 1843, Luther Stone was ordained an Evangelist. On 6 April, 1844, Dea. Jennison Barton having removed, Lot W. Bruce was chosen deacon. On 5 June, 1847, REV. SOLOMON GALE of West Greenwich, N. Y., was chosen pastor. He remained until April, 1848, when he removed to Pomfret, Conn. On 4 Sept., 1847, Moses K.

¹ He was later settled at Chatham and Natick, Mass., and Newport, Minn., where he died 13 Sept., 1871.

Shepardson was chosen deacon in place of Mr. Bruce, deceased. The next pastor was REV. I. N. HOBART, who began about Jan., 1849. His was a pastorate of vigor and influence. He was dismissed 25 April, 1852, and removed to Bristol, R. I.; later he was State missionary in Illinois, where he died 23 Aug., 1887. Under his ministry, in 1850, the Church voted that "no person who uses ardent spirits as a beverage shall hereafter be admitted to membership with this church." In the spring of 1852 REV. JOSEPH HODGES, JR., from East Brookfield, became pastor, acting until 3 March, 1855. Later that year REV. JOHN E. WOOD of North Tewksbury came, continuing until May, 1856, after which time REV. H. A. JOY was stated supply for six months. In March, 1857, REV. C. M. HERRING from Dexter, Me., was engaged as supply. His services were highly appreciated. In 1859 he returned to Maine, where he has since labored successfully. In Dec., 1859, REV. HOLMES CHIPMAN from Machias, Me., became pastor. His service closed in the spring of 1861, when he removed to Vermont, where he died. The number of Church members as reported under his ministry was 121.

REV. JOSEPH SMITH, born at East Hampstead, N. H., succeeded Mr. Chipman. He was a man of ability but of infirm health, and was not settled. He began his labors in 1861, and continued successfully until 26 April, 1866, when he died suddenly, aged 58. Early in 1864 he was aided for several weeks by Rev. J. D. Potter of Westboro', and many members were added to the Church as the fruits of a revival. On 28 Aug., 1867, REV. WILLIAM H. SHEDD was ordained pastor; sermon by Prof. Anderson, D.D., of Newton. He was an earnest man, and many conversions took place during his ministry, the Church membership increasing to 193. He resigned March, 1870, and removed to Waltham, and died 7 March, 1873, at Watertown. On 31 March, 1868, Sherman Warren, and 3 April, 1869, William Newton and Warren Smith were chosen deacons.

On 11 Sept., 1870, a call was given to REV. JAMES W. LATHROP of Beverly, who began his labors 1 Nov. His ministry of nearly three years was highly beneficial. On 1 Sept., 1873, he removed to Raynham; returned to North Oxford and was received to the Church 4 Nov., 1876. His present residence is at Oxford centre.

REV. OLIVER AYER from Groton, the next pastor, was settled in April, 1874, and closed his labors April, 1880. He was a good preacher, a faithful pastor, and an esteemed citizen. He remained at North Oxford until 1885, when he removed to Providence. In the fall of 1877 Mr. Potter was again invited to North Oxford, and a revival followed. On 1 May, 1880, REV. H. H. BEAMAN from West Bridgewater began his labors. His term of service was short. His wife died 15 June, 1881, from the shock of which he never recovered, but died suddenly the tenth of August following. In July, 1882, REV. WILLIAM H. FISH was voted a call, and continued until 1 June, 1883, when he resigned. On 27 Aug. a call was voted to REV. W. H. EVANS from Littleton, who came and continued to 1 Oct., 1885, after which date there was no settled pastor until Nov., 1889, when REV. CHARLES R. BAILEY, the present incumbent, began his labors.

Methodist Episcopal Church. So far as known the first preaching in town by a Methodist minister was in 1829, in which year Rev. Ira M. Bidwell, as he himself stated, held meetings a few times in the south part of the town. He also says others preached the same year in the north part. The first service held on the Plain was in 1830, at the house of Abijah Davis, Esq., by John Lovejoy, who was the successor of Bidwell on Thompson circuit, and who came at the solicitation of William Hurd, who may be called the original man of the faith in Oxford. Thereafter occasional meetings were held in school-houses and dwellings, and as early as 1835 it is said Joel Knight and Joseph S. Ellis of Dudley had each preached in the South Meeting-house. In Feb. or March, 1835, at the invitation of Hiram Moffitt, Mr. Bidwell, then of Webster, came again to Oxford and preached twice at least, first at the school-house near the south end of the Plain, and next in the South Meeting-house. Several influential members of the Universalist Society favored the movement, and the house was freely opened as has been stated.¹ Mr. Harwood joined heartily with Moffitt in efforts to carry on the work, and a considerable sum was raised by subscription to pay expenses. Mr. Bidwell represented their case before the Conference of 1835, which for want of a proper man to send made no provision for them. On his way home from Conference Mr. Bidwell fell in with Rev. Benjamin Paine, then of Saundersville, and on stating the case to him Mr. Paine consented to come and look over the field. He found a condition of things which interested him and immediately began his labors on his own responsibility. His doings were approved by the Presiding Elder who appointed him as preacher, thus giving him the standing of "stated supply." In July he removed to town, and on 15 Sept. established a "Class" of 20 members. This was the founding of this branch of the Church in its initiatory stage. Mr. Paine remained two years preaching in the South house, which was hired three-fourths of the time, and the other portion of the time at the school-room of Richard Stone. The enterprise flourished, and the effort to buy up the pews in the meeting-house failing it was decided to build a chapel, which was done in 1841. Rev. Thomas Tucker succeeded Mr. Paine, and thereafter the society gradually enlarged and was prosperous.

From the completion of the new church building in 1868, to 1880 the pews were rented to pay expenses. At the latter date, under Mr. Wilder's ministry, the free seat system was adopted and continues, 1890.

Camp Meeting. The only camp meeting held in Oxford was in 1840, beginning 24 Aug., in a woodland south of Buffumville. The attendance was large; 25 preachers were present, and the meetings were orderly and considered successful.

Revivals. In the winter of 1842-3, under Rev. Horace Moulton, there was a revival, meetings were held for 100 successive evenings, and many professed conversion. In 1850 there was unusual interest and 30 were added to the Church on probation. In the autumn of 1857 under Rev. William Gordon, the winter of 1866-7 under Rev. Daniel E. Chapin, and 1877-8 under Rev. Osman W. Adams, there were revivals.

Between the years 1865 and 1880 six young men from Oxford Church entered the ministry of this denomination, viz.: Ithiel T. Johnson, William F. Davis and Charles E. Davis, brothers, Nelson Devneau, Albert A. Kidder and William H. Marble.

Ministers stationed at Oxford. For 1835-6, BENJAMIN PAINE, d. 31 Oct., 1883, at Ox.; 1837-8, THOMAS W. TUCKER, d. 6 Aug., 1871, a. 80; 1839, LUMAN BOYDEN, d. 9 March, 1876, at E. Protestant Episcopal Church. Worship in the Episcopal form began July, 1863, in Sanford's Hall, was conducted by different clergymen from churches in the vicinity until 11 Oct., when Rev. WILLIAM F. LHOYD became rector. During his ministry the church edifice was built, and a good congregation gathered. His services closed 30 June, 1867. He was succeeded by REV. WILLIAM H. Brooks, D.D., of Pittsfield, who began 20 Oct., 1867, and accepted a call to the rectorship 9 May, 1868. His labors ended 1 Oct., 1869. For several years afterward there was no settled ministry, and the church was closed, except that occasionally Rev. Benjamin F. Cooley of Rochdale officiated on a Sabbath afternoon. During the early part of 1877, and until October, REV. J. D. REID was stated supply. On 7 Oct., 1877, Rev. W. F. Lhoyd was engaged as acting rector and continued until 2 Feb., 1879. After his second term of service ended the church was closed for a time. Later Rev. Thomas W. Nickerson, present rector at Rochdale, conducted service for several seasons during the summer on Sunday afternoon. Much of the time, however, there was no service. On 21 June, 1885, REV. ARTHUR PROFFITT assumed the rectorship and officiated until 27 June, 1886. In 1889, regular worship was held on Sunday afternoon, conducted by the rector of Webster Church.

The Diocesan Records give the number of communicants as follows:—1864, 6; '65, 8; '66, 18; '67, 16; '68, 15; '69, 20; '70, 14; '71 and '72, no report; '73, 8; '74 to '80, no report; '81, '82 and '83, each 15; '84, 10; '85, 15; '86, 15. In 1878,—Sunday-school, 30 scholars, 6 teachers; Wardens, 1883 to 1886, Emory E. Harwood, Leonard E. Thayer; 1887, Leonard E. Thayer, Joseph Sharples.

Roman Catholic Church. The first Roman Catholic service in Oxford, was conducted by Rev. Fr. Gibson of Boston on 28 July, 1851, at the house of Michael Toomey, H. 175, on Millbury road—house burned in 1883. The next was by Rev. Fr. McNulty of Webster, on Christmas, 1852, at Mrs. Mary Ann Young's in Hodges' Village. From that time at Mr. Toomey's, and the school-house which stood near, at Mrs. Young's, and at North Oxford, mass was celebrated at irregular intervals until 1857, Fr. McNulty officiating. In 1858, soon after the building of the first house of worship was undertaken, and before its completion, REV. FR. JAMES QUAN of Webster took charge of the Parish, and with his assistants conducted services regularly here until 1 May, 1886, at which time REV. FR. CHARLES J. BOYLAN was put in charge and, 1890, continues.

First Meeting-house. At a town meeting held 29 July, 1714, it was voted to build a Meeting-house 30 feet square, and 18 feet stud, to be set on the west side of the highway near Twichell's field, John Town, Benjamin Chamberlain and Isaac Larned were chosen a building committee, and it was voted "that every lot man shall pay his proportion in labor as the committee shall direct, or pay two shillings and 6 pence per day for neglect of the same." This enterprise was not entered upon for nearly three years but the house was in time built near the northwest corner of the common, north of the highway over Camp Hill. It was a plain substantial structure, without porch or tower, with double doors on the south side, a pulpit opposite and galleries on either side. The main body of the house probably had seats of plank with rude backs, running in two tiers the length of the house with an aisle in the centre—the men occupying the westerly and the women the easterly tier—and three or four privileged citizens had box-like pews in different parts of the house, on either side of the pulpit and near the doors.

On 30 Nov., 1714, it was voted to "build a house 15 feet long, 12 feet wide and 7 feet stud, and set it by Lieut. Moore's." The design of this building is a matter of conjecture. Lieut. Moore was the inn-keeper, and as this building was to cost only £4. 5s. and as Moore agreed to take it of the town or permit the town to remove it when they saw fit, it may have been for temporary use as a house of worship and for town meetings until the projected Meeting-house could be erected.

Appropriation. On 29 Jan., 1717, £100 was voted by the town towards building a Meeting-house and it was decided "to go about building it forthwith," and John Town, Richard Moore, Ebenezer Learned, Isaac Larned, and Benoni Twichell were chosen to "take in and dispose of" the money voted, the said house "to be a girt house boarded and clapboarded on the outside." Precisely what was done upon this vote is difficult to determine from the records. In the warning for a meeting 19 Aug., 1717, notice was given that it would be held in the "meeting-house." This may have been the temporary building "by Lieut. Moore's," or the unfinished new house. The building certainly was not then nearly finished, as on 27 Jan., 1718, the town met and chose Philip Amidown, Ebenezer Learned and John Town a "new committee for building the meeting-house." This meeting it is recorded was by vote continued "one hour after sundown." The selectmen were instructed to "make a rate" forthwith for the said one hundred pounds and deliver it to the constable for collection. The building proceeded and the house was occupied long before its completion. In March, 1721, Benoni Twichell was chosen to sweep the Meeting-house. Feb. 11, 1723, permission was voted to Mr. Campbell to "build a pew the east side of the pulpit, from that to the middle of the post under the gallery beam, and extending to the corner of the deacon's seat, at the charge of the town," and Capt. Richard Moore a like privilege opposite on the west side of the pulpit. On 29 March, 1724, Ebenezer Learned was voted leave to build in the northeast corner joining Mr. Campbell's. On 13 May, 1724, it was voted to expend one-half the interest money due the town [on the colonial loan]; "of the first three years, that it should buy glass for to repaire the meeting-house windows and for nails for the meeting-house spedely." At this time as we shall see hereafter the house was but a shell and unfinished inside.

In 1727 it had need of repairs and 9 Oct. £10 were voted "to be added to the old arrearages towards repairing the meeting-house." On 4 May, 1730, £20 were voted towards finishing the Meeting-house, and the selectmen instructed to spend the same within six months. On 6 March, 1732, it was voted to lay another floor and alter the seats and ceil the sides of the house, and also that "Richard Waters shall build three pews and alter the stairs," at the town expense.

On 5 March, 1733, it was "voted to lath and plaster the meeting-house." In the years 1734 and 1735 the house was considerably changed internally, and the latter year brought nearly or quite to a completion, having been about 18 years in building. On 4 March, 1734, it was voted:

"That Capt. Ebenezer Learned shall have a pew on the easterly part of the meeting house behind y^e woman's seats adjoining the double doors, he paying ten pounds and also his equal proportion towards finishing the house. also that Samuel Davis have the same privelege on the west side the double doors on the same conditions, also that Richard Moore may enlarge his pew, turning y^e pulpit stairs if Mr. Campbell be willing and make a door for the deacon's seats: also that Uriah Gleason, Jonas Pratt, Jonas Gleason, Isaac Larned, Ethemer Amidown, Simon Gleason and Joseph Pratt, have leave to build a pew on the back side of the front seat in the gallery in the men's part, and that Isaac Larned have the pew in the northeast corner of the house formerly Ebenezer Learned's, all to pay their proportion toward finishing the house."

These alterations were made by Richard Waters, who was "reckoned with" by a committee chosen 16 Feb., 1736. The last entry referring to this subject was 6 Jan., 1737, when £14 was voted to pay final bills. The house was occupied until 1748. On 5 March, 1750, it was struck off at auction at £66 to Moses Gleason. It did not, however, go into his possession, but was sold by a committee for the purpose in 1752 with the lot to Dr. Jabez Holden, who used parts of it in building a barn, which was removed by Benj. F. White after his purchase of the place.

As time passed, population increased, Mr. Campbell grew in the esteem of the people, and the old sanctuary was becoming too small for their needs. The town extended northerly, and the location of the first house was quite one side from the centre. Very soon after its completion, therefore, the subject of the building of a second and larger house was agitated.

New Meeting-house. On 12 March, 1739, the town voted "that when there shall be a new Meeting-house erected it shall be set in the centre of the 12,000 acre grant." On 25 Aug., 1743, a vote was passed to proceed to carry out the plan for a new Meeting-house "for the better accommodation of the inhabitants of the town." On the 10th of June, previous to this vote, Daniel Boyden petitioned the General Court in behalf of the inhabitants of the northwest part of Sutton, the southwest part of Worcester, the southeast part of Leicester and the northeast part of Oxford to be set off as a separate precinct. While this petition was pending this action in reference to a new house was taken, and the request, probably on that account, was dismissed. The question of a location became a matter of warm controversy, and the subject was referred to William Ward, Esq., of Westboro', Maj. John Keyes of Shrewsbury, Capt. John Harrod of Uxbridge, Capt. Josiah Converse of Brookfield and Capt. John Hubbard of Rutland. On 8 March, 1744, William Ward, John Keyes and John Hubbard met, and after a hearing fixed upon the north common as the proper location, which action was ratified by the town 23 Oct., 1744, and at the same meeting Samuel Davis, Ebenezer Learned, Israel Town, Elijah Moore and Joseph Phillips were chosen "to consider dimensions and cost" and to provide materials. Later Jonathan Pratt and Samuel Davis, Jr., were added to this committee, which was authorized to set a price on all materials and labor. The sum of £600 was voted toward the expense, "to be done in labor and material according to the return of the committee." The building of this second house was to the town as great an effort as was that of the first to the little settlement 30 years before. The building was not only spacious but elegant for the times, and one of the arguments of the Charlton people when asking to be set off was that the new house of worship which they had been taxed to build was expensive above any other similar structure in the vicinage. It was nearly square, about 50 feet on either side, with entrances without porches on the east, west and south. The high pulpit, overhung by the ponderous "sounding board," stood against the north wall, and wide galleries with a row of high square pews next the wall ran on the other three sides, while in the southeast and southwest corners higher structures occupied by the tithing-men mounted almost to the ceiling. Square pews of panel work, balustraded at the top, filled the lower floor. The house had no means of warming or lighting. There is a tradition that the site was presented to the town by Col. Ebenezer Learned, but no record appears. The materials were mainly provided by the town's people from their farms, and doubtless much of the labor of construction was done by them, and several years elapsed before the completion of the building.

On 29 Oct., 1745, the town voted "to address General Court for a tax upon the unimproved lands two miles west of the 12,000 acres towards the charge of building." On 3 March, 1746, Jonas Pratt was chosen "to gather and collect rates for the meeting house," and the building committee was instructed "to provide the rest of the timber and other material for said building to be completed forthwith and to cause said house to be framed and raised by the middle of June next, and covered and enclosed seasonably so as to secure it from being damaged by the weather." The work upon the house progressed in the summer of 1746, so that according to a well founded tradition it was raised on the twenty-first day of October, the birthday of Salem Town, grandson of Mr. Campbell.¹ On 25 May, 1747, it was voted to raise £500, old tenor, towards finishing the house, and Oliver Shumway was made collector to gather the same. At the same meeting it was voted "to reimburse the present inhabitants of the west part of Oxford" what they have paid or may pay towards our Meeting-house, "when they are set off to be a society by themselves, towards building a Meeting-house for them." On 9 June, 1747, the inhabitants of Oxford presented a petition to the General Court for leave to tax non-residents "toward the building and finishing a Meeting-house which they are now building there." On which, 4 Dec., it was ordered that the town be empowered to lay a tax of one penny per acre, for three years for the said purpose. The inhabitants of the N. Gore were non-taxable. Of these it is recorded that Ebenezer and Joshua Merriam paid each ten pounds, and Jesse Smith three pounds towards the Meeting-house. On 18 May, 1748, "voted that the committee cause the under floor to be laid and the glass put up and provide the rest of the materials for the house as soon as convenient." On 13 July "voted that the town shall build the pews and dispose of them" [instead of granting "pew spots" for individuals to build upon]. Also "that there be built two pews, one each side the broad alley, one behind the men's seats and the other behind the women's seats, to accommodate the gentlemen that have had their land taxed toward the building of our new meeting house, when any of them shall come to our meeting."² It was also voted to meet to hold worship in the new house on the fourth Sabbath of the current month, July, 1748. Probably in the then unfinished house, worship was continued from about this date. It was not until 30 Oct., 1752, that a committee was "chosen to dignify and appraise the pews." This committee consisted of David Baldwin the builder, Duncan Campbell and Benjamin Davis. The drawing for choice of pews began 1 Dec., 1752, choice being granted according to the individual sums paid toward the building fund. The following is the list with prices, old tenor:

Ebenezer Learned, No. 3, £52. 16; Samuel Davis, No. 18, £44. 0. 2; Elizabeth Mayo, No. 14, £45. 15. 4; Elijah Moore, No. 8, £51. 0. 10; Richard Moore, No. 7, £48. 8. 1; Rev. John Campbell, No. 13, £46. 12. 11; Samuel Davis, Jr., No. 1, £52. 16; Jonas Pratt on Samuel Eddy's right, No. 17, £39. 12. 3; Edward Davis, No. 2, £51. 18; Josiah Kingsbury, No. 6, £47. 10. 6; Jonathan Pratt, Jr., No. 19, £28. 3. 8; Duncan Campbell, No. 5, £48. 8. 1; William Davis, No. 22, £22. 17. 2; Ebenezer Coburn on Ebenezer Eddy's right, No. 20, £24. 13. 4; Ebenezer Humphrey, No. 9, £48. 8. 1; Isaac Larned, Jr., No. 10, £46. 11. 11; Joseph Phillips, No. 11, £39. 11. 3; Dea. Jonathan Town,

² In Aug., 1753, the town rented these pews, one to Josiah Wolcott, the other to John Willson, at four shillings per annum. In 1765 John Nichols and Edward Raymond were granted seats in these pews by the town. In May, 1767, they were sold at auction, one to John Nichols, the other to James Griffin. In May, 1781, Lemuel Kallock and Elijah Dunbar, owners of Charlton lands, brought a claim to the town for £100, it being the overplus on sale of lands in Charlton toward building the meeting-house, which the town refused to recognize.

No. 12, £40. 8. 10; John Larned on Jeremiah Shumway's right, No. 16, £22. 17. 2; Thomas Gleason, No. 23, £23. 17. 2; Thomas Davis, No. 24, £23. 17. 2.

A record under date of 1 Aug., 1753, refers to the house as "almost completed," and on 7 Sept., 1753, David Baldwin, the builder, receipted in full for his work. There were, however, other various things to be done, as appears from the following records: March, 1759, Elijah Moore, Ebenezer Eddy and Jeremiah Shumway were chosen to "finish the windows cut out last," and also to see about the underpinning. In 1760 Alexander Campbell was chosen "to underpin the meeting house and secure it from further damage, and to see the house is finished," the payment for which was voted in May, 1761. In March, 1761, changes in the gallery were voted, so there might be more room,¹ indicating prosperity and growth. Thus after 15 years of effort was the second principal public work of the town accomplished. Its completion came almost simultaneously with the decease of the beloved minister.

Repairs. In May, 1786, an attempt was made to get a vote to repair the house, which failed. In 1789 it was voted that individuals have permission to do this. Nothing, however, appears to show that anything was done until 1793, when liberty was granted to any so disposed, to repair and build a porch to the house. From a deed of sale of a pew we learn that Sylvanus Learned, Amos Shumway and Jonathan Harris were a committee to do this work, and it was probably completed in 1794, having been done by subscription. The east and west outside doors were closed, and on the south front was built a projection about 12 feet square, containing a vestibule and two flights of stairs leading to the galleries, having a double curved roof, not as high as the main roof of the house, with a circular ornamental window over the south door, and being a decided improvement to the architectural effect of the building. No other repairs probably were ever made on the house. It had in 1825 traces of a coat of yellow paint. A record says "met Nov. 8, 1792, for the purpose of painting the meeting-house." Col. Sylvanus Town contracted to do this for £16. By vote Mr. James Butler was permitted to color the west end at his own expense.

House sold. Services were holden here from 1819, two Sabbaths in each month, until the completion of the present house on the Plain in 1829. In May, 1830, Ira Barton, Jonathan Davis and Jonathan Rice were chosen to inquire into the town's interest in the old house and lot, and to receive proposals for its sale. Later it was voted to sell it at auction. At this sale Alexander DeWitt bid $230 for the land and $50 for the building. Afterward the vote to sell was reconsidered, there being no warrant for further proceedings, as the house was to an important extent the property of the pew-holders. In June, 1835, the town for the sum of $28 quitclaimed to Jasper Brown its interests, requiring the building to be removed within six months. Brown soon after bought the individual rights, and the same year sold to Nahum Sibley, by whom the house was taken down and removed. The question of the ownership of the land has never been adjudicated.

In March, 1794, the town voted liberty to James Butler, Capt. Sylvanus Learned and others to build a "hay market on the common near the Meeting-house." With the Meeting-house, horse sheds, stable, half a dozen noon-houses, two large stone "horse blocks," and this hay market, the old common seems to have been well occupied.

Universalist Meeting-house. The third Meeting-house built was the Universalist, which is now standing, although considerably changed from its original plan. Its site is a part of the old Campbell tavern estate, the lot having been leased to the Society by Ebenezer Davis and Samuel Campbell.¹ At a meeting of the Universalist Society, 14 Sept., 1791, it was voted to build a Meeting-house, and on 12 Oct. Samuel Davis, Capt. Jonathan Davis and John Mayo were chosen to "superintend and build" the same. On 7 Nov. voted to build a house 46 by 43 feet with a porch or tower at one end, to be built in the Tuscan order, equal to the Ward Meeting-house in quality, and to appropriate toward the building the money due the Society from the town. It was also voted to let out the work "by the great," the covering and painting the outside and laying the lower floors, and the contract was awarded to Levi Davis of Charlton for £271, the lowest bid. The amount apportioned by the town assessors to the Society was £121. 13, this being their part of the money arising from the sale of public securities by the selectmen. A building fund additional was raised by subscription, as follows:

Jeremiah Learned, £20; Capt. Jonathan Davis, £15; Samuel Davis, £6; John Mayo, £6; Lt. Abijah Harris, £10; Joseph Healy, £3; Marvin Moore, £6; Abiel Atwood, £2; Capt. Joseph Atwood, £2; Daniel Fisk, £6; Elijah Davis, £5; Learned Davis, £5; Jeremiah Davis, £5; Abijah Davis, £6; Thomas Davis, £3; Joseph Davis, £2; Craft Davis, 12s.; Ezekiel Davis, £2; James H. Davis, £1; Philip Brown, £2; John Pratt, £3; Collins Moore, £3; Jeremiah Kingsbury, Jr., £3; Josiah Kingsbury, £2; Jacob Kingsbury, £3; Benjamin Learned, £1; Thomas Clark, 10s.; Joseph Rockwood, 6s.; Sibley & Stockwell, £3; Isaac Moffitt, £2; Joel White, £1. 12; Ebenezer Robbins, 12s.; Benjamin Fitts, Jr., 12s.; David Fitts, 12s.; Stephen Ward, 8s.; Abel Bonzey, 12s.; James Phillips, £2. 10; Lemuel Moffitt, 10s.; James Butler, £2. 14; Andrew Sigourney, £1. 10; Peter Jennison, £2. Charlton names: Levi Davis, £5; Ebenezer Davis, £10; Asa Davis, £4; Stephen Bullen, £2. 13; Joseph Rich, £1; also a few in Sutton and Ward.

Bell. The building was raised and covered probably during the year 1791, as on 25 April, 1792, Samuel Davis, Jonathan Davis and ¹No record of this lease is known to exist. In the deed of sale of the Campbell tavern stand from Ebenezer Davis to Samuel Campbell, Oct., 1792, was a reserve "to the second Religious Society the use of the land under and around their Meeting house as now fenced so long as they shall maintain and keep a Meeting house, according to the lease I and Samuel Campbell have heretofore given them." Worc. Rec., CXV., 610.

John Mayo were authorized to procure a bell, and on 2 July they were empowered to build a cupola in order to hang it.¹

On 5 Jan., 1793, Samuel Davis, Jonathan Davis and John Mayo were instructed to let out "by the great" the finishing of the interior and to superintend the same, which on 29th was let by auction to Simeon Hathaway of Sutton at £237. Previous to this the pews had been "dignified and appraised" by a committee consisting of Ebenezer Davis, Jeremiah Learned and Jonathan Davis, and in the disposition of them the highest proprietor was given the first choice and so "in rotation to the lowest." This committee were authorized to give deeds and were to hold the pews in their hands until sold as security for the cost of finishing the house.

The following subscription appears :

Capt. Jeremiah Learned, £34; Jonathan Davis, £27; Abijah Harris, £18; Samuel Davis, £11; Daniel Fisk, £10; Abijah Davis, £11; Elijah Davis, £8; Jeremiah Davis, £8; John Mayo, £11. 4; Learned Davis, £7. 14; Ebenezer Davis, Charlton, £19; John Pratt, £5. 5; Marvin Moore, £10. 4; Collins Moore, £4. 8; Jeremiah Kingsbury, Jr., £5. 18; Joseph Davis, £2. 10; Jacob Kingsbury, £3; Joseph Healy, £3. 15; Josiah Kingsbury, £2.

Pew-holders. The pew-owners were as follows :

On 24 April, 1793, it was voted to employ some suitable person "to keep the key of the meeting-house and to ring the bell one hour before any stated meeting and at meeting time, and to toll at any funeral if desired by the relatives of the deceased."

House completed. Oct. 4, 1793, is an account of expenditures from which it appears the outside of the house was then finished, the cupola built, and the bell in position. In the year 1794, the interior was completed. On 8 Dec., the report, which does not appear in the records, of a committee chosen to settle with the committee to finish the inside of the house, was accepted by the Society. In 1796, the bell having been broken, was recast. In the latter part of 1803, a movement began having in view the purchase of a pipe organ, a rarity in country churches of that day. Payment was made by subscription March, 1804. One hundred and forty dollars were subscribed by thirty-six persons, and the balance of the cost (being $122.92), was paid by Jonathan Davis. The instrument was set up early in 1804. Ebenezer, son of Jason Collier, then residing at Charlton, was the first organist, and Ira Barton and Richard Moore followed.

The plan of the interior was the same as that of the old house at the north common, and it contained 60 square box pews of panel work, with seats facing in different directions. Stoves were introduced about 1815. The front porch was about 12 feet square and projected from the main structure at the centre. At the top, sheltering the bell, was a circular cupola which was swept away by the great gale of Sept., 1815, and for about two years the bell stood exposed on the top of the tower. Between July and December, of 1817, the spire as it now appears was built by Rufus Moore, Jeremiah Moffit foreman, and on 21 Dec., the sum of $550 was raised on the pews to meet the expense.

House remodelled. The building stood unaltered until 1845, when a movement began for the remodelling and entire rebuilding of the interior, and on 11 Oct., a vote was passed to this effect, and Benjamin Barnes, Craft Davis, Luther Clemence, Samuel Mayo and John Fitts were chosen a committee to carry out the vote. A floor was thrown across the galleries and the main audience room finished in the upper part, and below were made a spacious store and shops. In order to effect these changes the pews were bought up by the Society at an appraisal of $375, which amount was raised partly by subscription and partly by the sale of pews after the changes were made. A repair subscription was drawn and according to its terms the profits of the basement story were to pass to the subscribers in proportion to their payments. Nineteen persons paid in the aggregate $1,225. The alterations were made in the winter of 1845-6, and on 21 Jan., 1846, it was voted to empower the building committee to rent the basement. This vote was later rescinded, indicating that there was doubt as to the Society's authority. On 21 Jan., 1846, the building committee was instructed to procure a bell.

In 1861, the lessees of the basement made alterations and fitted up two stores instead of one, and brought the entrances from the south to the east side, remodelling the whole front and adding a portico, in which condition it remains at the present day. On 2 April, 1868, is entered in the records an account of moneys spent in frescoing, carpeting and painting the interior of the church, then completed.

New Congregational house. The next house of worship built was that of the Congregationalists, on the common. On 21 April, 1828, at a meeting of the Society, a committee consisting of Jonathan Davis, Abijah Davis, Peter Butler, James Farwell, and Stearns Witt¹ was chosen to consider the subject of building a new Meeting-house, which reported on 12 May, to the effect that it was impracticable to purchase the South Meeting-house or to repair the old one, and that it was desirable to build a new one, and recommended that measures be taken to this end. This report was adopted, and Jonathan Davis, Stearns Witt and Stephen Davis were chosen "to draft a constitution by which the proprietors shall be governed in building a house, also to select a site for the same and report at an adjourned meeting."

This committee reported the form of a general subscription payable to a building committee—the pew-holders always to have control of the house, each one having one vote; pews to be appraised for enough to pay the expense of the house and a bell, and sold at auction, and if sold for more than enough to pay expense of building, the overplus to go to the Society, and if for a sum insufficient to pay the expense the Society to make good the deficit to the subscribers. The names of the subscribers do not appear. On 27 April, 1829, Jonathan Davis, Stearns Witt and Stephen Davis were chosen building committee. The house was erected during the summer and autumn of 1829, at a cost of about $6,000. The sale of the pews amounted to $6,062. The dedication took place 3 November, 1829, Rev. Ebenezer Newhall preaching the sermon.

Plan. The pulpit was placed at the south end of the audience room and there were only two aisles, the entrance being on either side the pulpit facing the audience. The singers' seats were at the north end and narrow galleries ran on each side.

An act of incorporation of the pew-holders was procured, approved 12 March, 1830, by which Jonathan Davis, Stearns DeWitt, Stephen Davis, Delano Pierce, Josiah Russell and their associates, were empowered to make by-laws, choose officers and raise money by assessment to keep the house in repair, etc. The first meeting of the corporation was on 14 April, 1830, at which a code of by-laws was adopted. This organization was continued until 1857. Jonathan Davis was chairman of a committee to confer with the officers of the Second Religious Society concerning the organ and stoves in the South Meeting-house. Later the organ was removed to the new Meeting-house, where it was used several years, Josiah Russell organist, and was set aside into a corner of the gallery where it was unused for a time and was taken down by Jeremiah D. Moore and removed to the house of his father, Maj. William Moore.

Pew-holders. The following is the list of purchasers of pews:

Alexander DeWitt, $166; Stearns DeWitt, $200; Delano Pierce, $199; Stephen Davis, $180; Peter Shumway, $150; Sumner Bastow, $140; Andrew Sigourney, $130; Seth Daniels and Sylvanus Harris, $115; Samuel Dowse, $90; Joseph Brown, $80; John Hurd, $65; Jonathan Davis, 8 pews, highest, $166; Peleg Foster, $50; Peter Butler, $146; Abijah Davis, $152; Jonathan Davis, Jr., $160; Ira Barton, $150; John Wetherell, $150; Samuel Smith, $140; Martin Sigourney, $130; Henry G. Learned, $115; Samuel Merriam, $90; Jotham Merriam, $80; Luke R. Stone, $65; Sylvia Pope, $55; Nathan Hall, $110; Abijah, Erastus and Loring Davis, $75; Abigail Plummer, $60;

Richard Olney, $100; Prince and Rand, $100; Thomas Nichols, $100; Shumway and Learned, $120; Jotham Eddy, $100; Nichols and Prince, $95; Washburn Lumbard, $95; Benjamin F. Town, $75; John Mellish, $65; Brown, Hurd and Moore, $65; David Nichols, $118; Josiah Russell, $75; Jonas Larned, $60; Stephen Prince, $100; Daniel Moulton, $100; John Larned, 3d, $100; Rufus Harris, $120; Stephen Davis, $100; Alfred Kingsbury, $95; Joab Maynard, $95; Justin Root and Israel Moore, $95; Charles P. Nichols, $77; Jason Collier, $65; Joel Eddy, $65; Stearns DeWitt and Samuel Dowse, $65.

Removal. The building was erected at the north side of the common fronting to the south, and formed with its setting of elms a beautiful terminus to the street. But as in 1838 the highway, on account of the railroad crossing, was laid out in a straight course northerly, and passed very near the church, and building lots consequently were opened north of it, its removal became desirable. In April, 1852, the town voted that its present site might be occupied, and 15 June, 1853, money having been subscribed to defray the expense, the proprietors consented to the removal, and in July, that a basement story might be put under it for Church uses. In the fall of 1853 the change was effected, and a large lecture-room fitted up at a cost of nearly $1,600. In the spring of 1857 it was proposed to bring the pews into a common stock. Many were freely given up, and by a subscription of $1,335 those not given were bought, and all, with a single exception, were made the property of the Society. On 13 June, 1857, for the first time the pews were rented at auction.

House remodelled. On 18 April, 1860, it was voted to proceed to make thorough repairs and to entirely renovate the building. Samuel C. Paine, George Hodges and Loren C. Parks were chosen a committee to supervise this work, which was done the following autumn and winter. Pews, galleries, floor and pulpit were made new, and pine and paint gave place to hard wood finish, at a cost of $3,760.70, which was paid by subscription. The Society assumed the debt of $300 which the Church owed on the basement, in consideration of which the Church made over to the Society its ownership in the same. At this time the lecture-room was remodelled and re-seated. The church building was re-opened with dedicatory services on 13 March, 1861.

Organ. The present organ, built by James D. Moore of Worcester, was purchased for $1,400 of the builder in the summer of 1865.

In 1885 radical changes were made in the basement for better accommodations for social gatherings, the entrance changed to the front and the stone work relaid, involving a cost of $2,148.75, of which sum Mr. Allen L. Joslin paid about one-third.

Baptist Meeting-house. In 1836, a demand existing in the growing North Oxford villages for church privileges, a Baptist Society was formed and a movement began for a new Meeting-house. A subscription for the purpose, provided that the said house should cost $3,000 and be divided into $50 shares, each to have a vote, the cost to be averaged on the pews. The subscribers were:

Asa Cutler, Joseph Stafford and Geo. Torrey, 8 shares; the same, 2 shares [being the building spot]; David Hall, 6; David Holman, 2; Stephen Barton, Jr., 2; H. A. Pettibone, 2; David Stone, 4; Warren Bruce, 1; Richard Sanford, 1; J. Gardner, 1; James Boomer, 2; Amasa Eddy, 2; Ebenezer Newton, $\frac{1}{2}$; Amos P. Newton, 1; Samuel Warren, 1; Rev. John Paine, 2; Jonah G. Warren, 1; Waterman G. Warren, 1; Elbridge G. Warren, 1; William G. Davidson, 1; Ebenezer Cook and Benjamin Tolman, 1; Martin Boomer, 1; Damon and Bartlett, 2; Jennison Barton, 1; Ebenezer Brown, $\frac{1}{2}$; R. Appleton & Co., 3; William Copp, 1; Daniel Dow, $\frac{1}{2}$; Ansel Whitcomb, 1; Erastus Torrey, $\frac{1}{2}$.

On 5 May, 1836, it was voted to build on the lot west of the brick store, the house to be completed by Dec. 1st, and chose Richard Sanford treasurer, Robert Fitts of Auburn, James Boomer of Charlton and Joseph Stafford, David Stone and David Hall building committee. William Howe of Spencer was builder. The land was deeded by Cutler, Stafford and Torrey, 16 June, 1836, to this committee, who, 15 May, 1837, conveyed it with the house to Jennison Barton and William Copp, deacons of the Church.

Dedication. The dedication was 10 May, 1837, the day the Church was recognized. The bell was bought with "choice money" from the pews. A spire 95 feet in height originally existed, but was swept away down to the belfry by a wind 1 April, 1859. The house measures 53 by 41 feet; cost of building $3,200. For about eight years the basement story remained unfinished. On 9 Sept., 1844, it was voted to repair the house, and 29 Nov. to finish the basement story, which was done in 1845, and dedicated 5 Jan., 1846.

Pews bought up. In the spring of 1856 the Society voted to adopt the plan of renting the pews yearly to pay expenses, and proceeded to buy them up for this purpose. A few weeks later it was voted to "take advantage of the acts of the Legislature on this subject, passed in 1845 and 1854." The plan was carried out, and until 1884 the pews were rented annually. At the latter date the free seat system was adopted and is now continued, expenses being paid by voluntary subscription.

In 1878 changes were made in the interior, the singers' gallery dropped and the house much improved. In 1888 decorated windows were put in, and the walls frescoed.

The Methodist Chapel was erected in 1841 on Barton Street, a few rods southwesterly from the site of the present building. On 8 June Richard and Abigail Olney deeded to the Trustees of the Church, for $100, the lot for the same. It was a plain structure without a tower, 33 by 40 feet, with two aisles and four tiers of pews, the pulpit at the south end opposite the entrance and a singers' gallery at the north end over the vestibule. The cost was about $1,500.

More room being required, in 1843 an addition of 18 feet at the rear was made at the expense of about $500, which was paid by Mr. Jonathan Sibley. This chapel was occupied about 25 years.

Meeting-house. Preparations for a new house began in the autumn of 1865. On 20 Nov., Wilson Olney deeded to Lament B. Corbin and William H. Thurston the lot on which it stands. In Jan., 1866, it was voted by the trustees to procure plans, and in February Mr. Corbin, Mr. Thurston and Daniel Rich were chosen a building committee and were instructed to build a church about "48 by 80 feet," and on 5 March it was voted to set it "on the corner lot opposite the parsonage." On 8 April, 1867, the pew-holders in the chapel relinquished their rights that the building might be sold, and the proceeds went toward the expense of the new house. Later the chapel was bought by Craft Davis, who removed it and fitted it up for dwellings. The building of the new house went on during 1866, and early in 1867 the vestry was occupied. The edifice was completed in the spring of 1868, and dedicated on 8 April. A bell weighing about 2,500 pounds was put in the tower, and after a little more than a year was broken and replaced by the present one, weighing about 2,000 pounds.

A clock also, now in the tower, built by Stevens of Boston, was bought by subscription at a cost of $500.

Episcopal Church. The site was purchased 18 April, 1863, by William A. Wheelock, who in May, 1864, conveyed it to George Hodges, Joseph Burrough and Emory E. Harwood for the Protestant Episcopal Church. Foundations were placed during the following summer, and the corner stone laid with ceremonies on 20 September. The building is of a dark stone, quarried on the hill half a mile easterly from the town hall, and was planned by A. H. Esty of Framingham. It was first occupied 8 Oct., 1865, and consecrated by Rt. Rev. Manton Eastburn, D.D., 16 Nov. following. The cost was not far from $20,000, a large part of which was paid by George Hodges. An organ, built by Johnson of Westfield at a cost of $1,800, was put into the church, Dec., 1866.

"The whole edifice, externally and internally, is harmonious and elegant, and highly creditable to the architect and the mechanics who have carried out the details. It is an architectural ornament such as few country villages possess." Worcester Spy, 17 Nov., 1865.

Catholic Church. On 12 Oct., 1853, Alonzo H. and Rufus R. Dana deeded to John B. Fitzpatrick 35 square rods near the common, about 20 rods north of the present edifice, where in 1857 a building was put up. It was a part of the present house and less than half its size. On 2 May, 1866, a larger house being needed, the present lot was purchased, the original building moved thither in 1867, and the large transept was added in its present form, making the seating capacity about 500. On 12 March, 1867, John O'Shea, the purchaser of the lot, deeded the same to Bishop John Joseph Williams of Boston. The house was dedicated by Bishop Williams, 11 Oct., 1868.

Parsonages. The first parsonage in the town was built by an incorporated association, the plan originating in 1815, during which year subscriptions for it were made. On 11 Dec., 1816, Nathan Hall, Elias Pratt, John Merriam, Stephen Prince, Sylvanus Town, Charles Town, Peter Butler, Ebenezer Merriam, Abijah Davis, Archibald Campbell, James Gleason, Samuel Coburn, Joseph Brown, Jr., Martha Kingsbury and David Nichols were incorporated under the name of "Oxford Ministerial Association." These were authorized to raise by subscription $4,000, to purchase land and build a house and other necessary buildings for the use of the Congregational minister in Oxford, under the direction of trustees; to elect officers, form by-laws, etc. Peter Butler was treasurer, and on 18 March, 1817, Sylvanus Town deeded to him for $150 two acres of land near the north end of Main Street, being H. 190. On 12 Feb., 1830, Peter Butler quitclaimed the same to the Association.¹ In 1833 the shares were bought up by Washburn Lumbard and its use as a parsonage terminated.

Methodist Parsonage. Late in the year 1845, Sumner Putnam bought the lot on which the Methodist Parsonage stands, and in 1846 built the house which, on 27 Sept. of that year, he deeded to the Trustees of the Society. It has been since occupied as a ministerial residence.

Baptist Parsonage. On 6 Sept., 1867, John Rhodes and Theophilus W. Wilmarth deeded to Ebenezer Newton, Trustee of the Society at North Oxford, land for a parsonage. The house was built in 1868 and paid for by subscription.

Episcopal Parsonage. This house was built in 1834 by John Wetherell for a residence. In Feb., 1848, he sold to George Hodges, who remodelled and enlarged it, occupied it 13 years and removed to his factory village. In November, 1873, he conveyed it to his daughter, Mrs. Slater, who the succeeding April deeded it to the "Trustees of Donations to the Protestant Episcopal Church."

The Congregational Parsonage was built by subscription under the direction of Allen L. Joslin, Charles Fuller and George F. Daniels, building committee, in 1871, on a lot which had formerly been a part of the Stearns DeWitt estate. The cost was $4,570.98, including land. The Ladies' Society furnished necessary fixtures at a cost of $312.61.

EDUCATIONAL.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS. HIGH SCHOOL TEACHERS. SELECT SCHOOLS. PASTOR'S LIBRARY. SOCIAL LIBRARY. SOCIETY LIBRARY. LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. HIGH SCHOOL LIBRARY. FARMERS' LIBRARY. FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY. REFERENCE LIBRARY.

Schools. The first mention in the records of a school in Oxford is 1 Oct., 1733, 20 years after the settlement, when the town instructed the selectmen to hire a schoolmaster, from which we infer that the village then contained at least 50 families, the law of 1692 requiring every town of that number to "constantly provide a schoolmaster." We have no knowledge of the incumbent previous to 1740. At that date the selectmen hired Richard Rogers, previously of Worcester, at a salary of 60 pounds per annum.¹ Mr. Rogers filled his office for about 20 years. In 1751 a house was built for him, 16 by 18 feet "beside convenient room for a chimney," at a cost of £13. 6s. 8d., which he occupied until his decease. Later it was used by tenants. Its location was probably near the north common nor far from H. 179.

In 1734 £24 was voted for a school to be kept in four places in the town. In Dec., 1735, it was voted to divide the town into four parts, "for the school to be kept at, Six weeks in each part." In 1736 £23 was raised for school and sweeping the meeting-house.

School-houses. The plan of four places for the school was soon given up, and in 1738 one central house was proposed and a vote passed to build, 14 by 20 feet with a chimney at each end, which vote was rescinded. Up to this time the school had been kept in private houses. In 1740 several meetings were held to consider the subject. On 11 June, at a meeting called at 6 o'clock in the morning, it was voted that about 20 families on Prospect Hill might build a house and draw their proportion of money for a school; that those living between "Prospect" and "y^e brook that runs between Mr. Campbell's and Joseph Rocket's" [at the north end of the Plain] might do the same, and those south of said brook might also have the same privilege, all houses to be built by subscription. In May, 1750, it was again voted that the school be kept in four places in town, two at the north and two at the south. In 1756 another change was made, and "the two houses in the north part of the town were

¹ This was a sum more than double that raised by the town for this purpose. It was not until many years later that the towns were required to sustain free public schools as they now exist. Such sums were voted as were thought proper to levy on the town at large, the selectmen were required to furnish school privileges for all, and the expense above what was paid by towns was met by parents in proportion to the number of scholars.

brought into one." This caused dissatisfaction, and in 1759 a committee was chosen to consider the matter and report. The result is not recorded, but it was not permanent. In March, 1760, a larger committee was elected to devise a satisfactory system, which reported: one place in the north part of the town "at the foot of the hill between Leicester and Prospect roads," and for the south part "at the two school houses."¹

In 1763 the people in the northeast part of the town, now Auburn, were granted liberty for the year to lay out their proportion of the money where they should agree. In 1766 the condition of affairs being unsatisfactory to the remoter inhabitants, Edward Davis, Esq., proposed the rescinding of all former votes and the adoption of the following plan: "that liberty be granted to such as agree thereto to set up a School-house in the south part of the town near to Jonathan Fuller's on their own cost;² and also that there may be another house in the north part of the town in the lane eastward from Jonas Pratt's [near Town's Pond]; also that Prospect Hill and vicinity be allowed to build a house where they may agree and draw their part of the money, except some small part towards the extraordinary expense of hiring a grammar-school master, to prevent the town from being liable to a fine.³ Also that all other remote parts of the town may, if they choose, draw their money from year to year, with the exception aforesaid, provided they use it for schooling." This scheme was adopted, and the next year the house on the Plain near Jonathan Fuller's was built, and also one not far from Jonas Pratt's, east of Town's Pond. But dissatisfaction still existed, and in 1768 another large committee was called to examine and report, which recommended that a school should be kept in the house on the six-rod road east of Jonathan Fuller's, one in the house on Jonas Pratt's land, one on Prospect Hill, one northwest from Asa Conant's [now Taft's mill, North Oxford], and one near Abial Lamb's [present almshouse], "in case the inhabitants in the several divisions are at the charge of building houses." This plan seems to have been satisfactory, at least for several years. In Jan., 1775, Jeremiah Shumway, Joseph Hudson and others on the hill northeast were set off to have a school by themselves. In 1782 Edward Davis and others in the east part of the town were set off in like manner, and Ebenezer Humphrey, Joseph Hurd and others, their neighbors, were set to Mayo district, Fort Hill.

Wards. In 1783 William Eddy, Aaron Parker and others, their neighbors, were set to the northeast "squadron." In 1785 these divisions, which had before been called "squadrons," were recorded as "wards," which as population increased became established throughout the town.

¹ "The two school houses," of which we have no record, undoubtedly stood the one not far from the north common and the other on the Plain.

³ In 1767 the town was fined £5 for not keeping a grammar school.

District System. In 1788 Elisha Davis and Lemuel Crane were deputed to suggest any plans thought advisable for the improvement of the schools, who reported that each ward remain as then constituted and "continue to draw their proportion of money, that collectors be appointed in each district, and that the committee of each ward be empowered to employ and pay a teacher as by general consent shall be thought best, to the amount of their funds." This report was accepted, and thus was inaugurated the long-continued district-system. In 1792 a ward of 11 families was set off in the northwest part of the town, but in 1801 was discontinued and its inhabitants set to the north ward. On 29 Feb., 1800, a large committee was chosen to consider the subject of re-districting the town. The result was a report that no change could be made which would improve the plan already in practice. In Nov., 1808, several families residing on "Long Hill," in the northeast part of the town, were set to the North Centre district.

Down to 1809 school-districts had been named after some leading resident therein. In March, 1809, a committee of one from each district was chosen to number, name and define each ward, which reported as follows: The district known as Jonathan Davis' [east] to be number 1; that known as John Mayo's [southeast], number 2; Jeremiah Kingsbury's [south], number 3; Elijah Learned's [west], number 4; Ephraim Russell's [centre], number 5; James Butler's [north centre], number 6; Elias Pratt's [northeast], number 7; Sylvanus Learned's [north], number 8. After this date school matters appear to have been not much agitated until April, 1815, when upon report of Jeremiah Kingsbury, Jonathan Davis and Sylvanus Town, committee, it was voted that those living in the part recently set to Oxford from Charlton might draw from the treasury their proportion of school money and expend it in Charlton or Dudley, as they chose, or join the centre or Plain district in Oxford. In May, 1818, a committee reported that allowing money raised in town for schools, to be paid in other towns was "attended with very bad consequences," and should be discontinued. The report was adopted, and those who had been allowed that privilege were annexed to the Plain district. In April, 1818, district No. 2 [Fort Hill] was discontinued and its inhabitants set to three adjacent districts.

Re-districting. From 1820 to 1845 the policy of increasing the number of schools prevailed, and from time to time several districts were set off in different parts of the town, unadvisedly, as results proved.¹ In the spring of 1845 a committee of one from each district a school, and Samuel Slater, etc., were voted the same privilege. In 1831 a district was made in the Lovett neighborhood in the east part of the town. After the incorporation of Webster all the south part of the town was set to the Plain district, was chosen to return new districts with geographical lines, which reported that the plan of small divisions, small schools and short sessions was detrimental, and the benefits of larger and better graded schools far overbalanced the consideration of the travel necessary to reach them. A division of the town into 9 instead of 11 districts was advised, and geographical lines recommended as follows: No. 1, to embrace the southeast corner of the town and the Lovett neighborhood, H. 17; No. 2, the central southern part of the town, Fort Hill and Main Street as far as the DeWitt and Dowse store; No. 3, the southwest portion of the town west of the river north to the Woodbury farm, H. 75, including the hill neighborhood west; No. 4, the present Howarth and Buffum villages and Conlin's, H. 85; No. 5, north end of the Plain to near, but not including, present Ithiel T. Johnson's, H. 185; No. 6, from No. 5 north to the Kidder place, H. 133, with south part of Long Hill, extending from Charlton to Sutton line; No. 7, from No. 6 north to the Gore line, extending from Charlton to Sutton line and including Wellington's, H. 129; No. 8, the North Gore; No. 9, the northeast part of the town, including the North Oxford depot neighborhood and Bradford G. Edson. The inhabitants of the north part of No. 7 immediately moved for a change, and in May, 1845, the district was divided near its centre, the line east and west passing near the Baptist Meeting-house. Thus Texas village and the west slope of Prospect Hill were made a district, numbered 10. Minor changes were later made in other localities, but substantially the lines as described were adhered to until the abolishing of the district system, and a subject which had been more discussed and voted upon in town meetings than any other, was finally disposed of.

Advanced Schools. In 1853, the law requiring a grammar school, the subject was as usual referred to a committee, and Emory Sanford, Ira Merriam, Theophilus W. Wilmarth, Stephen Barton, Jr., Seth Daniels, Alexander DeWitt and Stephen Davis reported in March, 1854, recommending the establishment of grammar schools, not only because the law required it, but because "something should be done to elevate the character and condition of our common schools," and advising that $600 additional to the usual sum be raised to establish two higher schools, one on the Plain and one at North Oxford. This report was adopted.

Town System. In April, 1854, it was voted that the district system be abolished and that the town system go into effect in March, 1855, and a committee was chosen to carry the vote into effect. Great opposition arose in the outer districts to this action, and in August it was reversed and a vote passed to adopt the district system for three years.¹

making it so large that it was in 1833 divided into three portions.

Until March, 1836, the office of school committee was merely honorary. It was then voted that the board should consist of three, who should carefully supervise the schools according to law and receive therefor the sum of $30.

¹ The law of 1853 gave school committees power to abolish districts unless the towns voted to retain them.

Complaint. In September the district attorney notified the selectmen that he had received a complaint against the town for not keeping a grammar school, and that he would lay the matter before the grand jury unless assurance was given him that the law would be complied with, upon which, 23 Sept., it was voted 105 to 87 that the action of the August meeting be rescinded and the town system be adopted. A committee of one from each district was chosen to act in the case, to receive estimates for a house on the Plain, to select a spot for the same and to report.

High Schools. In March, 1855, this action was annulled. In April a proposition to establish a school in the Town Hall was voted down, and a vote passed to build a school-house on the Plain, and to provide a place for a high school at North Oxford, and William Kimball, Stephen Barton, Jr., and Moses Burdon were chosen to supervise the whole matter. The sum of \$6,000 was raised to defray expenses and the selectmen were authorized to take land for a house, and on 10 Sept. their action in the selection of a lot near the Methodist Chapel was approved. In the fall and winter of 1855-6 the house was built by Otis Learned at a cost of \$2,850, the upper room only being finished. The cost of the lot, $77\frac{1}{2}$ rods, was \$425. The house was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies 9 Aug., 1856, John E. Kimball, then a student at college, giving an address. In 1856 one-half the house and land in No. 7 was purchased by the town for high school purposes at \$1,500. In April, 1864, it was voted that scholars from other towns be admitted to the high schools on terms to be fixed by the school committee.

Town System established. In April, 1867, it was again voted to abolish the district system and to "organize under the provisions of Chap. 39, Sec. 3, of the General Statutes." A committee of 11 was chosen to supervise the change and appraise the property of the several districts as provided in the act. This committee consisted of Rev. Daniel E. Chapin, Walter L. Rosebrook, Theophilus W. Wilmarth, Lyman A. Wetherell, Edwin Bartlett, Cyrus Kidder, Nathaniel Eddy, Albert Lackey, Jonathan P. Dana, George Hodges, Isaac B. Hartwell. The appraisal was as follows: District No. 1, $454; No. 2, $930; No. 3, $310; No. 4, $297; No. 5, $961; No. 6, $509; No. 7, $896; No. 8, $91; No. 9, $173; No. 10, $147; total, $4,771. Under this arrangement the process of grading was entered upon so far as possible, the high school at North Oxford was discontinued, and a grammar school established instead (which since has been mainly under the charge of male teachers), and a primary department was opened on the lower floor of the North Oxford house.

Grammar School. The schools in the Plain districts being too large the lower floor of the high school house was in 1867 fitted up and a grammar school opened, made up of advanced pupils from these districts. This school has been very prosperous and has been in charge generally of male teachers. In 1868 a house near the North Oxford railroad station was built at a cost of $2,787. In 1872 a house in district No. 8 [North Gore] was built and with furnishing cost $1,376. In Sept., 1873, it was voted to sell the house in No. 6 [north centre].

North Oxford School-house. In June, 1874, Rufus G. Alverson, Joseph Dart, Lewis Stockwell, Charles H. Wellington and Moses Burdon were chosen a committee to consider the subject of the house at North Oxford and report. In July the sum of $3,000 was voted to be expended upon it so far as necessary in repairs, and a thorough remodelling of it was effected by this committee at a cost of $3,062. In April, 1877, the sum of $400 was voted to repair house No. 4. In April, 1878, $750 was appropriated to repair house No. 2. In 1879, $350 was raised to repair house No. 3. In April, 1881, it was voted to build anew at the north end of the Plain, and $4,000 was appropriated for the purpose. The present building accommodating two large schools, intermediate and primary, was built that year, at a cost, including furnishings, of $4,601 exclusive of lot, which cost $500.

Appropriations for schools began with £24 in 1734, fluctuating with the value of the currency to 1740, rising gradually until 1750, when £20 "hard money" was voted. This sum with slight variations was granted annually until 1761, when it was raised to £30 and continued for six years. In 1767 it was increased to £40, and in 1768 to £50, at which point it continued until the Revolutionary war. No money was voted in 1776 or 1778. In Dec. of 1777 £60 was raised. In 1781, coming back to "hard money," the sum voted was £60, each district to draw its proportion and the school tax to be made separately. This was the annual grant for 24 years. In 1806 it was increased to $400 and in 1812 to $500, and continued thus (with the exception of 1821 and 1822 when it was $400) to 1826. In 1827 it was increased to $600, continuing until 1835, when $800 was raised. Subsequently the sums were as follows: 1836 and 1837, $900; 1838, $1,200; 1839, $1,000; 1840 and 1841, $1,200; 1842, $1,100; 1843, $1,000; 1844 and 1845, $1,200; 1846, $1,000; 1847 and 1848, $1,400; 1849, $1,200; 1850 to 1856, $1,500; in 1856 the first money, $1,000, was raised for a high school; 1857, $1,500 to districts, $1,200 to high school; 1858, $1,200 to districts, $1,000 to high school; 1859 to 1861, $1,500 to districts, $1,000 to high school; 1862, $1,500 to districts, $800 to high school; 1863, $1,500 to districts, $600 to high school; 1864, $1,600 to districts, $600 to high school; 1865, $1,600 to districts, $800 to high school; 1866, $2,000 to districts, $1,000 to high school; 1867, $2,500 to districts, $1,200 to high school; districts abolished; 1868, $4,000 for all; 1869 to 1871, $4,500; 1872, $4,000; 1873, $5,000; 1874, $6,000; 1875, $5,000; 1876, $4,600; 1877, $4,500; 1878 to 1880, $4,000; 1881 to 1884, $4,500; 1885, $5,000.

High School Teachers. Samuel W. Cook, summer 1856 to summer 1858, now a dentist at Worcester; John E. Kimball, fall and winter of 1858-9; Jairus Lincoln, Jr., of Northboro', spring of 1859; George Mason, autumn 1859 to summer 1860, now at Washington, D. C.; Joseph Lippitt, autumn 1860 to March, 1864, now accountant at Providence, R. I.; Josiah B. Davis, autumn and winter 1864-5; Charles R. Phipps, spring 1865; James B. Batcheller, autumn 1865, son of Rev. David Batcheller and now deceased; Francis E. Burnette, winter 1865-6, now principal of McGaw Institute, Reed's Ferry, N. H.; Charles H. Goulding of Leominster, spring 1866; John C. Hammond, winter 1866-7, spring 1867 and winter 1867-8, now lawyer at Northampton; Jesse R. Davenport, summer 1868 to July, 1869, now druggist at Putnam, Conn.; Maria L. Adams, fall of 1869; Mary E. Terry, 10 months in 1870, health failed; Newell Wedge of Sutton, spring 1871; A. E. Ford, autumn of 1871 to spring 1873, now at Clinton; John A. Pierce of Edgartown, spring 1873; Stephen A. Snow, autumn 1873 to autumn 1875; Charles A. Buffum of Salem, winter and spring 1875-6, later teacher at Easthampton; Cornelius E. Wood, autumn and winter 1876-7; J. B. Atwood of Somerville, spring of 1877 to July, 1879; Fred. A. Holden, autumn and winter 1879-80, later, clergyman; Alfred S. Smith, and later L. B. Lane, spring 1880 to spring 1881; Samuel A. Melcher, spring 1881 to close of 1883, now teacher at Whitinsville; D. H. Felch, spring and autumn 1884; George A. Willey, winter of 1884 to present time, 1890.

North Oxford Teachers. James C. Mills, 1856 to 1858; F. Tourtelotte, 1858; James C. Mills, winter 1858-9; Leander Poor, 1859 and 1860; Mr. Hatch of Peterboro, N. H., autumn and winter 1861; Nathaniel Eddy, 1862; Charles H. Goulding, 1863; Charles D. Thomas, began winter 1863, enlisted in the army; Rev. Joseph Smith, 1864; Charles R. Phipps, winter 1864-5; F. L. Smith, autumn 1865, teacher at Salem, 1890; Dwight S. Herrick, winter 1865-6; John C. Hammond, autumn of 1866 and of 1867. Newell Wedge, winter 1870; Miss M. E. Stone, 1871; Flora A. Lamb, 1872; Charles H. Furber, autumn 1872; Ella J. Moore, 1873; Martha D. Cole, 1874; Miss M. L. Davis, 1875; Miss S. H. Munger, winter and spring 1875-6; Alfred S. Smith, winter 1876-7; and later in succession: Stephen W. Ferguson, W. Palmer and G. W. Lyman.

Select Schools. So far as learned the first select school in Oxford was that for young ladies, conducted by Misses Lua and Abigail Thayer, sisters of Gen. Sylvanus Thayer, U. S. army, and of Mrs. Moulton, wife of Rev. Josiah Moulton, the minister. It was at first located at the Dr. Fisk house, opposite Town's Pond [H. 141], and was opened about 1807, and continued for three years, having been each year suspended during the winter. Mr. Moulton in building the large house near the common, now Campbell's, finished a small hall for its accommodation and it was kept there the last year.

It was prosperous, pupils coming from other places and was well patronized by the town's people. In addition to the common English branches, the higher accomplishments were taught. This being a new departure in the line of education the matter excited a general interest among the people, and it was esteemed a very worthy institution. In 1820 Miss Bancroft of Worcester, a sister of the historian, taught a select school for young ladies for one season at the "Gleason house," corner of Sigourney and Main Streets, H. 239. In 1826 and 1827 Mrs. Martin Sigourney conducted a like enterprise at the old Sigourney mansion, Sutton Avenue.

The most successful private school in Oxford was that of Richard C. Stone and his successors. He first taught for a few months at the Dr. Fisk house, H. 141, and removed to the Plain where he began in 1830 in a room fitted for the purpose in the rear of his house, H. 202, continuing until 1834. He had tact and energy, and pupils, male and female, attended from many neighboring places. Natural philosophy, chemistry, the higher mathematics and languages were taught. Miss Eliza Whittemore, an accomplished graduate of Leicester Academy, was assistant, giving lessons in French and the ornamental branches. In the summer of 1834 Stone was succeeded by Orlando Chester. He was a good scholar but lacked the skill and efficiency of his predecessor. In the spring of 1836 he retired and J. Lewis Stone, son of Richard C., came in and taught one term. In Oct., 1836, John O. Burleigh assumed charge. He was a well trained teacher and managed successfully until the spring of 1842, when he removed from town. James C. Seagrave of Uxbridge was next master and taught through the spring, autumn and winter of 1842-3. He was a college student, and left his studies temporarily on account of ill health, and returned to college in 1843. No school was thereafter maintained at this location.

In the spring of 1843 Misses Mary B. and Celia E. Campbell established at the mansion near the north common a boarding-school for misses. Pupils attended from this and surrounding towns, and several were from New York city. In the autumn of 1844 they removed to Springfield. In 1854-6 Misses Mary B. and Elizabeth DeWitt taught a young ladies' school at the family residence, H. 240, receiving day pupils and boarders. Later there were from time to time several small select schools, taught by ladies in different localities in the town.

Holbrook Lectures. Much interest existed in town in the winter of 1826-7 in a series of popular scientific lectures by Prof. Josiah Holbrook of New Haven. They were delivered at the hall of the centre tavern, and extended through many weeks, with two lectures a week, the subject being Natural Philosophy and Chemistry, illustrated by apparatus and experiments, which made them entertaining as well as instructive. During this time Mr. Holbrook remained in town and was the occasional guest of many of the families of the vicinity.

Larned Lectures. In the winter of 1884-5, through the liberality of a former townsman, Mr. Charles Larned of Boston, a series of free popular lectures and concerts was instituted, many of which were of a high order. They continued four consecutive years and were a source of much profit and enjoyment to the large audiences which attended.

Pastor's Library. The first collection of books in Oxford constituting a library, of perhaps not over ten volumes, was contributed, a part as early as 1719, by Paul Dudley, Rev. Benjamin Wadsworth and other gentlemen of Boston and vicinity, well wishers of the town, for the use of the minister. Several of these volumes were preserved as late as 1840 in the receptacle of the Society Library, which was formed later. Among them were large specimens of costly book-making, finely printed and bound in the most substantial manner. Some volumes are now in existence, two of which contain valuable inscriptions; the first, a scripture commentary printed in London in 1624, was in 1701 the property of Mr. Wadsworth, minister of the first church in Boston, once President of Harvard College. On the margin of the first leaf is written "For Oxford Library." Opposite, on the blank page, "The gift of the Rev'd Benja. Wadsworth—for the use of the Church or Parish Library of Oxford in the County of Suffolk, 1719." The other is entitled "Hexapla," or commentary on Romans. On the back of the title-page is written "Roxbury 3^d July 1736. For the use of the Parish Library in Oxford New England the Rev Mr. Cambel being the present minister Given by Paul Dudley."

Other contributions were a large folio in Latin, being "An Exposition of the Psalms, given by Rev. Dr. Colman," a volume of sermons by Samuel Hieron, given by Samuel Taylor of Boston, and one written by William Morice, Esq., given by Paul Dudley.¹

Social Library. The second, called the "Social Library," was established about the time of the Revolutionary war through the influence of Josiah Wolcott, Dr. Stephen Barton, Jonathan Davis and others, and was an important institution of the village in the latter part of the last century. Its early records are lost. It was at first a stock company and the proceeds of the sales of shares were expended in purchasing books. Donations of books were also made by individuals. Its depository was for many years at the Butler tavern, and later was removed to the dwelling-house of Peter motes it among Gentlemen. The Donors' names are in a Catalogue of the Books, in perpetuum Dont memoriam; I hope their Names will be in everlasting Remembrance with the Lord."

Butler, in whose care it remained until his decease in 1857. A catalogue and list of members, dated 1 March, 1818, gives 113 volumes and 30 proprietors. Total cost of books, $254.27. The catalogue was as follows :

British Album, Brown's Elements, Barclay's Apology, Chesterfield Abridged, Clark's Travels, 3 v., Campbell's Narrative, Dean's Husbandry, Dialogue of Devils, Domestic Encyclopedia, 5 v., Domestic Cookery, Encyclopedia, 18 v., $120, Franklin's Works, Female Biography, Goldsmith's Works, 6 v., Grandpre's Voyage, Holmes' Sketches, 2 v., The Hive, Herriot's Travels, Heathen Gods, Indian Wars, Locke on the Understanding, 2 v., Life of Washington, 5 v., Paradise Lost, Memoirs of Cumberland, Modern Europe, Prideaux's History of the Bible, 4 v., Parents' Friend, Pope's Works, 4 v., Parke's Travels, Porteus' Evidences of Christian Religion, Rely's Works, 2 v., Rights of Women, Rambler, 4 v., Rollin's Ancient History, 8 v., Robertson's America, 2 v., Seneca's Morals, Self Knowledge, Shakespeare, 6 v., Spectator, 8 v., The Task, Thomson's Seasons, Telemachus, 2 v., Thinks I to Myself, Vicar of Wakefield, Views of Religions, Whitney's History of Worcester County, Mrs. Williams' Letters, Winchester's Letters.¹

The proprietors were :

It is known that in 1841 a few shareholders drew out their proportion of books permanently, but not nearly all did so, and on 7 March, 1859, the affairs of the association were closed by the sale of the remaining volumes at auction, for $8.55, to Mr. Daniel Rich.

Society Library. In Jan., 1792, the Congregational Church voted £80 from the Hagburn Fund toward a new library. Mr. Dudley, the pastor, seems to have been the prime mover, and with Capt. Elisha Davis, John Dana and Capt. Ebenezer Humphrey was deputed to buy books. The record recites, "The following are the conditions on which the Church agrees to lay out money . . . in junction with other gentlemen subscribers in the town." The following, outside the Church, paid each 15 shillings and were members : John Ballard, Jonas Eddy, Lemuel Crane, Anthony Sigourney, Simeon Kingsbury, Ebenezer Shumway, Jr., Jesse Stone of Ward, Allen Hancock, Amos Shumway, Jr., Joseph Hurd, Daniel Kingsbury, Ambrose Stone, Jr., Sylvanus Town ; Sigourney sold 1796 to Elias Pratt. In Feb., 1792, books to the value of £27. 14s. were bought and the library was soon opened. In accordance with the by-laws Mr. Dudley was librarian, acting efficiently while he remained in town.

¹In 1839, Judge Barton, then of Worcester, presented to the library four large supplementary volumes of the British Encyclopedia with a volume of plates. In his accompanying note he says: "In tendering it to your association I shall only make a small but grateful return for the pleasure and benefit I derived in the days of my boyhood from their useful library."

The titles of the books first purchased were :

Gibbon's Abridgment, 2 v., Robertson's America, 2 v., Guthrie's Grammar, Morse's Grammar, Dodd's Thoughts, Fordice's Sermons, Paley's Philosophy, Citizen of the World, 2 v., Blackstone's Commentaries, 4 v., Webster's Essay, Paradise Lost, Night Thoughts, Beattie's Evidences, Beattie's Moral Science, Stackhouse His. of Bible, 6 v., The Task, Edwards on the Will, Jenyns' View, Mason on Self Knowledge, Watts' Death and Heaven, Ramsay's History, Doddridge's Rise and Progress, Child's Friend, 2 v., Minot's Insurrections, Keats' Pelew Islands, Vicar of Wakefield, Edwards on Sin, Edwards on Redemption, Gardiner's Life, Blair's Sermons, 2 v., Boston's Distinguished Characters, Edwards on the Affections, Edwards against Chauncy, The Spectator, 8 v., Doddridge Sermons, Christian Theology, Pilgrim's Progress, Martin's Grammar, Newton on Prophecies, 2 v., Seneca's Morals, Hopkins on Holiness, Edwards on Virtue, American Preacher, 3 v., Butler's Analogy, Price's Dissertations, Hervey's Meditations, Bigelow's Tour, 2 v., Millot's Elements, 5 v., Locke's Essay, 2 v., Ferguson's Astronomy, Dean's Husbandry.

The library opened with about 80 volumes. Later, from time to time, additions were made by gift and purchase, and the aggregate was probably nearly double that number. It is no slight compliment to the intelligence and good taste of the people of those times that, as the records testify, these solid volumes were for many years extensively circulated and read throughout the town.

A prudential committee of five was chosen annually to manage its general affairs, and for the first 20 years the following constituted this committee: Ebenezer Learned, Elisha Davis, Samuel Harris, Lemuel Crane, John Ballard, Ebenezer Humphrey, Joseph Hurd, Joshua Turner, John Dana. On Mr. Dudley's removal in 1799 Jonathan Harris was chosen librarian and continued until Jan., 1806, when Rev. J. Moulton became, ex-officio, the custodian. He retained the position until April only, when Col. Sylvanus Town was elected, serving until the settlement of Mr. Batcheller in 1816. In Oct., 1822, Mr. Batcheller died, and Jan., 1823, Calvin Perry was librarian, at which time interest had much declined. In Jan., 1825, the Church voted $60 for new books, and Seth Daniels was chosen librarian. About this time the name was changed from "Society Library" to "Second Social Library." In July, 1831, John Wetherell was in charge, continuing two or three years at least. Later the library was removed to the vestibule of the new Meeting-house, where it has since remained. It had no care, and being in a public place many books disappeared, there being at present only a remnant of about 25 volumes.

Library Association. This was an organization of young people, numbering 50 or more, formed in 1856. It first took the caudle on book." Amos Shumway "blurred Josephus" [snuff]. In Dec., 1890, the few remaining volumes of this collection, and also of the first or Pastor's Library, were by vote of the Church presented to the Free Public Library.

form of a reading-club, meeting at private houses once in two weeks. Conducted by its members was a literary paper called the Evening Star. An attempt was made to raise funds by lectures, but was unsuccessful. In December a dramatic entertainment was given which put over $50 into the treasury which, with membership fees, fines, etc., enabled the society in Dec., 1857, to buy 84 volumes and a case, and a library was opened under the name of the "Association Library." The public were given the use of it by the payment of one dollar per annum for each person. The number of books was increased until it reached about 150 volumes, and the selection was good. Issachar Shumway was first librarian, and the books were kept for a time at the office formerly Dr. Nichols', near the present Dr. Cushman house, since removed to Barton Street. In Jan., 1860, the interest in the society had fallen off. In February meetings were suspended and a committee chosen to care for the library, funds, etc. In November meetings by vote were discontinued. The books were removed to the store of B. W. Childs, one of the committee, remained there for several years, and later were transferred to the Free Public Library.

High School Library. A year or two after the opening of the high school in 1856, a small library had been gathered for its use, chiefly by private contributions. At the same time the Library Association flourished, and in May, 1859, with the design of concentrating the forces, the school voted to incorporate its collection with that of this body. The books continued in the care of the Association for two years, and in May, 1861, the volumes received from the school were returned, and with them a case in which the whole had been kept, and the school library was re-established in its old position. Additions to it have been made and the collection now numbers about 250 volumes, and is a valuable adjunct to the educational appliances of the school.

Farmers' Library. The Oxford Agricultural Library Association was formed 25 July, 1859. The town had been canvassed by an agent of certain book publishers, and 68 shares at $3 each were sold. A constitution and by-laws were adopted, and a library of 148 volumes costing $225 was established. George Hodges, Jr., was first president, and William E. Pease, treasurer and librarian, continuing from first to last. The books were kept at the Post-office and were read considerably for the first few years, but as additions were not made to much extent the interest was not sustained and on 15 Aug., 1870, the collection was by unanimous vote given to the town to be incorporated in the Free Public Library.

School Library. In 1841 school libraries were being printed and established in Massachusetts under the sanction of the Board of Education. The plan contemplated 100 volumes at a cost of $57. At this date 37 volumes had been issued and the sum of $23.55 was raised by subscription in District No. 7, North Gore, and paid 17

March, 1842. By-laws were adopted, officers chosen and the library opened. In 1843 it became the property of the District, George W. Hartwell was chosen librarian, and the books were kept at his house.

Free Public Library. This institution owes its origin to the kindly regard and generous impulses of a distinguished son of the town—Hon. Ira M. Barton. Bearing in mind the benefits he in his youth received from a similar source and the appreciation in which he had been held by the people, he gave the town in his will the sum of one thousand dollars "towards establishing a Free Public Library."¹ This gift was formally accepted in April, 1868. In November, 1869, on the report of a committee appointed the previous April, it was voted to organize a Town Library under the provisions of laws of the State. In April, 1870, an ante-room of the High School-house was appropriated to its use, and a committee was chosen to fit up the same, purchase books and provide for putting the library in operation. The money refunded from the dog-tax was appropriated to the same purpose in accordance with Chap. 250 of the Acts of 1869. In the autumn of 1870 the library was opened. April, 1871, Charles A. Angell, George F. Daniels and E. Harris Howland were chosen committee, with power to employ a librarian and to make by-laws. In 1874 the books, then numbering 1700, were removed to the new Town Hall. The town has, since the beginning, with the exception of one or two years, voted to it the dog-tax fund, which, beside paying running expenses, has brought the number of volumes (April, 1890) up to over 4,000.

Reference Library. A very valuable feature of the institution is the Reference Department with its cyclopedias, dictionaries and books of reference on a great variety of subjects, numbering 450 volumes. For this the town is indebted to the liberality of Hon. George L. Davis of North Andover, who, appreciating the value of public records, in 1876, proposed to the town to present to it $500 for the benefit of its library if it would cause its earlier records of births, marriages and deaths to be copied and indexed. In April, 1876, this offer was accepted and the proposed work was completed during the following summer.

in that town, as an inadequate return for the kindness and patronage of their fathers in my early professional life."

Eight-rod way. Three principal avenues existed in the town at the time of the English settlement. 1. The "Eight-rod way," so called, which, beginning at the fork of the present Thompson and Webster roads, at H. 62, ran northerly over Johnson's Plain, the Great Plain and Town's Plain to the north cemetery, a distance of nearly three miles. Upon this central highway were located chiefly the home lots of the English settlers. The selectmen, confirming the original location, on 6 Feb., 1714, laid out this way as follows :

"Beginning at a white oake tree on Jonsons plain neer Woodstock path, running northwardly marked on the west sid to neland's feald on the great plain by the old mill place, from thence marked on the east Sid by Staks and trees tel it comes to the brooke on the northwardly Sid of peter Shumway's frame of his house [now Ithiel T. Johnson's, H. 185] from thence on the west Sid of the Swamp to and by the Ends of the home Lots of John towne and Israel towne and Daniel Eloit Juner sd way being Eight rods wide."

Two changes have been made in this way since its original location. The first was that made by Rev. John Campbell in 1723. His petition to the proprietors was as follows :

"Gentlemen, whereas I have for the benefit of Travellers and Inhabitants Turned the eight rod highway opposite to my house and the two rod highway that leads to the Great Meadow : the eight rod highway is shortened about 10 or 11 rods and the other about so many, as also it hath saved the making of a bridge of some considerable charges and therefore I humbly request that you would be pleased to accept of the turning of the above said ways at your next meeting.

"(Signed) JOHN CAMPBELL."

¹The original route was on the west side of the common or "training-field" and continued across the flat, now called the "prairie," crossing the brook at its northern extremity. This accounts for the location of the first meeting-house being so far west of the main road: it was, when built, directly on it. The change Mr. Campbell made caused the 8-rod way to pass the east side of the common, down the hill, crossing the brook at the stone bridge east of the railroad, and bearing westerly entering the original location about 60 rods further north. A way from the Plain past Mr. Campbell's house to the great meadow was a necessity and as a bridge was needed there it was desirable that the main road should cross the brook at the same place, instead of having two bridges.

The second change was made in 1793. Until that time the road near Peter Shumway's house on Johnson's Plain, H. 64, turned to the east so as to pass around the hollow north of the site of the Johnson house. At that date it was laid out directly across the hollow in its present location.

Four-rod way. 2. The "four rod way" led from the main road to the fort. This was at the same date laid out as follows:

"beginning att the Eight rod way on the Southwardly Sid of an orchard neer the old mill runing over the old mill brook to a rock on the East of Said brooke from thence marked on the northwardly Side with mark trees tel it coms to barnons land neer the north East Corner of Joseph Chamberlin's Sener's home lot, said way being four rods wide."

Six-rod way. 3. That named in the records of home lots as the "six rod way," being the road to Boston through Sutton, of which no description is recorded prior to May, 1729, when it was accepted as a town road.

Quaboag Lane. Another of the oldest ways in the town, and one which probably had no legal status, perhaps originally an Indian trail, was the "Quaboag" or Brookfield "Lane," which, fording the river at the stone arch bridge, entered the 8-rod way from the west near the house of the late Benjamin Paine, H. 221. In 1764 and in 1772 efforts were made to have this lane closed, but failed.

Of the old "Woodstock Path"—now the road to Webster—long trod by Connecticut pioneers, Huguenots and others, there is no descriptive record.¹ On 24 Nov., 1729, it was voted that the bridge over the river on Woodstock road be paid for by the whole town.²

In 1731 a road south toward Killingly was accepted.

Mill Road. Another highway travelled much in early times, not accepted as a town road until 11 March, 1754, was the 2-rod way beginning at the northeast corner of the burying-ground leading over the hill to the mill, and on westerly. This and the Quaboag Lane were the only roads to Sturbridge and the south part of Charlton until after the Revolutionary war.

Charlton Road. March, 1731, a highway running from the 8-rod road on the north side of Town's Pond past the little cedar swamp and crossing the river near the Joseph Brown place, H. 88, was accepted, and soon opened. In May, 1738, a committee was chosen to fix the location of a bridge over the river on this road.

Bridges. The first bridge of which there is any record was that built over the mill brook in the 8-rod way one mile south of the centre on the Webster road, voted 24 May, 1716. At the same date it was also voted to build a bridge "made passabel for horses over y^e brook" on the road to the fort. There doubtless had been previously a foot-bridge here. Another was voted at the same time over the brook 100 rods east of the centre on the Sutton road. There is a tradition that a beaver dam existed here on which a crossing was made before the bridge was built. In 1736 the Court of Sessions ordered a cart bridge to be built over the river in the North Gore "on the road to Oxford."

Building a road was a thing unknown in the earlier days. "Ways" were opened over the natural soil, and the people as best they could, travelled them on horseback or in ox carts. After 10 or 12 years, in March, 1728, a small sum was voted to repair them. In 1765 it was voted to clear them of snow in the winter.¹

Roads accepted. March, 1732, from Ebenezer Learned's, towards Worcester and Leicester, two rods wide. 1740, from present Rockdale west to Daniel McIntire's, near Charlton line. 1742, that ordered by the Court of Sessions, from Woodstock to Worcester, Ebenezer Learned chairman of committee; the way followed old roads in Oxford.

Bridge on Dudley Road. In Nov., 1742, the town was "presented" before the court for not keeping a good bridge over the river on the Dudley road. The bridge was repaired and the case dismissed. In 1759 the selectmen represented to the Court that they had been at great expense in maintaining this bridge, that but two families lived on the Dudley side of it, and it was little service to the town but wholly used by travellers and inhabitants of Dudley; that it was then out of repair and must soon be re-built, asking that the County assume the cost. This petition was dismissed.

Roads accepted. 1748, from Josiah Kingsbury's, now in Webster, into the "8 rod" or Killingly road; from Roger Amidown's, now Clark's, H. 39, to the "8 rod" way; in 1749, from Jacob Town's, H. 87, into the old Charlton road north of Town's Pond; from Blood's and Dresser's, later Charlton, to Ballard's mill, now Howarth's; in 1750, from Hudson's on Long Hill to the north Meeting-house; from Ebenezer McIntire's, Charlton, over Mashamuckett Hill to the north branch of Little River into the road from Dresser's to Ballard's mill; in 1751, from Sutton line near Ensign Kidder's toward Oxford over land of Hovey, Bogle and Oliver Shumway into a road near Hudson's.

The road leading easterly from the north common existed before 1750. In March, 1753, the town accepted a way from Benjamin Davis', then living near H. 22, northwest into this road, giving him a way to the Meeting-house.

Soon after 1750 Duncan Campbell began erecting a house in the 8-rod road at the head of the common, the site of the present school-house, H. 189. In March, 1754, the town voted to allow him to shut up four rods of the highway, the Court of Sessions granting him leave "to turn the road near his improvements," provided he made the new road as good as the old. In making this change a strip of land a part of the 8-rod way was left on the west side of his house. In March, 1771, this strip, 16 rods long, was voted by the town to Rev. Joseph Bowman, then owner of the adjoining estate on the west. On 11 March, 1754, the town accepted the County road to be four rods wide from the stone bridge southerly to the common, passing the Campbell or Wolcott house.

Roads accepted. March, 1760, from Ebenezer Merriam's, North Gore, to Edwards' mill, later Lamb's; 1771, from Jacob Shumway's, H. 170, and John Hudson's, southeast to Sutton line; 1772, from Israel Phillips' southerly through Freeland's land to the Leicester road. In 1768, by order of Court was laid out a road from Dudley to Worcester, following the old road in Oxford.

Charlton road. After Charlton had been about 20 years incorporated its people began to object to the indirect and hilly route to Oxford, past the Augutteback mill and over Camp Hill, and moved for a new way south of the falls, shorter and quite level, and petitioned the Court of Sessions thereon. The result was that before June, 1774, a road was laid out from Lieut. John Nichols' on the Sturbridge road near the present school-house in the Buffum district, easterly over the river at the present stone bridge, as it now is, and entering the main street near the tavern at the centre.¹ This project was considered a great undertaking, and the town opposed it until forced by the authorities to act. In June, 1774, Ebenezer Learned, Alexander Campbell and Capt. John Larned were chosen to secure an alteration in the route and to have it laid farther to the south, probably so that one bridge might be made to answer for both the Larned neighborhood and Charlton. But this plan failed. The Revolutionary war came on and for eight years we hear nothing of the matter. In 1782, a vote was passed to pay John Nichols £50 for the new road going through his land. In July of that year Abraham Hill, Ebenezer Learned and Daniel Fisk were chosen to petition the General Court for relief from extraordinary charge which fell upon the town by the new County road going through the land of Lieut. Nichols and others. In Nov., 1783, Ebenezer Learned, Daniel Fisk and James Butler were chosen to petition the General Court for authority to make a lottery "to build a bridge and make a road from Doct. Lord's [the tavern keeper] to Lieut. Nichols'." In March, 1784, the selectmen were directed to petition the Court to discontinue this road, and in June a committee was chosen to view the route with the Court's report in detail gives, "hegan four rods south of the house of Ezra Bowman [who had succeeded Ballard], innholder . . . on [westerly] . . . to a popple in Quabog or town road, thence west to the River and Coburn's land, thence on near John Nichols' house."

committee.¹ No effort, however, could relieve the town from its responsibility. In Jan., 1785, the project of a lottery was revived and Daniel Fisk, Samuel Harris and James Butler were chosen to again petition the General Court to grant leave to raise money by such means, or failing in this, to ask that it be made a County expense. After the failure of all expedients the town took hold of the work in earnest, and in June, 1785, Capt. John Larned, Ebenezer Humphrey and Amasa Kingsbury were chosen to oversee the building of the bridge, and in October surveyors were authorized to call upon "as many persons as they think proper to work on the new bridge, and give each one shilling extra per day for their encouragement, which makes 3s. per day." Soon thereafter, this enterprise which had apparently so tried the courage and the resources of the town for more than ten years was completed.²

Roads accepted. 1788, past the Lovett farm, H. 17, to Sutton,—"north end of the floom of Samuel Davis' mill," named in record. March, 1786, from Dea. John Davis', H. 29, to Sutton road. 1791, from Learned's village [Texas] west towards Charlton, 2 rods wide [now discontinued]. May, 1793, from North Common west, as now trod, to "the bridge west of the north meeting house," intersecting the old road to Charlton north of Town's Pond, which was discontinued March, 1819.

Post road. In 1796 was projected a great post route from Hartford to Boston, passing through Sturbridge, Charlton, North Oxford, Grafton, etc. In Jan., 1797, Sylvanus Town was sent as delegate to a convention at Grafton to consider this subject. In May the selectmen were directed to meet the Court's committee "respecting a stage road through the town." In June the town remonstrated against the plan. It, however, was pushed on and the road partly built. But it was an ill-advised scheme so far as its location in Oxford was concerned on account of the natural obstacles existing. From Charlton line easterly its course was through Texas village, striking the foot of Prospect Hill near the Severy place, H. 113, and leading over the hill as it now exists in a direct line four rods in width, entering the Worcester road near the house formerly of Joel Carter in Auburn. But the descent on the easterly side was so abrupt that it was impossible, without a heavy outlay, to make a passable stage road. There must be kept in repair as two of the principal mills in said town stand on the old road"—and therefore praying that the expense of the said road might be made a county charge, or be discontinued, etc.

the enterprise within Oxford limits terminated, and the road was built on a new route two miles farther north in the valley through Rochdale.

Survey of roads. In 1797 all the roads in town were surveyed and geographically described. Daniel Fisk, Sylvanus Town and Jonathan Davis located the highway from Dudley to Ward line, fixing the width of the main street at seven rods, and from the Plain to the north common at six rods, in front of the north common at seven rods and thence northward at six rods, reserving a former grant to Josiah Wolcott [or Duncan Campbell] in 1754. Marvin Moore, Jonathan Harris and Jeremiah Davis established the bounds of all roads in the south part of the town excepting the above named:—

1, To Sutton; 2, from Sutton road southerly to the Major Moore place, H. 30; 3, the north road to Sutton [past Lovett's]; 4, from the 8-rod road to the Silas Fitts place, H. 39; 5, from the "training field" north of the cemetery to Nichols' mill; 6, from the 8-rod road toward the old Fort; 7, from Kingsbury's [now in Webster] to the Thompson road; 8, the Thompson road from Johnson's Plain south to village line; 9, from the north common to Sutton line. They also refer to the "Nealand road," "Quaboag Lane," "Edwards' road," "Dea. Harwood's road," H. 40, the County road toward Charlton, and that to "Robertson's [Robinson's?] mill."

Jeremiah Learned, Ebenezer Learned and Jonas Eddy reported for the north part of the town:—

1, The road east from Carbuncle [Town's] Pond, following a track which had long been open, between H. 139 and H. 141, past Ambrose Stone's, H. 166, Crane's, H. 165, Shumway's, H. 164, Hovey's, H. 162, Kidder's, H. 161, Blanchard's, H. 160, across a corner of Sutton now Millbury, past Daggett's, H. 159, and turning west to John Pratt's, H. 147, thence south past H. 151, H. 153, the present North Oxford railroad station, Adams', H. 174, Turner's, H. 175, back into the same road, at a point one-fourth of a mile east of the pond, two rods wide, excepting that part from the pond easterly to the intersection, which was to be two and one-half rods; 2, from the "great road" at Town's Pond west to the river, and on across "Collicum brook" to Charlton line; 3, from the latter north over Mount Pleasant [Rocky Hill] across the McIntire road into the Leicester road; 4, the Leicester road from near the Ebenezer Learned place to the N. Gore south line; 5, from Ebenezer Merriam's to the Leicester road; 6, from the Uriah Stone place to Richard Moore's [east of the river(?)]; 7, from Lamb's mill up Prospect Hill to Ward line; 8, from Israel Phillips' south to the Leicester road, and from this road to Israel Trow's house; 9, the McIntire road [west from Rockdale across the river to Charlton line]; 10, from William Eddy's [now Pope's], H. 132, to the County road near Kidder's, H. 133; 11, a road north from the road between John Pratt's, H. 147, and Arthur Daggett's, H. 158; 12, from Jonathan Kidder's, H. 161, southeast to Sutton line.

In Aug., 1799, a highway from the Salem Learned neighborhood [southwest] to the new County road to Charlton, intersecting it one-third of a mile west of Main Street, was accepted. This road crossed the river at a ford with a foot-bridge a short distance north of the present bridge.

Douglas road. In 1800 a County road from Cumberland, R. I., through Douglas and a part of Sutton and Oxford was laid out, and in March, 1803, Nathan Hall, Abijah Davis and Marvin Moore were chosen to contract for its building in Oxford. In 1801 a County road was laid out from Jeremiah Kingsbury's, now Webster almshouse, southeast, near the pond, to Philip Brown's in the South Gore, and in August Jonathan Davis and Abijah Davis, committee, reported that they had let it out to be built, 234 rods at $110.

Town districted. In 1802 the town was first districted for the repairs of the highways. Surveyors had been previously chosen with no special limits. This year five districts were made, viz.: the East, South, North, Northeast and Centre. Before this date little labor was bestowed upon the roads; but as wheeled vehicles came into use there was a demand for better ways and also better implements for repairs. An attempt was made to purchase ploughs for the purpose but failed. In May, 1802, a vote was passed authorizing the selectmen to buy "six scrapers for use on the roads." In March, 1810, Mr. James Butler proposed to furnish at his own expense "a suitable plough" to be kept at his barn for the use of the town, which offer was accepted with thanks.

Roads accepted. Sept., 1803, from present Howarth's village north to Charlton road; May, 1804, from Thomas Davis', H. 28, north to Sutton road; Nov., 1805, from John Hudson's, H. 168, south to William Hudson's, Long Hill.

The Freshets of the winter of 1806-7 were disastrous to the bridges on the river, and all were more or less damaged. The dam also at Aaron Sibley's mill, North Oxford, was destroyed.

Bridge and Causeway. For many years the residents west of the Maanexit and south of the "Little River" suffered great inconvenience for want of means of crossing the main stream. They were obliged either to ford it below the mouth of Little River, which they did for a long time, or to ford the latter stream near its mouth and go up to the bridge on the Charlton road in order to get to town. Several ineffectual efforts were made by John Larned and others to obtain action in the matter. At length, in 1807, the town was induced to listen to their appeals, and voted to build a road from Kingsbury's, H. 74, to the County road to Charlton, including a bridge, and a causeway across the meadow. Jeremiah Kingsbury, Jonathan Davis and Jonathan Harris were chosen to contract for and supervise the work, which was completed and accepted Oct., 1807.¹

Roads accepted. March, 1808, from Solomon Harwood's, H. 40, to the town road; from Dea. Dana's, H. 22, northwest to the "eight-lots road"; April, 1810, from the Worcester road near its junction with the Leicester road, east to near the present North Oxford railroad station; May, 1811, on the west side of the river

south from the "great bridge" to Dudley line, nearly following the old "Woodstock path"; May, 1812, from near John Larned's barn, now Moses Larned's, Webster, southwest toward the North Village; same date, from Elijah Rich's, H. 5, to old Douglas turnpike.

Turnpike. The Douglas, Sutton and Oxford turnpike was built by a company of which Jonathan Davis was president, and was completed in 1810. A committee of the Court reviewed it and established a toll-gate at the house of Abram Briggs. It was made a County road in 1834. In 1817 at several town meetings votes were taken on a new road from the "North Factory" toward Leicester, and a committee was chosen to petition the Court of Sessions for a discontinuance. It was, however, ordered built and was finished in 1818, Rufus Moore, William Moore and Stephen Barton having charge.

Roads accepted. July, 1817, from Nichols' mill east and south by the pond to Charlton road; a cart road with bars and gate existed here previously; March, 1819, from Joel Eddy's, now Pope's, H. 132, to Worcester road; May, 1819, from Joseph Elliot's factory [Rockdale] to Mr. Adams' house; April, 1821, from Daniel Rawson's by Ephraim Kingsbury's to town road; July, 1822, from Stephen Prince's, now Conlin's, to town road.

In April, 1823, it was voted to pay interest to William Hurd on money due him for "building the Great Bridge." This repairing was probably done in 1822, and was a rebuilding of the wood-work. It was what was termed a "gallows bridge," of heavy timber and planking.

Millbury and Sutton roads. In 1823 a road from the north common, east to Sutton line was planned, but was opposed by the town. At the same time a movement was made for a road from the same point northeast to Millbury; on the latter it was voted to leave it to the discretion of the town agent to oppose or not, as he saw fit. This way had been laid out by the Court's committee in 1812. Both these roads were opened as County roads, and 1 Aug., 1825, $1,200 was raised by the town to meet the cost. Stephen Barton, Stephen Davis and Joseph Lamb were building committee.

In Sept., 1824, a road from the Eliott mill, near the Hawes place, southeast to the Joshua Turner house, H. 175, was discontinued.¹ In Nov., 1825, was accepted a way from south of the mill at Buffumville north to the Charlton road. In May, 1826, that part of the old Worcester road between Rockdale [Bartlett's] and Nathaniel Ide's residence, H. 125, was discontinued. In 1827 the Court of Sessions ordered changes in the Sutton road from near Capt. Ebenezer Rich's, H. 15, east a third of a mile or more to school-house No. 1. In June, the Gore, about 62 rods from Oxford line, "running along near the river, three rods wide." The original is among the Hartwell papers.

1829, Samuel Slater had petitioned for improvements in the road from Oxford to his factories, on which changes were made, the principal one being near the town line, beginning at Oxford almshouse and instead of passing over the hill continued directly at the west foot of it in a level course. The work was completed in 1830.

Dudley road. In Sept., 1829, Jonathan Davis, William Moore and Benjamin F. Town were chosen to oppose a road from Dudley to Worcester to pass through the west part of Oxford, which was done successfully. As a compromise, perhaps, in 1830 the road from near John Larned's, H. 71, southwest to the "Upham Neighborhood" in Dudley was laid out, and in 1831 was built, and the old way past the William Hurd place, H. 60, up the steep hill, was discontinued as a County road. In 1832 the "new County road to Southbridge" is named. It was built in the spring of that year, and in the main followed the old road in Oxford.

Roads accepted. 1832, from Samuel Mayo's [Huguenot Fort], H. 33, northwest to the "Harwood" road at Bondet Hill; from Main Street at the Universalist Meeting-house west to the Charlton road, called Barton Street, 35 feet wide; 1833, from Andrew Fitts', H. 31, to the house of Samuel Mayo [Fort Hill]; in 1833 the road from Charlton to Worcester through Texas village was laid out, and built in 1834; 1834 from near Peter Shumway's, H. 64, to Bondet Hill road; 1835, from Isaac Bolster's, H. 6, to Thomas Rich's, H. 5; from North Oxford tavern north to the new Charlton and Worcester road; 1837, from the Thread village to Stephen Prince's, H. 85.

Hartford turnpike. The "Central Turnpike" to Boston, east part of the town (Webster to West Sutton), built in 1826 and 1827 by a corporation of which Jonathan Davis was treasurer, was in 1838 laid out as a County road and accepted by the town.

Gore roads. The North Gore having been annexed to Oxford, in March, 1838, the roads in that locality were accepted, viz.: that from Leicester line to Oxford old line, 281 rods; that past Jotham Meriam's and that past Samuel Meriam's to Charlton line. Jan., 1841, the bridge over the river at Cyrus Lamb's mill, North Oxford, was rebuilt, the old one having been carried away by high water.

Roads accepted. May, 1841, from David Stone's, H. 125, west to main road; April, 1842, from Reuben Davis', H. 3, to Douglas Turnpike; March, 1844, from Marshall Pratt's, H. 173, south to Sutton road; April, 1844, from Simon Larned's, H. 73, north to Dudley road; Nov., 1844, from Millbury line past Alger's, H. 161, Hiel Day's, H. 162, Edson's, H. 163, and Luther Burnet's, H. 166, to Millbury road near brick school-house; April, 1845, from the McIntire road southwest past Thomas Appleby's, H. 94, to Charlton line; May, 1845, from Joseph Brown, Jr.'s, H. 22, south to Sutton road; Nov., 1846, from Artemas Merriam's, H. 103, to Rufus Eddy's, H. 105; April, 1847, from near Nehemiah Collier's, H. 186, east past the John Campbell homestead [now Hall's], turning south to the common; Sept., 1847, from the Sutton road, near H. 13, north through Saccarappa and west to Francis Sibley place, H. 19, ordered by County Commissioners; April, 1847, from near John Hurd's, H. 42, past David Day's [on Bondet Hill] and Nathaniel Davis place to David Wait's, H. 28; Nov., 1848, from Ebenezer Crane's to Charlton road near Horace Pope's, H. 89a; Sept., 1850, from Charlton road near Methodist church south to Wheelock cottage, 40 feet wide; Nov., 1851, from Simon Larned's, H. 73, south to the old Dudley road.

Main Street improved. In 1838(?) Main Street was extended from the common north across the meadow, changing its location to the west to avoid a railroad crossing, and was built by the Norwich and Worcester R. R. Co., and as a compensation Ebenezer Rich was authorized to deed the railroad a right of way across the town farm. Later a committee was chosen to settle with the company. In 1839, through the efforts of Samuel Dowse and others who subscribed for the purpose, the roadway across the Plain had been gravelled from the railroad excavation.

Streets re-located. In July, 1851, it was voted to request the County Commissioners to relocate and establish the bounds of the roads from Webster to Auburn, and from Sutton to Charlton line, with Barton Street, and Mr. Lester, surveyor, was employed to find the old lines. In Nov., 1852, it was voted that the County Commissioners be invited to review this survey and to fix bounds. This was done in Sept., 1853.¹

In May, 1852, after some controversy, the road from the railroad station to the villages at North Oxford was laid out by the County Commissioners. The same year was built that from Buffumville south to Webster road.

Roads accepted. Nov., 1853, from North Oxford railroad station east to near Shepardson's, H. 165; March, 1854, from Sutton road south, first street east of railroad; 1856, from Conlin's, H. 85, north to Charlton road; April, 1866, the street running north from the north side of the old cemetery, and east from this to Main Street at S. C. Willis, Jr.'s, each three rods wide; also from Main Street at Lewis Stockwell's to the first named, two rods wide.

In 1854, Main Street from near the centre, nearly a half-mile north,

¹The line of Main Street was established as follows: Beginning at the south end at monument No. 1, 2 rods and 16 links N. 50° E. of the northwest corner of the brick house, thence N. 33° E. 24 rods and 8 links to monument No. 2 [near H. 209], thence N. 14° 20' E. 219 rods and 6 links to monument No. 3 [near the tall elm north end of the street], thence N. 26° 10' E. 25 rods and 5 links to monument No. 4 [in the doorway of John Shea's house]. This is the original line of the street which from No. 1 to No. 3 is seven rods wide. Beginning at opposite No. 3, at a monument a few rods north from the house of Allen L. Joslin, thence N. 15° E. 25 rods and 12 links [across the common] to monument No. 1 [at southeast corner of land of B. F. White, H. 244]. From No. 3 where the road is seven rods wide, the road diverges to monument No. 4, where it is 12 rods and half a link wide; thence from monument No. 1, N. 14° E. 99 rods to No. 2, which is six rods 17 links N. 86° 15' W. from the northwest corner of the house of George Wicker. From the head of the common where the road is six rods and 22 links wide the road converges to five rods and 18 links at No. 2.

was straightened and graded, the part across the meadow being raised several feet and the approaches cut down, at a cost of $536. April, 1868, voted $500 to grade Main Street, to be done by the selectmen. A much needed drainage was obtained, and the street improved by forming gutters and raising the travelled way. In 1872 the road at North Cemetery Hill, the most difficult in the principal highways of the town, was improved at a cost of $1,672.

In 1872-3 a new road from near Rochdale to Texas village was built, and thence south to the North Cemetery the old rebuilt, costing $15,491, the heaviest and most important piece of work of the kind done at one time in the town. In 1877 the Commissioners ordered built on Long Hill toward Millbury, a road which was constructed that year by Wheelock and Shurtleff at a cost of $693. April, 1877, May Street opened; April, 1882, Wolcott Street accepted, 1884, two streets running from Main west to Fremont accepted; 1885, accepted Water Street, running east from the common. Nov., 1887, from North Oxford railroad station to Charles H. Wellington's, H. 129, and $700 voted for the same; built by Wellington and opened to travel May, 1888.

Bridges. In 1858, stone arch, on Webster road, built by Brigham Converse, cost $665; winter of 1874-5, over the Maanexit on Charlton road, nearly completed and fell, April, 1875; rebuilt by Charles N. Walker, 1875, cost about $2,000; 1879, over the river in North Gore by Wellington Brothers, cost $850; 1880, at Buffumville, by Joseph L. Woodbury, cost $1,000; 1884, at Howarth's, by Joseph L. Woodbury, cost $2,000; 1889, over mill brook, east of centre, by William Y. Woodbury, cost $392; 1889, over the river at Rockdale [Bartlett's], by P. F. and M. Kenney, cost $2,200.

French War. There is no recorded action of the town on this subject. The State raised nearly 7,000 soldiers for the war, the object of which was the conquest of Canada, and the number which went from Oxford indicates that the people were ready to meet the demands of the times. Capt. Ebenezer Learned was the most efficient military man of the place, and was ably seconded by Rev. John Campbell, who was skilled in army affairs. Very few appear to have entered the service previous to 1756. Two companies of militia then existed, commanded respectively by Edward Davis and Samuel Davis, brothers, from both of which soldiers were enlisted in a new company under Learned. Preparations for the campaign were made in the spring of 1756, the company had marched to the seat of war, and as a part of Col. Ruggles' regiment was in camp at Lake George, 9 Sept. A roll of this date numbers 51 men.

Rolls. The following are the names from Oxford, others were from surrounding towns:

Ebenezer Learned, Capt., age 28, b. at Ox.; Elisha Rich [Sutton], Lieut., a. 38, b. at Bellingham; Elijah Town, Sergt., a. 35, b. at Ox.; privates: Joseph Baker, a. 25, shop joiner, b. at Woodstock; Solomon Smellidge, a. 22, b. at Boston; Ebenezer Davis, a. 18, b. at Sutton; John Barnes, a. 19, blacksmith, b. at Boston; Elijah Curtis [N. Gore], a. 19, b. at Topsfield; Hezekiah Eddy, a. 23, b. at Ox.; Samuel Manning, a. 17, b. at Salem; Jonathan Eddy, a. 20, b. at Ox. [son of Samuel, d. at Fort Edward]; Isaac Larned, Jr., a. 18, b. at Ox.; Caleb Barton, Jr., a. 20, tanner, b. at Ox.; Stephen Shumway, a. 20, b. at Ox.; Samuel Baker, a. 60, joiner, b. at Woburn; Josiah Kingsbury, a. 24 [son of Josiah], clerk, b. at Ox., d. 1756.

Jeremiah Learned was Ensign under his brother Ebenezer. John Wiley, Jr., and Joseph Phillips are on a previous roll, whether they were in service does not appear. A roll, 12 Oct., 1756, gives "Solomon Smellidge, dead; Stephen Shumway, sick; Isaac Larned, Jr., sick at Albany." In his petition to the General Court, 27 May, 1757, Isaac Larned says, "by reason of the small pox being there he was removed to a barn, and continued very sick . . . suffered very much by cold and hunger . . . I tarried with him about a week and nursed him and then he died."¹ In May, 1757, Ebenezer Eddy and David Town, Jr., were voted pay for assisting "sick and dying" soldiers in returning from Crown Point expedition.² Caleb Barton was voted £3 for expenses to Fort William Henry, where his son Caleb d. 1756. Experience Stockwell's husband Ichabod was in Capt. Learned's company, set out for home, was taken sick at Sheffield and d. Nov., 1756; she was allowed £2. 2s.

A roll of Philip Richardson's Co. in Ruggles' Reg't, 26 Aug., 1756, gives Enoch Jones, Serg't, N. Gore, a. 22, b. at Sutton; Noah McIntire, a. 30; Philip McIntire, a. 58, both b. at Salem, both from Oxford, Charlton District, Capt. Dresser. A roll of Capt. Joshua Meriam, N. Gore, 26 Sept., 1758, gives Joshua Meriam, Capt., Uriah Stone, clerk, Isaac Hartwell, Robert Meriam, Hezekiah Eddy, Elijah Curtis, Ebenezer Lock—served three years, tradition—privates, from Oxford, N. Gore. These were in service Sept., 1757; marched to relieve the province forts, went to Sheffield, were out eight days, and returned.

The results of the campaign of 1756 were indecisive, through the inefficiency of Gen. Abercrombie. The year 1757 was disastrous to the colonial arms.

Fort William Henry taken. On 3 Aug., 1757, Gen. Montcalm with a large force besieged Fort William Henry which, with 2,372 men, after a hard struggle capitulated on the 9th. The surrender was followed by a wanton massacre of nearly 300 of our soldiers by the Indians. Dismay seized the people of Massachusetts, and on all hands the militia hastened to the rescue. The enemy did not, however, follow up his advantage, and the reliefs were ordered back. Detachments from the two Oxford companies marched 10 Aug. as far as Sheffield, 105 miles, and were out 16 days, as follows, first detachment, date of roll 18 Aug. :—

Edward Davis, Capt.; John Edwards, Lieut.; Jeremiah Learned, Ens.; Jedediah Barton, Sergt.; Joseph Edwards, Sergt.; John Town, Sergt.; Phinehas Ward, Corp.; Moses Town, Corp.; Alexander Nichols, Jacob Comins, Ebenezer Eddy, John Wiley, William Eddy, Joseph Phillips, Jr., Israel Phillips ("detached and sent to Stockbridge"), Daniel Fairfield, John Duncan, Hezekiah Merriam, Jr., Jonathan Phillips, Silas Town, Samuel Larned, Ebenezer Gale, Jr., Joseph Gleason, Samuel Eddy, Jr., Elisha Gleason, Moses Gleason, Jr., Joseph Goggins ("detached and sent to Stockbridge"), Josiah Wolcott, Aaron Parker, Edmund Town, Joseph Pratt, Jesse Pratt, Nathan Shumway, David Pratt, privates.

Coller, John Shumway, William Nichols, John Barton, Jonathan Fuller, Ichabod Town, Joseph Pratt, Jr., Stephen Jewett, Joseph Davis, Benjamin Hudson, John Marvin, Isaac Town, Adams Streeter, Arthur Humphrey, Peter Shumway, Joseph Kingsbury, Jeremiah Kingsbury, Roger Amidown, Abijah Harris, Zebulon Streeter, John Dana, Samuel Manning, John Watson, John Robbins, John Coburn, John Shumway, Jr., William Comins, William Learned, Joseph Wilson, John Moore, privates.

The company were mounted and marched under Capt. Davis to Springfield and thence to Sheffield under Capt. Larned.¹

In October, 1757, Capt. John Larned with 29 men, of whom 12 were of Oxford, called the "Minute expedition," marched as far as Westfield, being out from Oct. 20 to Nov. 11, three weeks and two days. Roll:

John Larned, Capt.; Jonathan(?) Nichols, Lieut.; Jacob Cummins, Sergt.; Jeremiah Shumway, Corp.; Joseph Davis, John Duncan, Ebenezer Fish, Nathan Moore, Ebenezer Eddy, William Lamb, John Nichols, Elijah Larned, Arthur Humphrey, privates.

A return of men enlisted in John Chandler's regiment for the invasion of Canada under Gen. Amherst, 1758, gives:

John Bogle, a. 32; Elijah Town, a. 40; Abraham Pratt, a. 19; William Lackey, a. 28, Serg. [was granted land]; Joseph Goggins, a. 19;² Moses Town, a. 37; Solomon Comings, a. 18; Samuel Streeter, a. 17; Abijah Gale, a. 30 [served several years,—tradition]; John Duncan, a. 53; Nathan Moore, a. 32; David Town, a. 24; John Ballard, a. 28; Abel Leavens, a. 17; Peter Shumway, a. 24; Jonathan Phillips, a. 24; Elijah Larned, a. 19; Richard Moore, 3d, a. 22; Zebulon Streeter, a. 21; all of Oxford.

On a roll of Capt. Newhall's company, Leicester, are Joseph Goggins, Joseph Kingsbury, Israel Phillips, Zebulon Streeter, all of Oxford.³

In 1760 Micah Pratt represented that his son David was, in 1758, sick at Half-moon, 160 miles distant; that he hired a horse, carried provision for himself and horse and got his son home; lost 13 days' time and used 1 gal. of rum. Paid 34s. 4d. June, 1760, Edward Davis' son Edward was in Jeremiah Learned's company, sick at Ticonderoga; he went for him and got him home. Allowed £1. 19s. 4d. March, 1761, Ebenezer Eddy's son Thomas in service under Capt. White in 1758, was sick; his father went for him; he so far recovered as to enlist again in 1759 under Jeremiah Learned; was sick again and came home. Received £3. Peter Shumway in the Canada expedition, 1759, was sick. Paid March, 1761, 12 shillings. Same date Benjamin Fitts asked pay; marched for relief of Fort ² Goggins was in Capt. White's company and served through the campaign. In Feb., 1761, he had been 38 weeks, five days in Capt. McFarland's company, and that month re-enlisted for further service.

William Henry—name left off the roll. Granted 24 shillings. David Town, Jr., asked aid on account of sickness. Granted 35 shillings, Nov., 1761. Nearly all these sums were paid to Capt. Edward Davis for the petitioners.

Canada surrendered. In July, 1758, Louisburg, the key of the Canadas, was taken. In July, 1759, Niagara yielded, and a few weeks later Ticonderoga was surrendered and consequently Crown Point abandoned. On 13 Sept. came Wolfe's victory at Quebec. On 6 Sept., 1760, Gen. Amherst sat down with a large force before Montreal, and two days later French dominion in Canada ended, and "all that magnificent structure which the genius of Champlain and the patient labors of the French Jesuits had devotedly raised, vanished."

A roll of Capt. Jeremiah Learned's company, 6 Feb., 1760, includes the following:—

Jeremiah Learned, Captain; Jonathan Holman of Sutton, Lieut.; William Lamb, Samuel Learned, Reuben Barton, Corporals; David Pratt, Jr., Thomas Eddy, Edward Davis, Jr., Hezekiah Meriam, Jr., Samuel Manning, Jr., Ebenezer Lamb, privates; all of Oxford.

This company, most of the members of which were from Sutton and Charlton, was in 1760, at Ticonderoga.

Other Oxford men known to have been in the service were:—

Israel Whitney in Cape Breton exp., 1745; Jonas Gleason, Cape Breton expedition, Jan., 1752; William Campbell in Louisburg expedition, 1758; Naphtali Streeter, 1759; Richard Rogers, the schoolmaster, 1760; Edmund Barton, Samuel Call. Jacob and Josiah Town, sons of Dea. Jonathan, were at Fort Edward, 1755, and Jacob d. there. John Streeter d. 28 Nov., 1756, at Sheffield. Benjamin Davis, Lieut., served many months. [Samuel Jennison, Lieut. in 1756, not from Oxford.]

On a roll of Capt. McFarland's company, 3 Feb., 1761, are:

Abijah Gale, Micah Pratt, Abraham Pratt, Nathaniel Smith, Reuben, son of Oliver Shumway, William Lackey and Joseph Guggins, all of Oxford, who had then served from 35 to 38 weeks each.

At this date the war was nominally ended, but Massachusetts raised a force of 3,000 men early in 1761.

After the close of the war in the first regiment, Worcester County militia, March, 1763, were officers from Oxford as follows:

Edward Davis, Major. First Oxford Co., Elisha Davis, Capt.; John Nichols, Lieut.; William Larned, Ensign. Second Oxford Co., Jeremiah Learned, Capt.; Jedediah Barton, Lieut.; John Town, Jr., Ensign—in 1771, Edward Davis, Major. First Oxford Co., Elisha Davis, Capt.; Ephraim Ballard, First Lieut.; William Watson, Second Lieut.; Thomas Town, Ensign. Second Oxford Co., Joseph Phillips, Capt.; Samuel Eddy, Lieut.; Isaac Putnam, Ensign.

French Neutrals. A source of perplexity to the government at the beginning of the war in 1755 was the plantation of French in Nova Scotia. The number of these has been variously stated, the lowest estimate being 7,000. Though British subjects their sympathies were with their fellow-countrymen and it was charged that they furnished them with provisions and other means of carrying on the contest. After consultation the Governor and Council determined to remove them by force. Their lands and other property were declared forfeited, and from the town of Grand Pré alone nearly 2,000 were removed. Some escaped, but to prevent their subsistence the country was laid waste and buildings destroyed.¹

"Where is the thatched roof village, the home of Acadian farmers, Men whose lives glided on like rivers that water the woodland Darkened by shadows of earth, but reflecting the image of heaven?
Waste are their pleasant farms, and the farmers forever departed!
Scattered like dust and leaves, when the mighty blasts of October Seize them and whirl them aloft, and sprinkle them far o'er the ocean.
Naught but tradition remains of the beautiful village of Grand pré."²

Sent to the towns. These people were "scattered like dust and leaves" throughout the colonies. About 1,000 were brought to Massachusetts, sent to the towns and bound out to service. Sixty-three came to Worcester County, a large family named Dugar to this region, two of its members to Sturbridge, three to Oxford, two to Charlton and two to Dudley. They experienced many hardships, families were separated, and being Roman Catholics prejudice existed against them and they were treated little better than slaves.³ A petition for redress was sent to the General Court, signed by nine persons from several towns, among them Claude Bennois of Oxford, as follows, [translation]:—

"To his Excellency the Governor General of the Province of Massachusetts Bay in New England, and to the honorable Gentlemen of the Council,

"We have taken the liberty to present to you this Request, inasmuch as we are in Grief on account of our Children. The loss we have suffered [in being deprived] of our habitations and brought hither, and in our Separations from one another, is as Nothing Compared with that which we experience now, in having our Children taken by force before our very eyes. Nature itself cannot endure this. Were it in our Power to take our Choice, we would choose sooner to yield up our Bodies and our Souls than to be separated from them. Wherefore we beseech you and your honours, that you would have the goodness to appease this Cruelty. We do not by any means Refuse to work for the support of our Children provided it be endured for our families [intact]. Beseeching you that you would have the goodness to regard our Request: thus doing You will oblige Your very humble and very obedient servants."

On this petition it was ordered that the selectmen "desist from binding out any of them—that houses be provided for each family so they may keep together," and if any should be bound out "the assent of two justices of y^e peace in y^e County be first had thereon, and all of them treated with kindness and humanity." Passed by the Council 15 April, 1756. House of Representatives concurred 17 April, 1756.¹

² Evangeline, the heroine of this poem, was the daughter of the wealthiest farmer of Grand Pré. Mr. Longfellow wrote: "The poem of Evangeline is only historical as it is based on the fact of the dispersion of the Acadians. The story itself is a tradition—the details and the name are of my own invention."

³ By a law passed 10 June, 1756, selectmen and overseers of the poor were "ordered to keep the French People from Idling and Wandering about," and that none be permitted to travel from town to town without the leave of two, either of the selectmen or overseers of the poor. Prov. Laws, III., 960.

Claude Bennois. On 2 Feb., 1757, Gludo Benway [Claude Bennois, signer of the foregoing petition from Oxford²] represented to the General Court that he and his family were placed by the government at Cambridge and his children were by the selectmen of that town afterward sent to Mr. [Duncan] Campbell of Oxford, whither the petitioner and his wife followed them, that said Campbell dispersed their five children, whereupon the petitioner and his family fled to Newtown, that the selectmen of said town refused to do anything for them and "threaten to send them to Goal,"—praying the Court would provide some comfortable abode for them, they "being willing to do all in their Power to Support themselves." On this it was ordered that the selectmen of Newton be allowed to remove petitioners to Cambridge, where they were originally placed. The Council non-concurred, and on 8 Feb. voted that they be sent to Dunstable. On this the House of Representatives ordered the petition to "lye on the table," and Benway had no redress. On 11 April, 1757, Henry Gibbs, Esq., of Newton, asked of the Court that "Glude Benua his Wife and Five Children," lately sent to Oxford, and then of Newton be removed elsewhere—upon which it was ordered that they be sent to Dedham, that the selectmen of that town receive them "and govern themselves with regard to them according to law."³

Campbell's Petition. On 2 June, 1757, Duncan Campbell represented to the General Court "that the selectmen of Newton bound out to him five children of some of the late inhabitants of Nova Scotia, that on his placing them at Worcester their parents followed them there, and as the result they all went away"; asking allowance, on which was voted him 42 shillings, 3½ pence.

In November Mr. Campbell presented another memorial setting forth that:—

"last May session [he] preferred a petition to the honorable Court that £17. 13s. 4d. might be allowed [him] for transporting from Cambridge to Oxford and keeping some French Neutrals . . . from which [he] hath never received any profit or service, they refusing to work—that upon said petition said Court was pleased to allow [him] no more than 42s. 3½d.—that the honorable Board have sent your petitioners servants to the town of Dedham and so he is deprived of any service from them until this time, notwithstanding the great expense he was put to in maintaining them . . ."

He prays he may be allowed the remainder of his account "or that he may have an order from the honorable Court to take those that were bound to him from Dedham and compel them to work."

The chief item in his bill was for boarding the family at Capt. Thomas Stearns', Worcester. Upon this petition, on 20 March, 1758, in the House of Representatives, five pounds, nine shillings and four pence were ordered paid, but the Council non-concurred.¹

Expenses. On 26 Aug., 1757, a warrant was drawn to pay from the treasury of the colony £15. 6s. 6d. to the selectmen of Oxford for the support of "French from Nova Scotia sent there."²

A large family named LeBlanc came to Oxford.³ Supplies from 10 March, 1758, to 24 May, 1759, were furnished them by Dr. Alexander Campbell, for which he sent a bill of £21 to the Legislature. From May, 1759, to March, 1760, Edward Davis, Esq., provided for them at an expense of £18. This family, father, mother and nine children, later removed to Brimfield.⁴

Revolutionary War. Two adverse influences combined to modify in a measure public action in the time of the Revolution; first, the existence to a considerable extent, especially in the north part of the town, of a sentiment opposed to the popular current; and second, the limited means of the people.⁵ The majority, however, stood firmly together, and were heart and hand in the great movement, and although at times there was a lack of promptness, all demands for men and supplies were met.

In May, 1774, an article in a warning for a town meeting was as follows: "to see if the Town will give their Representative any Instructions concerning the Making good the Damage don in destroying the Tea in the Harbor of Boston sometime past." This article was "not brought to a vote." A warning dated 12 Sept., 1774, has an article "To see if the town will pass a resolve that they will keep strictly to our Province Laws made agreeable to our Charter and that we will support the Justices and other Officers of the Town in the Execution of their Offices agreeable to Said Laws, or act thereon." A postscript to this warrant expressed the desire of several leading citizens "that all the Officers and Soldiers may appear" at said meeting "in Order to Consider of Some Measures to be taken to Govern the Military Body of this town." The meeting was held 29 Sept., Edward Davis, Moderator, and passed the following:—

Resolves.—

"Resolved that as by the late acts of Parliament we are deprived of the Constitutional Laws of the Government of the Massachusetts Bay we will endeavor so far as in us lies to Maintain and keep Peace & good order in this

³ Perhaps the same as ordered 10 Sept., 1756, to be removed from Point Shirley to Needham. Prov. Laws, III., 1058.

⁴ On 24 June, 1766, the House of Representatives, in response to a petition of Francis LeBlanc, ordered the sum of £5. 2s. 8d. to be paid from the treasury for a doctor's bill as set forth in said petition, and that Brimfield should show cause why said sum should not be added to its next province tax.

Town and Support and uphold all Civil Officers in the Execution of their Offices so far as they conform themselves to the Charter Rights of this Government, and assist them duly to punish all offenders against the same laws and do bear Testimony against all Riots as well as against any number of men Collecting in Body's together to hurt the Personal Property of anyone.

"Resolved that we Ever have and will be True and Loyal Subjects of our most Gracious Sovereign George the 3d. King of Great Britain, so long as we are permitted the free Execution of our Charter Rights.

"Resolved that considering the present Alarming and Distrest Circumstances of this Province it is highly Necessary for the Militia Officers of this Town to Resign their Commissions and therefore do advise the said Officers to resign accordingly and for the Souldery as soon as may be to Elect the same Officers to take the Command of the Different Companys in this Town if they will accept and the Major Part of the Souldery shall Elect them and if any Refuse to Serve then to Chuse others Experienced in the arts of War in their Stead.

"Voted and Chose Doctor Alexander Campbell and Capt. Ebenezer Learned to Attend the Provincial Congress at Concord, the second tuesday of October next, or at any other Town in the Province that shall be agreed on. The foregoing Resolves are past with no other aim or View than to keep Peace and Order in this Town untill we can hear of Some Measures taken by the Continental Congress now sitting at Philadelphia to which we mean Strictly to Adhear."

In November a meeting was called "to hear some Resolves of the Grand Congress," and also of the Provincial Congress and act thereon. At this meeting Edward Davis was moderator. Adjourned to 16 Dec. "Then met" and voted "that the Province Tax in the hands of the Constables be paid into the town treasury, and the town will protect said Constables," and chose Lieut. William Campbell, Daniel Phillips and Lieut. Samuel Eddy a committee of inspection to see that the association of the Continental Congress be duly observed.¹

Minute-men. In the warning for March, 1775, was an article "To see if the town will use all proper ways and means in a Constitutional way and manner to Defend themselves against any Invation against them whatsoever: and Grant pay to the Minute-men so called or act thereon." On which it was voted "That we will in all Reasonable ways and means whatsoever Strive to maintain our Charter Rights and priveledgs by all Constitutional measures even to the Resque of our lives and property." "Voted That there shall be ten stands of fire arms fixed with Bayonets provided by the Select Men at the Cost of the Town and Kept for those that are not able to find themselves shows, etc., to wear no mourning for deceased friends excepting crape on the hat, or black ribbons and necklaces for ladies, and to furnish no gloves at funerals; to take no advantage of a scarcity of an article to raise the price thereof, and to withdraw fellowship and patronage from all who did not adhere to the scales of prices which might be adopted. They also recommended that in every State, county and town committees be appointed to see that these articles be observed.

in arms in time of need." These provisions were for the "Minute men," who had been enlisted under an act of Provincial Congress, 26 Oct., 1774.

On 17 April, 1775, Col. Ebenezer Learned moderator, it was voted "that the Publick Money for 1773 be paid to Henry Gardiner, Esq.," receiver under the Provincial Congress. The town thus fully committed itself to the support of the new Provincial Government.

Lexington Alarm. Two days later at Concord and Lexington active hostilities began and the community was stirred by the preparations of its soldiers hastening to the scene of action. Ebenezer Learned was the leading spirit of the hour, and the minute men rallied under John Town as Captain, and with other companies in the vicinage, under Learned as acting Colonel soon joined the army near Boston.¹ They were, it appears, organized only as minute men until after the action of the Provincial Congress, which, on 23 April, issued a call for 13,500 men for eight months. The Committee of Safety urged their continuing in the service until permanent organization could be effected. "Beating papers," with an offer of Colonelcy, were immediately given to Learned, who distributed them to captains, by whom the men were enlisted. His regiment went into camp 19 May at Roxbury, and field and company officers' commissions were issued on the 23d.²

Army supplies. On 29 June, 1775, Provincial Congress sent to the towns a requisition for supplies for the army, including 13,000 coats which had been promised, one each, to the eight-months men. On 30 Aug. the selectmen sent to the public stores five shirts, five pairs of breeches and nine pairs of stockings, and on 16 Oct. 37 coats with the following notes:—

"As thro' want of flax we could not send our proportion of shirts, &c., but we have a prospect of getting our proportion of coats sometime in October, that was set upon Oxford."

"We have provided thirty-seven coats, containing one hundred and thirty-nine yards, and one-half—making thirty-seven coats, 4s. per coat £7. 8s. Total value £47. 1s. 9½d."³

Independence. In a warning, 6 July, 1776, was an article "to see if the Town will instruct their Representatives about Independence on Great Britain, or act thereon." The meeting was held 8 July at two days' notice, with Edward Davis as moderator. The action of Congress had been anticipated and the town voted "to advise their Representative in the General Court that if the Honorable Congress should for the safety of these Colonies declare them independent of the Kingdom of Great Britain, to Concur therewith, and that the said Inhabitants do solemnly engage with their Lives and fortunes to Support them in the Measure."¹

In the previous March, William Campbell, Samuel Eddy and Amos Shumway had been chosen a Committee of Correspondence and Safety. At this meeting Reuben Lamb and Ezra Bowman were added. On 7 Feb., 1777, the selectmen were ordered to supply for the army shoes, stockings and shirts, one-seventh as many as there were inhabitants 16 years old and upward. We find no recorded action on this order. Feb. 24, 1777, at a town meeting, Col. Ebenezer Learned was moderator, voted to raise money to enlist the quota of soldiers now sent for to recruit the Continental Army; to add to the bounties offered by the American Congress and the "State," £14 to those enlisting for three years or during the war before any draft be made in the town. Voted and granted one thousand pounds "to be proportioned on the Polls and Estates," making allowance for past services in the present war, by actual service or hire; and chose Col. Ebenezer Learned, Reuben Lamb and Hezekiah Bellows a committee to adjudicate said services.

Royalists. June, 1777, the town was called to choose a person to "lay the evidence of the inimical dispositions of any in town to the 'United States of America,'" before the court as required by a recent law, and chose Daniel Griffith for this service. Three weeks later it was "voted to Dismiss those that were in the List suspected to be inimical to the States of America."

In Nov., 1777, Joshua Merriam, John Ballard and Andrew Patch were chosen to take care of soldiers' families, as required by a late law. In December it was voted to reconsider all action relating to raising money for soldiers, which appears to have been in anticipation of conforming to a new law of the Legislature.

Dark days. The summer of 1777 was a time of gloom and apprehension. The British army under Burgoyne was on its way southward from Canada, and the authorities were using every means to put men into the field to meet the emergency. The 28th day of August was observed in Massachusetts as a day of fasting and prayer for the success of the American arms. Hopes were kept up that as every movement of the enemy carried him further from his base he might in the issue be defeated. These hopes were later realized, and the crisis passed with victory on the side of the colonists. The clouds for the time lifted and the 18th of December the people met to give public thanks to Almighty God for His blessings on the cause.

On Jan. 1, 1778, it was voted to pay the town's proportion of the State money agreeably to a late act of Court.

after its receipt at the close of divine service, after which it was to be delivered to the clerk of each town or district, who was required to enter it in the public records, "there to remain as a perpetual Memorial thereof." As such it stands on the Oxford records.

Confederation. At a meeting, 2 Feb., 1778, "to see if the town will Vote to accept the Terms of Confederation and Union as the Congress set forth and published," Duncan Campbell, moderator, it was "Voted to concur with the Confederacy proposed by the American Congress." As fitting action to accompany this declaration it was "voted to pay the sum of £880. 14s. 9d. into the state treasury: then the meeting was desolved."¹ Notwithstanding this praiseworthy action the town was behindhand in its quota of men. A few weeks later a return was made on an order of the General Court, 3 Feb., 1778, as follows: Whole number of male inhabitants in town, 16 years and upwards, 279, of which one-seventh was 40; there were in service 29, showing a deficiency of 11 men.²

On 17 June, 1778, the General Court passed a resolve that towns should furnish shirts, shoes and stockings for the army, of which Oxford's share was 28 each. In September the town voted to pay interest on money the selectmen might borrow to meet this demand, and also chose Joshua Merriam, Jonathan Pratt, Jr., and Ebenezer Coburn to provide for soldiers' families. In November £45 bounty was "voted to soldiers who went to Providence for 6 months last spring," and £200 for soldiers' families, also £213 "to buy clothing deficient last spring, and to pay for that provided by individuals." On 6 Jan., 1779, there were allowed to the town through William Hancock, selectman, by the authorities, 28 shirts, 28 pairs of shoes, 28 pairs of stockings, valued at £133.

As time passed the state of affairs became more critical and at the annual meeting for 1779, seven selectmen, Edward Davis, Esq., chairman, and five for a committee of "Correspondence, Inspection and Safety," Reuben Lamb, chairman, were elected. There was, however, little or no town action during the year on the subject of the war. In October and November authority was given the treasurer to borrow, not to exceed £700, for the use of soldiers' families.

The Town fined. By a vote of the Legislature, 9 June, 1779, any town which should on the last day of July be deficient in its quota of men was required to pay a fine of £350 for each man lacking. Oxford is in the list as deficient six men. There is a document in the State Archives,³ without date, but of 1779 or early in 1780, from which we learn that previous to the time of its being drawn a requisition had been made for recruits of nine months' men, and that Oxford was in arrears and consequently fined £3,000. The selectmen murmured and in their memorial stated the town had raised one man more than had been credited, and furthermore represented that "there is a Gore of land between Oxford and Connecticut that is ordered to do military duty in Oxford, whereby our proportion of Continental men is three or four more than would have been our 'cota,' and as they do not live in Oxford we cannot tax them one farthing towards raising men . . . said Town hath completed every draft excepting this, and it is not for want of good will, but by reason of thirty-seven persons in town that refuse to take up arms by reason of their religious principles," which 37, with those in said Gore, amounted to "about one-third part of the Training Band and Alarm List in Oxford."

A committee to whom this was referred reported that Oxford had three men in the Continental army for which it had not had credit, and therefore recommended that £1,800 of the fine be remitted—which was voted 12 April, 1780. As there is no recorded action of the town on the subject we infer that the men were later furnished and no fine was exacted.¹

Army Supplies. On 14 Oct., 1780, it was voted, in compliance with a resolve of the General Court, 15 Sept., "to raise 5,760 pounds of beef" for the army, which Sylvanus Town, Elisha Davis and Amos Shumway, Jr., were chosen to provide. On 1 Jan., 1781, the question of furnishing men and beef was again before the town, a requisition having been made on 4 Dec., 1780, for 12 men and 11,062 pounds of beef. Edward Davis, Alexander Campbell and Abraham Hill were chosen to petition the "General Assembly for some relief in our Taxes, and More particularly about our Quota of Men and Beef." At a meeting 5 Feb., 1781, it was voted not to "raise the Beef," but to furnish the men. In May the town again refused to furnish the beef, but on 19 July reconsidered the matter and chose Ezra Bowman, Reuben Lamb, John Dana, Sylvanus Town and Amasa Kingsbury a committee to provide it as required. Action was, however, so tardy that "Sundry Gentlemen" were threatened by the "Superintendent of the Commonwealth" with an execution to enforce the requisition. These refusals were much deprecated by the loyal citizens and an association was at once formed to meet, so far as possible, personal responsibility. The following is in the town archives:—

"An account of the names of the several persons in Oxford that when they found they could not obtain a vote in the town to raise the beef ordered by the General Court . . . being sensible of the great need of keeping up an army and supplying them well in the field, we associated together and raised money and paid the same into the hands of the agent to procure beef as by receipts will appear, to the full value of our proportion of said beef when carefully compared with the whole town: Edward Davis, Ebenezer Learned, Amos Shumway, Jeremiah Kingsbury, Joshua Merriam, Ezra Bowman, James Butler, John Ballard, Benjamin Hovey, Elias Pratt, Jonas Eddy, Samuel Harris, Ebenezer Humphrey, William Hancock, John Shumway, John Town,

¹ A plan often adopted in raising recruits for the army was by "classing." The tax payers were grouped by the assessors, the rich and poor in as equitable a manner as possible, in as many divisions as there were men to be raised, and each class was taxed to raise one man. This was found to be a very efficient method. The custom is recognized in the following receipt:

"Leicester, Aug. 30, 1781, this day recvd one man for the town of Oxford to Sarve in the army for three years for the clase whearof Mr. James Meriam is Chearman.

"SETH WASHBURN, Superint."

Josiah Kingsbury, David Newcomb, William Eddy, Ambrose Stone, Nathaniel Hamlin, Isaac Hartwell, Uriah Stone, Joshua Merriam, Jr., James Merriam, Asa Conant, William Everden, Jedediah Barton, Levi Davis, Joshua Turner, Joseph Hurd, John Pratt, Benjamin Shumway, Reuben Eddy, Wid. Content Hovey, Ebenezer Pray, Silas Eddy, John Nichols, Allen Hancock, Thomas Pratt, Josiah Shumway, Amos Shumway, Jr., Abisha Shumway, Peter Shumway, John Carriel, Bartholomew Woodbury, Samuel Rich, Jr., Daniel Harwood, Samuel Waters, Reuben Lamb, Paul Sibley, Jason Collier."

This may be regarded as a roll of honor. The amount which they contributed was sufficient to purchase, according to a memorandum attached to the list, 3,617 pounds of beef, leaving 7,445 pounds yet to be furnished by the town.

Execution served. The threatened execution was served and the balance of the beef consequently provided, as appears by the following document addressed to the assessors of Oxford:—

"Whereas we the subscribers, inhabitants of the town of Oxford some time past were arrested by one Benjamin Hovey a Sheriff's Deputy for the County of Worcester by virtue of an Execution issued by one Phelps, called superintendant for purchasing beef and dictated by one Col. Davis, said to be his agent; have paid to said agent 7573 pounds of beef which with the interest cost thirty three shillings per hundred; we do therefore hereby request the Gentlemen Assessors of the town of Oxford to assess the inhabitants of the town for said money and to be paid in in equal proportion as the law directs.

ABRAHAM HILL,

"Oxford, June 25, 1782."

In the General Court, 4 Feb., 1784, on the certificate of Jacob Davis, agent of Oliver Phelps, that the town of Oxford had filled the requisition of 4 Dec., 1780, for beef for the army, "Resolved that the Execution against the town be stayed, and there be no further process thereon." The records of the General Court, 7 Oct., 1783, show that the town had been fined £214. 2s. 6d. for failing to furnish soldiers as required by resolve of Dec., 1780; but at that date it appearing that the town's quota had been filled it was ordered that the treasurer credit Oxford the amount of the fine in the next State tax. On 22 June, 1781, a third call for beef was made, which was promptly met. A return of clothing and supplies, in 1781, gives as received from Oxford, 19 pairs shoes, 19 pairs hose, 18 shirts, 10 blankets.¹

The close of the war was now approaching. A receipt of Seth Washburn, superintendent, dated at Leicester, 27 Dec., 1781, acknowledges the filling of its quota of men for the public service by the town of Oxford. A call for four men from Oxford was issued in March, 1782, but we find no record of action upon it.

Incidentals. In 1776, Stephen Streeter of Douglas, and two well-to-do Oxford farmers, were by the authorities of these towns, in the performance of their legal duties, ordered to march to reinforce the American army, and refused. On 14 Jan., 1777, the General Court considered a petition from these men stating that the selectmen, etc., of these towns, notwithstanding their claim to be Quakers, had on their refusal, as aforesaid, "thrown them into Worcester Goal," asking relief. The Court replied that as in the act calling for soldiers the duties of selectmen, etc., respecting Quakers had been pointed out, if there had been abuse or wrong it should be tried in a court of justice before a jury. We have no further light on this subject so far as concerns the Oxford men, but Streeter was persistent. [See Streeter.]

On 6 Jan., 1777, in the General Court it was resolved that Alexander Nichols shall have a hearing before the selectmen, company officers and Committee of Correspondence and Safety on his case. No record of hearing found. The State owned a large quantity of salt; by a resolve of the General Court a distribution of a part was made among the towns, Oxford receiving, June, 1777, 66 bushels at 10s. a bushel. Edward Davis of Oxford represented to the General Court that he had occasion for laborers in the "farming way" and requested that he might have one of the Brunswick prisoners "now on board the guard ship in Boston harbor."

"8 Oct., 1777. Ordered that the commissary of prisoners deliver to the petitioner one of said prisoners to be employed in his family as a servant if they should consent thereto, said Davis engaging to support them, allow them reasonable wages and return them when the Council call for them, and pay expenses of bringing them."¹

George King and others stated to the authorities they had purchased salt in Massachusetts to take to Windsor, Conn., which was stopped by the committee of Oxford and taken; prayed for relief.—20 Aug., 1777, ordered the petition be granted and the committee "are directed to deliver the salt to the petitioner."² In the Massachusetts Spy of 16 Oct., 1777, Isaac Pratt gave notice that he was about to start for the army and would carry letters and bring returns at one shilling postage. 14 Feb., 1778, Jeremiah Kingsbury was voted by the State authorities £13. 10s., which sum had been sent to him to be expended for shoes, stockings, etc., for the army, but was lost in the burning of his house.

"Pascal Nelson Smith sheweth that John Grinnell of Fairfield, Conn., on 15 Sept., 1779, two teams loaded with tea which said Grinnell imported from Amsterdam, several barrels of Flour and Rum, some Dry Goods . . . and sundry family utensils all the same being for the use of the family of said Grinnell except the tea, Thaddeus Burr, Esq., and other inhabitants of Fairfield who were bought out by the enemy and are now suffering the want of—that the said teams were stopped at the town of Oxford several days before the Embargo was laid by the Honorable General Court, by the Committee of said town and the effects taken from them, and the owners of the teams obliged to return with them empty—that afterward the Committee of Oxford suffered the tea to go forward but they still detain the Sugar, Rum, Dry Goods and family utensils to the great detriment of the said Grinnell," &c.—He asked relief. 15 Oct., 1779, "Ordered that said John Grinnell be and hereby is permitted to transport from Oxford to Fairfield, Conn., said goods and effects, any Embargo to the contrary notwithstanding."¹

In 1783 Capt. John Town obtained judgment in court against the town for £136, "paid for procuring soldiers" in 1777.

Supplies in the line of shoes, stockings, shirts, etc., could not be had on contract as at the present day. Requisitions were therefore made for them on the towns as for men. Some orders sent to Oxford were, 20 Jan., 1777, 14 blankets; 17 June, 1778, shoes, stockings and shirts, 28 each; June, 1779, do., 28 each; May, 1780, do., 20 each and 10 blankets; June, 1781, do., 19 each.

Demands of the war. Revolutionary papers of Isaac Hartwell remain, and are interesting documents, suggesting what the great struggle meant financially to one who did not enter the ranks. The following payments are indicated, there may have been others: On 24 July, 1776, £7 "for hiring samuel White for the service." White served three years in Capt. Moore's Co. On 23 Sept., 1777, £15 fine, he having been drafted for eight months; 21 July, 1779, £30 "for a man to sarve in Road island" until 1 Jan. following; 13 Jan., 1781, £320 [currency] towards hiring three months men the previous June; 18 Jan., 1781, he received an order for "foore Boushels of Rye," to be his discharge towards raising three months men July previous; 2 March, 1781, £224. 14s. "towards raising the 6 mos. men last June"; 7 April, 1781, £20. 3s. "hard money," towards paying Samuel White for three years, "agreeable to act of the Assembly"; 18 July, 1781, "Six silver dollars for the hire of three-months men to West Point, N. Y."

Revolutionary soldiers. The largest call of Massachusetts for men (after April, 1775, when 13,500 were required) was on 25 June, 1776, when 5,000 were called for, Oxford's quota 23; some later calls were, 8 June, 1779, for 2,000, Oxford 6; 5 June, 1780, for 3,934, Oxford 13; 4 Dec., 1780, Oxford 12; 30 June, 1781, for 3,000, Oxford 9; March, 1782, for 1,500, Oxford 4.

The list of Oxford men must be for the present imperfect. From the incomplete rolls in the office of Secretary of State and other sources the following have been gathered. Capt. Town's Co., Col. Learned's Reg., marched 20 April, 1775, on the "Lexington Alarm":

Manning, Elias Pratt [later Capt., served through the war], Ebenezer Shumway, Anthony Sigourney, Timothy Sparhawk, David D. Town, Jonas Pratt, Jr., Haines Learned [disch. 17 Sept., 1775], Abraham Merrifield, Amasa Allen; total, 7 officers, 21 privates.

In May there was a reorganization of troops. William Campbell, previously in Capt. Craft's cavalry Co., Sturbridge, was made captain of the Oxford company, and the following additional names appear that year on its rolls :—

Sylvanus Town, Serg., from Craft's company; Abner Shumway, drummer; Moses Coburn, Jonathan Marsh [S. Gore], Thomas Bogle [took the place of Asa Larned, disch.], Frost Rockwood, Thomas McKnight, Jason Coller, James H. Parker, John Conant, John Fessenden, Josiah Eddy, Moses Knowland [S. Gore], Paul Thurston, from Craft's company, Will [a negro, servt. of Campbell ? disch. 5 Oct., 1775].

In Col. Learned's Reg., April, 1775, were also in Craft's Co., cavalry, Sturbridge, William Campbell, Lieut.; Levi Davis, Joseph Hurd, Sylvanus Town, Paul Thurston, John Walker, William Moore.

In Capt. Curtis' Co., 1775, Robert Manning, corp. [transferred from Town's Co.], Stephen Griffith, corp., d. 31 July, 1775, Daniel Griffith, Isaac Pratt, Joseph Streeter, Moses Town, Elias Town, John Mellen, Samuel Learned, Phinehas Allen, Benjamin Edwards.

In Capt. Healy's Co., 1775, William Moore, serg., transferred from Craft's Co., Curtis Dixon, Aaron Wakefield, Amos Wakefield.

In Capt. Green's Co., Oct., 1775, Asa Meriam, Samuel Stone. At Dorchester, 1775, for 3 months, in Dike's Reg., Richardson's Co., Ebenezer Fish, Samuel Kingsbury.

In Whitney's Reg., Carriel's Co., 4 mos. at least, 1776, at Hull, Sampson Marvin, corp., William Jordan, Jedediah Blaney, Richard Moore, Moses Town, Elisha Town, Amos Parsons, Moses Knowland.

In Guild's Co., Whiting's Reg., 1776, Nathaniel Wyman.

In Craft's Reg., Art. Todd's Co., 1776, Elisha Livermore, bombardier, three months. This was not the limit of his service.

In Tyler's Reg., Ferrer's Co., Dec., 1776, Daniel Fisk.

Capt. Jeremiah Kingsbury's Co., Col. Jonathan Holman's Regt., Providence, 20 Jan., 1777, roll :—

Jeremiah Kingsbury, Capt.; Silas Town, Lieut.; Jonas Pratt, Levi Davis, Jonas Eddy, Allen Hancock, Sergts.; William Hudson, John Pratt, Amos Shumway, Ebenezer Shumway, Corp's; Zaccheus Ballard, John Rawson, Joseph Kingsbury, John Allen, John Larned, Josiah Shumway, Curtis Dixon, Sampson Marvin, John White, Amos Wakefield, Thomas Wolcott, Jesse

Gleason, Nathan Pratt, Reuben Eddy, Jonathan Coolidge, Elisha Town, Sylvanus Learned, Jesse Pratt, Jesse Merriam, Samuel Stone, Joseph Sparhawk, Aaron Parker, Jonathan Merriam, Jonas Davis, Benjamin Hovey, William Lamb. Time in camp 48 days.

A detachment of this company was again in service beginning 27 Sept., 1777, "when the Militia marched to Reinforce General Gates' Army at the Northward Agreeable to an order of the General Court." They were out 30 days and marched 158 miles. Roll:—

Jeremiah Kingsbury, Capt.; John Ballard, Lieut.; Ebenezer Coburn, Haines Learned, Serpts.; Jonas Eddy, Allen Hancock, Corps.; John Larned, Aaron Parker, Jesse Pratt, Joseph Rockwood, Jesse Merriam, William Nichols, Nathan Pratt, John Rawson, Ambrose Stone, Jonas Davis, David Stone, Abraham Fitts, Amos Shumway, Anthony Sigourney.

Jesse Stone of Oxford was captain of a company which marched on the "Bennington Alarm," and was out from 19 July to 29 Aug., 1777. There were no Oxford men in the ranks.

A reinforcement for Gates' army, in service from 1 Aug. to 29 Nov., 1777, was commanded by Abijah Lamb under Col. Cushing, believed to have been in the Saratoga battles. The roll is as follows:—

Abijah Lamb, Capt.; Ebenezer Humphrey, Sylvanus Town, Lieuts.; Elijah Larned, Arthur Humphrey, Serpts.; Dana Town, Timothy Sparhawk, Corps.; Thomas Baker, Jonathan Coolidge, Jason Collier, Ebenezer Davis, John Fitts, Joseph Hurd, Isaac Larned [a family record says Isaac Larned was bombardier in Capt. Todd's Art. Company], Jonathan Merriam, Samuel Stone [commissary], Elias Town, Isaac Larned, Jr., privates.

In Sparhawk's Reg., Chase's Co., at Dorchester, 1778, Jesse Hill, David Smith, Isaac Anabell.

Drafted in 1778, Jonathan Fuller, John M. Jewell, Eleazer Stowell.

In Tyler's Reg., Fish's Co., Tiverton, R. I., Dec., 1779, 6 mos., Thomas Fish, Capt.; Ebenezer Coburn, Lieut.; Abisha Shumway, Jacob Works, Samuel Atwood.

In a list of "new levies," 1780, 6 months' men, are Thomas Wolcott, Moses Baker, Elisha Town, David Town, Jacob Nichols, James Atwood, Samuel White, Noah Dodge, Samuel Killey. On the rolls for the same year appear also Samuel Wiley, Jacob Winslow, Joseph Atwood, Benjamin Turner.

A pay roll, Capt. Ebenezer Humphrey, Col. Jacob Davis; company marched 30 July, 1780, to Rhode Island "on the alarm":—

Ebenezer Humphrey, Capt.; Levi Davis, Lieut.; Joshua Turner, Sec. Lieut.; Joseph Hurd, Ebenezer Humphrey, Jr., John Campbell, Amos Shumway, Serpts.; Benjamin Shumway, Jonathan Coburn, David Stone, Samuel Stone, Corps.; Lemuel Cudworth, fifer; Philip Amidown, Ezekiel Collier, Thomas Campbell, Solomon Covell, Jonas Davis, Simon Gleason, Nathaniel Hamlin, Jonathan Harris, Gideon Hovey, Jeremiah Kingsbury, Reuben Lamb, John Nichols, Jonas Pratt, Thomas Parker, Nathan Pratt, Ebenezer Redding, Moses Rowell, Timothy Sparhawk, Josiah Shumway, Sylvanus Town, Archibald Todd, Ambrose Stone, privates. Isaac Larned was in this expedition in another company. Time of service about 13 days.

In Drury's Reg., Reuben Davis' Co., 1781, were William Tucker, Corp.; John M. Jewell, James Atwood, Ebenezer Stone, Phinehas Jones, Jonas Cummings.

In Thomas' Reg., Elliott's Co., R. I., 1781, Lemuel Cudworth, served 4 m. 12 d.

The following list, without date, but near the close of the war, gives names of men in the Continental army from Oxford with time of service:—¹

George Robinson, son-in-law of Gen. Learned, was in his brigade and killed, it is said, at Saratoga.⁴ Reuben, brother of George Robinson, was also in the service and died of fever in 1776.

The following names, gathered from pension rolls and other sources, by Rev. H. Bardwell, D.D., are given in Ammidown's Historical Collections:—

Benjamin Vassal [said to have served through the war], David Lamb, Ebenezer Pray, adjutant [served 3 years—tradition], William Simpson, George Alverson, Caleb, son of John Barton, Abijah Kingsbury, James Meriam, Elisha Blanding [3 years], Francis Blanding, Jonas Blanding, Arthur Daggett [Sutton], Elisha Ward, ——— Sewall, Richard Coburn, Jacob Larned, Silas Eddy, Solomon Cook, Elijah Kingsbury.

Pierce's Co., Col. Bigelow's Regt., 26 Feb., 1780.

⁴ When he was about to die he said to Adjutant Pray, who was attending him, "Ebenezer, take good care of Deborah," referring to his wife. Pray heeded the charge, and married her soon after returning home.

Joseph Kingsbury was drafted in 1777, and Samuel, his son, went in his stead and was in the Saratoga battles.

Josiah, son of Jeremiah Kingsbury, joined the army at 16 years of age in 1775 and served till the close of the war; was acting quartermaster under Arnold at West Point, and ensign when discharged.

Others were as follows: James Hovey Davis, Samuel Jennison, Lieut. and Quartermaster Nixon's Brig. at Saratoga battles; David, son of John Barton, sick at Richmond after Cornwallis' surrender; William, son of Benjamin Eddy, Parley, son of William Eddy, six months; Jacob Fellows, Abijah, son of Abijah Gale, Brewer's Reg., d. in service; Jesse Gale, his bro., k. 24 March, 1780; Hezekiah Larned, marched from Upton on Lexington alarm; Abijah Conant, son-in-law of Capt. John Nichols, went as servant to Nichols, d. in service; John Twichell, grandson of Benoni; Gideon Sibley, from Sutton on Lexington alarm; Abijah and Elihu, sons of David Thurston, in the same company and both k. in the same battle, Aug. (?), 1777; Jedediah Adams, seven mos., in Wiley's Co., killed; Phinehas Barton, Capt. John Nichols, joined the army 1777; Andrew Sigourney, in battle at White Plains and others, commissary with rank of Capt.; Anthony Sigourney in same Reg., Nathan Atwood, Elijah Shumway, John Bowers, Benjamin Rider, Adams Sully, William Stowell, Joseph Phillips.

On 29 Sept., 1777, Ezra Bowman was appointed by the Legislature Adjutant of the Fifth Regiment and entered the service, continuing until April, 1781, at least.

General Learned. On 21 Sept., 1774, at a convention at Worcester to consider public affairs, a resolution was passed recommending the reorganization of the militia of the county. Accordingly a meeting of the "commission officers" of the 2nd Regiment was held 5 Oct., 1774, at Oxford, at which the following were chosen:—

EBENEZER LEARNED of Oxford, Colonel.¹

TIMOTHY SIBLEY of Sutton, Lieut.-Colonel.

WILLIAM LARNED of Dudley, Second Major.

Learned had previously been elected delegate to the provincial Congress at Concord, and on 12 Jan., 1775, he was again chosen to the same body at Cambridge. During the autumn and winter of 1774–5 with his fellow-officers he was active in military preparations, and when in April the first alarm of war sounded, was ready for action. On the 21st of April, 1775, two days after the first engagement, we find him at Cambridge at the head of his command prepared for service. He was ordered to Roxbury, under Gen. Thomas, where he remained as reserve and doing guard duty during the siege of Boston. Samuel Bixby of Sutton, one of his men, kept a diary during the eight months spent here, and thus describes the battle of

Bunker Hill:—

June 17, Saturday.—Col. Putnam with a large party went on to a hill in Charlestown, called Bunker's Hill, last night to entrench, and this morning the British discovered him and commenced firing at the men on the hill. A heavy fire was opened at Col. Putnam from the ships and also from the fortifications in Boston. The Regulars went over in barges in great numbers and landed in Charlestown to attack Col. Putnam. Our men returned the fire smartly, and the battle appeared to rage fiercely. The entrenchments were not quite completed, and our men having spent their ammunition still defended themselves bravely, but were obliged to retreat. The regulars set houses on fire and did all manner of mischief, but Col. Putnam retreated to another hill and went to entrenching there, while the British kept up a constant fire upon him.

About noon we fired an alarm, and rung the bells in Roxbury and every man was ordered to arms as an attack was expected, Col. Learned marched his regiment up to the meeting house and then to the burying yard, which was the alarm post, where we laid in ambush with two field pieces placed to give it to them unawares should the regulars come. About 6 o.c. the enemy drew in their sentries and immediately a heavy fire was opened from the fortification. The balls whistled over our heads and through the houses . . . The enemy threw bombshells hourly into Roxbury during the night. Col. Learned ordered his regiment to encamp in the safest place and we encamped behind a hill.

June 29, Thursday. Haynes Learned [son of the Col.] crept down to near the regular's guard last night, and fired at one of the sentries, and dropt him.

Evacuation of Boston.

A crisis in the siege was reached on the 16th of March, 1776, when Gen. Washington sent a strong detachment of men to fortify Nook's Hill. This decided Howe at once to evacuate, and on Sunday the 17th he began the embarkation of his army. Preparations were at once made in the American camp to enter the town. Putnam marched to Bunker Hill, and Ward with five hundred troops from Roxbury, under the immediate command of Col. Learned, who unbarred and opened the gates, entered the town in that direction.²

After the evacuation Learned, with his command, remained about two weeks on the highlands south of the town where he could observe the movements of the British fleet. On 20 March, Gen. Greene issued the following order: "Col. Learned is directed to man six whale boats every night while the enemy remain in the harbor, whose duty it is to row about and make discoveries of any movement of the enemy, that the garrison may be apprised thereof." On April 2

Learned and his regiment were relieved from duty at Dorchester Point, and were soon after ordered with the main body of the army to the defence of New York. The next record found of him in military life is of date 2 May, 1776, when he writes from that place to Gen. Washington as follows:—

Learned to Gen. Washington.

“Sir, with regret I must humbly represent my case, Being so indisposed in body that I am absolutely rendered unfit to serve the much injured and distressed publick with the alacrity and usefulness I could wish, or the importance of the cause requires; yet my hearty and greatest wish is that your Excellency may receive renown, and the United Colonies’ arms still be distinguished with success and victory, and in God’s own time every worthy member in the struggle return to and enjoy his own habitation in peace. But at present must request to absent myself from the Army in the manner your Excellency shall prescribe; and if it should be thought most expedient I should be dismissed the Continental service, if my past conduct is equal, should pray I may be dismissed with honor and supported home. In obtaining this I shall have fresh instances of your Excellency’s favor; and lay me under new obligations ever to remain your very humble servant

Addressed

To the Hon. His Excellency

GEO. WASHINGTON, Esq.

The action of Gen. Washington upon this we do not find, but it is certain that Gen. Learned retired from the service May, 1776, on account of ill health.

Early in 1777 a call was made upon Massachusetts for 15 battalions to recruit the army. In the House of Representatives, 6 Feb., 1777, choice was made of officers for these troops as follows:—

Ebenezer Learned, Esq., Colonel; Timothy Bigelow, Lieut.-Col.; David Bradish, Major. Learned declined the honor on the ground that his commission did not bear equal date with others in similar service. In closing his reply he says:—

“Also in justice to Colonel Bigelow I am bound to say when considering his past services, his knowledge in discipline, so very necessary at this time, as also the great confidence that will be put in him in the County of Worcester, it would in my opinion much facilitate the raising of the Regiment if your Honors would see fit to appoint him to the chief command.”

A commission for Learned was filled and signed by John Hancock, “President,” and forwarded to him, which he returned, saying he could not accept it unless his commission could bear date equal to other officers.

Appointed General. What means were used later to secure his promotion is not apparent. Evidently he was held in high regard by men of influence, as on 2 April, 1777, Congress voted his appointment as Brigadier-General. Here he did not hesitate, but accepting the honor he soon joined the northern army under Gen. Schuyler, and in the campaigns of that eventful year distinguished himself as a soldier, and placed his name unquestionably among those of the bravest and most efficient officers in the American army. His first service under his new commission was at Fort Edward, whence he proceeded to Fort Ticonderoga, where he secured and removed valuable stores before that fort was taken by Burgoyne in his progress southward. On 8 July, 1777, he was in command at Fort Edward, at which date he addressed the following :—

Learned to Schuyler.

“HON^d AND DEAR S^r :

“I have the agreeable Tidings that our Men at Fort Ann are full of Resolution to Defend the Place and I am Supplying every Request from there yesterday after Noon the Enemy appeared in sight our People out and attacked them and Drove them 3 miles—Saw them carrying off Dead & wounded—the Enemy consisted of Hessians, Canadians, & Indians we had 1 man Killed 3 Wounded—

“from Fort George we are informed that the Enemy have made appearance 7 miles from there on an island—3 bateaux and 1 canoe—and Since we are drove to the great Necessity to Defend ourselves in this bare Handed and confused Situation we are Struggling to do it in the best manner we can. Have but very little Artillery and that unmounted—but very little lead Balls—but very few Tools for fortifying—no Tents more but few Kettles &c &c—but in the midst of these Difficulties we find the great Importance of Defending this last security of our Country which God Grant we may never give up though at Present are very Defenceless—I would ask your Particular Orders and advice in this Critical Time—I have made all Dispatch to remove the most valuable stores from Fort George not with any Design to leave it—but find the Necessity to save what few Medicines &c we have left.

Notes from Col. Thomas Nixon's Orderly Book are of interest in this connection :—

“July 12, at Fort Edward. This day Gen. Schuyler ordered Gen. Nixon to immediately march his brigade to Fort Ann. . . .

“July 19. The Advance Brigades to keep scouts continually out: Gen. Learned to send his up the Hudson river and Lake George, Gen. Nixon to send his to South Bay, Skenesborough and Fort Ann.”²

These troops seem to have been watching and, so far as possible, impeding the advance of the British army. That body, however, continued its southward progress until it reached Saratoga and Stillwater, where the decisive battles a few weeks later were fought.

Achievements of 1777. In order to a satisfactory understanding of Gen. Learned's services it is necessary to review some of the leading events of the year, which can best be done by quotations from authorities who have made thorough studies of the subject. Gen. Burgoyne had early in the spring been put in command of the British army, the plan of the season's campaign having been to move from Canada southward by Lake Champlain and Ticonderoga to Albany, there to join Gen. Howe, who was to ascend the Hudson from New York, and thus by a line of military posts northward from that point cut off New England from the rest of the country. In the furtherance of this design Burgoyne on the 6th of July got possession of the stronghold at Ticonderoga, the Americans retreating to Fort Edward, and later to Stillwater on the Hudson.

Fort Stanwix. Meantime a detachment of the British under St. Leger was sent up the St. Lawrence through Lake Ontario and the lesser waters towards Fort Stanwix, an important post in the Mohawk valley, about 45 miles northwest of Albany, with the intention of capturing it and afterward joining the main army in the valley of the Hudson. St. Leger reached the fort on the third of August. Peter Gansvoort, a fearless soldier, was in command, but the garrison was small and a protracted resistance impossible. Gansvoort sent for reinforcements to Schuyler, who, knowing his needs, had already ordered Gen. Learned with a part of his brigade forward to Fort Dayton.¹ Calling a council of his under officers Gen. Schuyler found them all opposed to weakening the main army by sending troops to aid Gansvoort, but he, feeling it a necessity, decided to assume himself the responsibility and called for a volunteer to lead the expedition. Not a brigadier responded. But Maj.-Gen. Arnold being indignant at this treatment of Schuyler's proposition offered to lead the movement, and very soon eight hundred men volunteered under him, many of whom were of Learned's brigade.² This body marched immediately, and on 20 Aug. joined Learned at Fort Dayton. On the 21st Arnold called a council of war, which decided it would be injudicious and hazardous to move until further reinforcements had arrived.³ Arnold, however, learning that Gansvoort was hard pressed, overruled the council and proceeded at the head of 1,200 men toward Fort Stanwix. But no besieging army was there. St. Leger having heard reports of large coming reinforcements became alarmed and was making all haste toward Lake Ontario, leaving cannon, stores and camp equipage to fall into the hands of the Americans; Stanwix was saved, and Arnold and Learned marched back in triumph to the Hudson.

Saratoga battles. During their absence the battle of Bennington had been fought and Schuyler had been superseded by Gen. Gates. Burgoyne was preparing for an advance on Albany and to oppose his progress Arnold and Kosciuszko had selected a position to fortify called Bemis' Heights, a rise of ground peculiarly appropriate for the purpose, lying between the river (near which was the highest portion) and Saratoga Lake about six miles from it. On this ground, on the 19th of September, occurred the first of two hard fought battles, and from the best evidence we have, Arnold was a leading spirit in the day's contest, and Learned, who commanded the centre brigade, acted a very important part under him. Neilson in describing this battle says, "towards the close of the day Gen. Learned's brigade and another regiment, I think Marshall's, were principally engaged on a rise of ground, west of the cottage (Freeman's) with the British grenadiers and a regiment of British Infantry, and bravely contested the ground till night."¹ Lossing says, "But for Arnold on that eventful day Burgoyne would have doubtless marched into Albany at the Autumnal Equinox a victor."²

On 26 Sept. Gen. Gates issued the following:—

"The Public business having so entirely engaged the General's attention that he has not been properly at leisure to return his grateful thanks to Gen. Poor's and Gen. Learned's brigades, to the regiment of Riflemen, Corps of Light Infantry, and Col. Marshall's regiment for their valiant behavior in the action of the 19th inst., which will forever establish and confirm the reputation of the Arms of the United States."

The bravery and success of Arnold at once aroused the jealousy of Gates and a quarrel ensued, resulting in a request from Arnold to go to Washington, which Gates willingly granted, but his fellow-officers besought him to remain until the decisive blow should have been struck, to which he consented, although his command had been transferred to another.

Second engagement. On the 7th of October the contest was renewed and the great battle of the campaign fought.

"At half past two in the afternoon the battle began. The troops of Poor [of N. Hampshire] and of Learned marched up the slope to attack the Grenadiers and the Artillery under Ackland and Williams with orders not to open fire until after the first discharge of the enemy.³ Silently and steadily they marched forward, and were received by a discharge of musket balls and grape shot which passed over their heads into the branches of the trees. Instantly with a shout they rushed forward and delivered their fire. Then followed a fierce assault and conflict. The Americans charged up to the very mouths and among the cannon and were met with a stubborn resistance . . . Finally after a terrible struggle, and when Major Ackland was severely wounded and Williams taken prisoner, the Grenadiers and Artillery fled, and the Americans held the field."⁴

During the early part of this contest Arnold was chafing in his tent—

"Suddenly springing forward, he said to his aids, 'No man shall keep me in my tent to-day, if I am without command I will fight in the ranks. . . . Come on! Victory or death!' and leaping into his saddle he plunged into the thickest of the fight, and the soldiers welcomed their old and beloved commander with shouts and cheers which rose above the din and roar of the conflict."¹

We now quote from Gen. Carrington :²

"At this stage of the battle Arnold no longer under self-control burst from the camp and like a meteor rode to the front of Learned's brigade, which had been so recently under his command, and dashed into the fight. He was cheered as he rode past and like a whirlwind the regiments went with him upon the broken British lines. Fraser fell mortally wounded in this assault, and swiftly behind the half crazy volunteer came Ten Broeck with a force nearly double that of the whole British line. That line was now in full retreat.³ Phillips and Reidesel, as well as Burgoyne in person, exhibited marvellous courage in an hour so perilous . . . but nothing could stop Arnold. Wheresoever he found troops he assumed command and by the magnetism of his will and passion he became supreme in daring endeavor. With a part of the brigades of Patterson and Glover, he assaulted the intrenchments of Earl Balcarras, but was repulsed. To the right of Balcarras the Canadians and Royalists were posted under cover of two stockade redoubts. Here again Arnold met Learned's brigade, took the lead and with a single charge cleared these works, leaving the left of Breyman's position entirely exposed."

Thatcher in his military journal, in speaking of this movement, says :—

"At length the Americans press forward with renewed strength and ardor, and compel the whole British line, commanded by Burgoyne himself, to yield to their deadly fire, and they retreat in disorder. The German troops remain firmly posted at their lines; these were boldly assaulted by Brig.-Gen. Learned and Lient.-Col. Brooks, at the head of their respective commands, with such intrepidity that their works were carried and brave Col. Breyman, their commander, was slain."

Learned's efficiency. Gen. Wilkinson, who was Gates' Adjutant, and on the field, says :—

"About sunset I perceived Gen. Learned advancing toward the enemy with his brigade, in open column . . . when I rode up to him. On saluting this brave old soldier he inquired 'Where can I put in with most advantage?' I had particularly examined the ground between the left of the Germans and the light infantry, occupied by provincialists, from whence I had observed a slack fire: I therefore recommended to Gen. Learned to incline to his right and attack at that point: he did so with great gallantry; the provincialists abandoned their position and fled; the German flank was by this means uncovered, they were assaulted vigorously, overturned in five minutes and retreated in disorder leaving their commander . . . Breyman, dead on the field."⁴

"The night was now closing in. The victory of the Americans was decisive."⁵

Disaster averted. A subsequent movement in which Learned was prominent was that of the 11th of October, when, on a foggy morning, Gen. Gates, with the belief that the enemy was in retreat toward Fort Edward, sent out a body of troops to occupy the camp and follow in pursuit. The rising mists, however, revealed just at hand the whole British army in battle array. A retreat was ordered and a disaster averted. Wilkinson says of this movement:—

“I hastened to head-quarters [when the facts were known], reported to the General and received instructions to order Patterson's and Learned's brigades to support Morgan. Having performed that duty and conducted General Learned [Patterson being general officer of the day, both Maj.-Generals being wounded] across the creek, I returned.”

After describing other movements he adds:—

“We had not heard from the corps of Gen. Learned and it occurred to me that, deceived by the firing on the right he might be led into a disadvantageous attack, I instantly clapped spurs to my horse, crossed the creek and reached the front of the two brigades at about 200 yards from Burgoyne's strongest post on the crown of a hill. The troops were advancing and had just entered clear ground in front of the intrenchments, which were abbatized. If I had been three minutes later our left wing would have been engaged and the consequences might have been calamitous. I found Gen. Learned near the centre, and begged of him to halt, which was immediately done by passing the word to the right and left. Then I observed to him that he must retreat. ‘Have you orders?’ said he. I said ‘No; as the exigencies of the case will not allow me to see General Gates.’ He replied, ‘Our brethren are engaged on the right, and the standing order is to attack.’ I informed him ‘Our troops on the right have retreated and the firing you hear is from the enemy.’”

Lossing says:—

“The brave veteran disliked the idea of retreating, preferring to carry out the standing order to the very letter, but on counselling with Cols. Brooks and Tupper and some other officers a retreat was deemed advisable.”

The two brigades fell back half a mile to a field, which they fortified and held until the surrender on the 17th.

Seth Bannister, Brigade-Major under Learned, in a letter to his wife describing the engagement of the 7th of Oct., says:—

“Brig.-Gen. Learned was left in possession and commander of a large encampment of the enemy's with a number of his brigade and other troops, till Generals Lincoln, Glover and Nixon relieved him, about twelve o'clock at night.”¹

After disposition was made of the prisoners Learned and his brigade made a forced march to Albany to oppose the approach of the British from the south. Later his and other brigades were ordered southward. On 2 Nov., 1777, Alexander Hamilton, Washington's aid, wrote to him thus from Fishkill: “Gen. Learned's brigade, Morgan's corps, etc., on their march on the west side of the river.” Eight days afterward he wrote from New Windsor that Poor's and Learned's brigades still remained there and at Fishkill, and were in a state of mutiny for want of their pay. Gov. Clinton, however, prevailed on Learned's brigade, then under command of Col. Bayley, to march to Goshen in hopes they would continue on, and he expected thus to get them to headquarters by means of five or six thousand dollars, which he borrowed to meet the emergency. On 12 Nov. he wrote he hoped both Learned's and Parson's brigades would join Washington in five or six days.

With the Saratoga battles the public services of Gen. Learned ended. His increasing physical disabilities obliged him to retire, and obtaining a furlough he soon returned home.

Washington to Heath. The next mention we find of him is in a letter of Gen. Washington to Gen. Heath at Boston, bearing date 9 Jan., 1778, at Valley Forge, which contains the following: "I beg you will carefully forward the enclosed letters to Brigadiers Glover and Learned. They contain orders for them to join their respective brigades, with which they are much wanted."¹ Gen. Heath replied saying these letters had been forwarded as requested. Upon the receipt of Washington's order Learned proceeded to Boston and laid open his case to Gen. Heath, who on 7 Feb., 1778, wrote as follows to Gen. Washington:—

Heath's reply.

"Brig.-Gen. Learned called upon me a day or two since and requested that I would transmit your Excellency the enclosed certificates and represent his present state of health. In the campaign of 1775 by a violent fall he received a breach, which has been increased to a rupture, which greatly incapacitates him for business, especially in the Winter. He cannot ride without much inconvenience, and if he happens to wet his feet is attacked with the most excruciating pain. He has proposed to resign his commission, but the Hon. Mr. Hancock and myself have persuaded him to delay it for the present, as in a summer campaign he may render his country essential service. He is anxious to know your Excellency's pleasure."²

On 27 Feb., 1778, Gen. Washington replied as follows:—

"Considering Gen. Learned's ill state of health, I think his resignation had better be accepted of, more especially as from the nature of his complaint it does not appear that he can ever be able to bear the fatigues of a campaign, I would therefore advise him to make his resignation, with the reasons for so doing, to Congress, who are the proper body to receive it."³

The purport of this letter was communicated to Congress and to Learned, who on 12 March, 1778, wrote and forwarded to that body his final resignation, as follows:—

"BOSTON, March 12, 1778.

"MOST HON^d SR. I have served in this warfare since the beginning as a Col. of a Regt. till May, 1776, when by indisposition by reason of certain fatigues in the army I found myself unequal and resigned the service.

"Since I recovered a little the Honorable the Continental Congress on the second day of April, 1777, appointed me to the command of a Brig.-Genl. I immediately took the field, proceeded to Fort Edward, and at the evacuation of Ticonderoga had great fatigue in securing the remains of our stores that way. Directly on that marched my brigade to the relief of Fort Stanwix.

"Immediately on return we had the satisfaction of reducing Burgoyne's army with much fatigue and was personally and brigade in the severe but victorious actions of Sept. 19 and Oct. 7, and after that army was imprisoned we took a forced march to Albany to stop the progress of the enemy that way.

"All which brought on my former difficulties and by the advice of Doct. Potts I took a furlough of Gen. Gates to retire from the army till I was well; the receipt of which with my surgeon's certificate I have enclosed.

"And I find I am quite unequal to act vigorously in my country's cause in the field and to eat the Publick's bread and not do the service I am not disposed. And I think I am better able to serve in a private or civil than in a military character.

"All which considered I think it my duty to myself and my family, and country to pray your Honor the Congress to discharge me from the service.

State Government. In the midst of the excitement of the war it became necessary to establish a new government to take the place of that which had been repudiated. The General Court moved in this matter, and on 30 Sept., 1776, the question whether the House of Representatives with the Council should form a system of government for the State came before the town. Alexander Campbell, Edward Davis, Ebenezer Learned, Ezra Bowman and William Phips were chosen to consider the subject, and reported that as the representation was unequal in the House it was unadvisable that they should proceed to form a government. This report was, on 7 Oct., unanimously adopted. Before May, 1778, the General Court had formed a "Constitution and Form of Government," which at that time was laid before the town for consideration. Upon it was a unanimous vote of disapproval. In May, 1779, the question was put whether there should be a new constitution or form of government at this time, and it was voted unanimously in the negative. By order of the General Court, in Aug., 1779, two delegates, Ebenezer Learned and Ezra Bowman, were chosen to meet in convention on Sept. 1 at Cambridge for the purpose of forming a State constitution with instructions to return to the town a copy of their proceedings for its consideration. The convention met and agreed upon a form of a State constitution, which was presented to the town for action in June, 1780, when it was voted to accept the same excepting the 1st, 2d, 3d and 29th in the Bill of Rights.

The Constitution received the requisite number of votes in the State and was adopted. It did not, however, relieve the financial distress which prevailed, but rather, by introducing legal machinery to enforce the payment of debts, aggravated the evil. No permanent relief was experienced until after the adoption of the Federal Constitution in 1788, when the permanence of the union became assured, confidence gradually returned, and the people eschewing conventions and exciting discussions cheerfully accepted the situation and set themselves diligently, by industry and frugality, to the work of repairing their lost fortunes. The clouds soon disappeared and from that day onward general prosperity prevailed.

Shays' Rebellion. The few years following the Revolution were years of business depression and discouragement. Many town meetings and popular conventions were held for the discussion of the situation, with a view to preventing the depreciation of the currency and the regulation of prices of commodities which, through speculation and monopolies, were becoming exorbitant. Numerous committees were chosen to carry into effect, in the town, the action of these conventions, but the result was only temporary, and depreciation continued until the currency became worthless, and the collecting of dues almost an impossibility.

Lawsuits. Suing for debt became almost a mania; the cases on the Worcester docket, in 1784 and 1785, were numbered by thousands, and much property was sacrificed on forced sales. General bankruptcy threatened the community, and great distress prevailed. The people of Newton, in their instructions to their representatives, say:—

"We find by experience that we cannot obtain justice . . . without being obliged to purchase it. . . . Great numbers of actions are brought at every court which, together with the pernicious practices of some of our lawyers, occasion delays, appeals, protracted judgments, loss of time, travel, attendance, intolerable expenses, . . . so that, unless the sum in dispute be considerable, it is better to lose it than to seek recovery by law."

Out of this state of affairs, in the autumn of 1786, grew in central and western Massachusetts the demonstration known as "Shays' Rebellion," the declared object of which was not the overturning or resisting of the government, excepting in the matter of preventing the sitting of the courts in which these vexatious and expensive suits were in progress, until desired legislation could be procured.

Shays, in a letter dated 30 Jan., 1787, to Gen. Lincoln, then in command of troops at Hadley, says:—

" . . . The people are willing to lay down their arms on the condition of a general pardon, and return to their respective homes, as they are unwilling to stain the land which we, in the late war, purchased at so dear a rate, with the blood of our brethren and neighbors. Therefore we pray that hostilities may cease on your part, until our united prayers may be presented to the General Court, and we receive an answer, as a person is gone for that purpose. If this request may be complied with, government shall meet with no interruption from the people." . . .

Oxford was deeply stirred, and many of its citizens were active, both as "Regulators" and government soldiers. The people of the north part of the town especially, were, with very few exceptions, committed to the movement, and as a company was organized near the town, in the south part of Ward, under Jonah Goulding, it is probable that most of the Oxford men joined that organization. According to tradition, Timothy Sparhawk's house was the Oxford rendezvous, and he, who had been a valiant soldier in the Revolution, and his neighbor, Reuben Lamb, who had been chairman of the town Committee of Correspondence and Inspection, were earnest supporters of the cause.¹

On 2 Feb., 1787, a company of the insurgents being gathered at New Braintree, Gen. Warren sent soldiers from Worcester to disperse or take them. When nearing their destination they were fired upon, from behind a stone wall, by men who had secreted themselves there, and were under the command of "one Lamb."²

Oxford, it has been said on high authority, was a "Shays town." That a majority of its people sympathized with the general sentiment in desiring relief from the existing embarrassments, is without doubt true, and a tolerably sure indication of the readiness on the part of the people to acquiesce in a change in the State administration, is given in the vote for Governor at the spring election, 1787, at which 64 ballots were cast for John Hancock and two for James Bowdoin. Furthermore, Capt. Jeremiah Learned, a decided supporter of Shays, was kept in the representative's seat in the Legislature throughout this stormy period, and was chosen in Dec., 1787, as delegate to the convention for the formation of a State constitution. A single reference only to the subject, and that of slight import, occurs in Oxford records.

The disposition in the public mind, in former years, to deride and censure this movement, has, in a measure, passed away. The fact that Shays himself was pardoned, and that of the 14 men in the State found guilty of high treason and sentenced to be hanged, not one suffered the penalty, seems to warrant the inference that even in the estimation of the people of that day the offence had much to extenuate and excuse it.

Mr. E. B. Crane of Worcester, who has made a thorough study of the subject, says:—

"The majority of the towns, in all the counties west of Middlesex, were in favor of the movement, and a vast number of men who did not join the insurgents gave their support in other ways. I think it was a popular movement, and only checked by the disposition on the part of the Legislators to correct the evils as fast as they could, which they did, and thus removed the cause to some extent, and broke the strength and support of the insurgents."

¹ On the authority of the late G. W. Hartwell. on this subject, says this Lamb is said to have

"Adams' Army." During the progress of the revolution in France, near the close of the last century, that country became involved in a war with England, and each party was solicitous lest America should give aid to the opponent. France went so far as to charge us with a disposition to side with her old enemy, and small matters became so magnified through misunderstanding that serious trouble was apprehended.¹

Meantime our authorities saw fit to initiate precautionary measures, and on 16 July, 1798, a vote was passed in Congress to augment the national army, and recruiting soon began.

Oxford a camp. In the autumn of 1799, the 14th, 15th and 16th U. S. regiments,—a portion of this "provisional army,"—were ordered to Oxford as a rendezvous. These regiments were not nearly full, but soldiers were being gathered from the several recruiting stations, and here drilled by veterans of the Revolutionary War for service should it be required.

Col. Nathan Rice was put in command. He was the son of Rev. Caleb Rice of Sturbridge, had been aid to General Lincoln in the Revolution, and was of good ability and a worthy man.²

The officers found quarters in various parts of the village, at private houses. Some hired rooms, and having their families with them lived independently; others boarded in families of the villagers. The head-quarters of Col. Rice were at the house of Capt. Abijah Davis. Maj. Walker was quartered at the house of Nathan Hall, and others lived at the hotels.³ The camp was on the slope of the hill west of the centre of the town. Coming in the fall, the soldiers soon began their depredations among the neighboring farmers, and it became necessary to early gather and house their crops in order to preserve them, and even then they were not safe. Petty thieving was common, not only in this but in the neighboring towns, enclosures were broken open, cellars entered, and pork barrels emptied of their contents.⁴

As to their number we have no definite information. According to tradition it was 1,000, but this is thought to be a low estimate. Col.

² He was graduated at Harvard College in 1773, resided at Hingham, and removed to Burlington, Vt., where he spent his later years.

³ It is related that when the specie with which to pay the troops arrived in town, there was apprehension lest a raid should be made upon it. It was taken to Butler's tavern, where some of the officers roomed, deposited in one of the upstairs bedroom closets, and a network of twine drawn across the door so that any attempt upon it might be detected. The nails on which this screen was fastened remain at the present time.

The late Ephraim Edson related his having been present at the Campbell tavern on the occasion of the punishment of one of the soldiers for some misdemeanor. The culprit was tied to the tavern sign-post in the middle of the street, and there flogged in the presence of a crowd who had gathered on the occasion.

Rice was officially the commander of the 14th Regiment, and John Walker was Major of the same. John Rowe was Major in the 15th Regiment, and Josiah Dunham, Captain in the 16th Regiment, was acting Brigade Inspector. Capt. Tolman from Boston or vicinity, a very worthy man, had command of a company. Lieut. Francis Barker of Weymouth or vicinity was an officer. Eli Forbes and Thomas Hale, both of North Brookfield, were here, the former as a lieutenant and the latter as captain in the 15th Regiment, later teacher at Baltimore.

Recruiting suspended. Early in 1800 recruiting was suspended.

“Brigade Orders, Camp at Oxford, 20 March, 1800.

“Extract of general Orders from the Adjutant General's office, dated 11 Mar., 1800.

“Agreeably to instructions from the department of War the recruiting service as far as relates to 12 Regiments of Infantry and six troops of light dragoons directed to be raised by act of Congress, 16 July, 1798, is for the present suspended.

“All officers on recruiting service will join their regiments. The officers of the 14th, 15th, and 16th, regiments will govern themselves accordingly and repair immediately with the troops under their respective commands to the Brigade Head Quarters at Oxford.

Disbandment. On 20 May, 1800, the United States Senate passed a resolution, nem. con., the House of Representatives concurring, to disband the “Provisional Army” on or before the 15th of June following. This action applied to the infantry regiments from the fifth to the sixteenth inclusive. Early in June preparations were made here for compliance with this vote. On the 11th the Boston Centinel contained the following:—

“Maj.-Gen. Hamilton, we learn has been at Oxford for some time, to give the necessary directions for the preservation of the public stores in consequence of the disbandment of the army.”

The visit of Gen. Alexander Hamilton to Oxford on the occasion of the disbanding was a memorable event, as will be seen by the following letter written at Oxford and sent from Providence to the Centinel, in which it appeared on 21 June:—

“OXFORD, June 13.

“On Tuesday last Maj.-Gen. Hamilton with his suite arrived at this place, and on the succeeding day he reviewed the Brigade under the command of Col. Rice. On this occasion the troops performed their manœuvres with that exactness and activity which manifested attention in the men and superiority in the officers. The General expressed an unequivocal approbation of the discipline of the army and beheld with pleasure the progress of subordination and attention to dress and decorum. On Thursday the General made a public dinner to which all the officers of the Brigade and several gentlemen of the permanent army were invited. A convenient colonnade was erected for the purpose, over which the flag of the United States was displayed, and during the entertainment the air was filled with martial music from a new formed band and from a large collection of drums and fifes. Hilarity and joy pervaded the guests . . . but when they drank to the memory of WASHINGTON! and a parting sentiment was given by Gen. Hamilton a burst of extreme sensibility suffused every cheek and demonstrated the agitation of every bosom.

"But Friday was reserved for a more prominent display of the passions of the human mind. At 7 o'clock in the morning the Brigade was formed into a hollow square when the General addressed his fellow-soldiers in a speech of about half an hour in length. On this occasion the troops were moved, not merely on account of this last interview with their General, but by the impressive sentiments which fell from his lips, enforced by the most charming eloquence and pointed diction. I cannot give even an epitome of this address. Suffice it to observe that he inculcated sentiments suitable for directing the conduct of the army subsequent to its retirement into private life—such sentiments as awakened and I trust will keep alive the patriotism of the officers and men: and induce them again, at the call of their country to make new sacrifices for its defence.

"This day he sets out on a visit eastward."¹

The Centinel of 18 June contained the following:—

"Maj.-Gen. Hamilton and his suite arrived in town on Saturday from Oxford. Tomorrow a public dinner will be given him at Concert Hall."

This dinner was a grand affair, and many of the leading men of Boston joined to do honor to their illustrious guest. Among the toasts given were the following:—

"The late disbanded Army,—may we respect them for the services they would have performed had our insidious Friends presented a bayonet instead of an olive branch."

"The Atlantic Ocean,—what God hath separated let not man put together."

Washington's Funeral. An impressive episode in the story of this "Army" was the funeral service in honor of George Washington. On 8 Jan., 1800, by order of Col. Rice, the following appeared in the Massachusetts Spy:—

"FUNERAL HONORS AT OXFORD.

"OXFORD, Jan. 4, 1800.

"MESS. THOMAS & SON.

"The President having directed that Funeral Honors should be performed at the several Military stations throughout the United States to the Memory of our late beloved highly venerated and most illustrious COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF whose talents as an officer and virtues as a man had placed him above all praise, I have directed that the same be performed at this post on Wednesday the Fifteenth instant.

"Confident that the most poignant grief for so great a National Calamity hath pervaded every part of our country, and particularly the citizens of this vicinity, and that it would afford them consolation to unite with us in performing these sad rites, I request that through your paper information may be given thereof. The Clergy—the Society of the Cincinnati and Officers of the late Army—Officers civil and military—Citizens in general are invited to attend: and it is hoped with the usual badge of mourning on the left arm.

“The procession will be formed precisely at 11 O'clock and proceed to the Meeting-house where it is expected divine worship will be performed; after which it will proceed to the place representing that of interment, and the ceremonies performed agreeable to the instructions therefor.

“It is requested that seasonable information may be given by the Commanding Officers of such Volunteer Corps and Uniformed Companies of Militia as will attend on the occasion.

“N. RICE,

“Commandant of the 14th Regiment and Commanding Officer at Oxford.”

The Spy of 22 Jan., 1800, contained the following:—

“On Wednesday the 15th inst. Funeral Honors were paid by the troops stationed at Oxford to the memory of their illustrious leader General GEORGE WASHINGTON. At day break 16 guns were fired from the left of the Cantonment by a company of Worcester Artillery, commanded by Capt. Healy: at sunrise another gun was fired, which was repeated each half hour through the day. At 11 O'clock the troops having been formed, moved from their parade by platoons and formed in the Main Street: a company of Cavalry under the command of Capt. [Jeremiah] Kingsbury formed on their left, the whole commanded by Maj. Walker of the 14th Regiment and two companies of Artillery under the orders of Major Andrews on their right. Thus formed, at 12 O'clock, the Hearse, covered with a black velvet Pall bearing an Urn shrouded with black crape and accompanied by the Pall Bearers in mourning and with white scarfs, was received by the troops with presented arms, the drums beating a march while it passed slowly in front to the left: the Officers and colors saluting as it passed; from the left it was borne back to the centre where it halted and received the salute of all the Officers and colors alone. It was then removed to its place in the procession, which then moved, by the left, in the order following, the music playing a Dead March:

"The citizens were marshalled by Capt. Hamilton of Worcester. It is supposed the procession and the spectators amounted to 5,000 persons.

"On the arrival of the procession at the Meeting-house the troops formed the lines, opened their ranks, and faced inward, resting upon their arms reversed; the procession passed through into the house, led by the clergy, the band playing a solemn dirge; the pulpit, communion table and galleries, were wholly shrouded in black; the hearse being placed at the head of the broad aisle, the brethren of the Fraternity of Masons elevated the obelisk on the right of the hearse, and on the left placed their lights, silver urn, &c., on a large pedestal covered with black, during which the band from the gallery continued to fill the house with solemn music; thus arranged, the throne of grace was addressed by Rev. Mr. Austin of Worcester, after which another solemn dirge by the band. An eulogy was then pronounced by Capt. Josiah Dunham, of the 16th regiment of United States Infantry, in which he strikingly portrayed the virtues and services of the late Commander-in-Chief, and observed justly that Five Millions of people were, with one voice, expressing sorrow and grief at their loss. After the eulogy followed a solemn funeral dirge by the Band, during which the Fraternity, in mournful silence and in proper order, deposited their large silver urn and raised the Obelisk over it. A short but solemn funeral service was performed by the Fraternity, which closed the solemnities in the Meeting-house.

"The procession was again formed, and left the Meeting-house in the same order in which it arrived there; marching one mile in the Main Street, which being very broad, straight and level, afforded to a numerous body of spectators an opportunity of viewing the whole procession at once, during which time the bell, being muffled, tolled a solemn Knell, and minute guns were fired from the Artillery. On the arrival at the place of Deposit the troops again forming a line and resting on their arms reversed, the procession passed through, and the Hearse, reaching its destined spot, the Urn was deposited in the earth, the music again played a solemn dirge. The order of the President and of Gen. Hamilton was read to the troops, a detachment of Infantry advanced and fired three volleys over the Urn, after which the Masonic brethren placed a monument over it. The troops being again formed, the colors were unfurled and the drums unmuffled, the troops wheeled to the right by platoons, the President's March was played, and they moved to their quarters and were dismissed. The Fraternity retired to their temporary Lodge, which was immediately closed.

"The solemnities ended with the setting sun. The appearance and movements of the troops gave great satisfaction, and bore honorable testimony of the military address and executions of the officers."

For many years the "Urn" was preserved in the attic of the South meeting-house, where the ceremonies were held, and later in the house of Capt. Abijah Davis. It was of wood, about three feet in height, and was silver gilt with a monogram "W." in gold, on the side.

Soldiers of War of 1812. The muster rolls of this war are in the archives of the nation, and now inaccessible. The following list, which is incomplete, has been gathered chiefly from older people of the town:—

George Blandin, d. in the service. Jesse Briggs, Rufus Briggs, brothers. Rufus d. soon after his return. William Stiles, brother-in-law of Briggs. Abijah, son of Doct. Daniel Fisk, in Jones' Co.,

Miller's Reg., d. 1813 at Greenbush, of camp fever. Joseph Lamb, musician, drafted. Russell White, came to Oxford after his return. Sylvanus Town, Jr., in regular army on western frontier, from about 1800 to 1820, ret. to Oxford and d. here. David Wait, served three months at Fort Warren, came later to Oxford. J. Prentice, son of Levi Lamb, d. in service. John Butler, went west before the war and joined Gen. Wayne's army. [See Butler.] Edward H. Shumway, drafted. Hovey Bounds, wounded at Queenstown. [See Bounds.] John Alverson, son of George, killed in battle. Tisdale Atwood.

Minor Military affairs. We have few accounts of early military operations. The law required the enlistment and training of all able-bodied men between the ages of 16 and 60 years, and was doubtless duly observed. The frequency of military titles in the records indicates that military office was considered honorable, and many of these officers were prominent and influential citizens. The statutes also required that the towns should be provided with ammunition, "which shall be a Barrel of good Powder, two hundred weight of Bullets, and three hundred Flints for every sixty listed soldiers."¹

In 1714 the town voted "to buy a stock of Ammunishun, of 30 pounds of powder and bullits and flints answurable."

In 1718, six pounds was raised to buy ammunition. In Jan., 1724, during Father Ralle's War, a report was made of military stores, as follows: 20 pounds powder, valued £3. 15s.; twelve dozens flints, 6s.; and 28 pounds of bullets, 16s. 4d. In March, 1725, 15 pounds was voted for powder and ball.

In 1736, a committee was chosen to "search into the stock of ammunition," and in Jan., 1737, nineteen pounds was voted to replenish it. Nothing further appears to indicate active military operations until 1748, when it was voted that those in the town who had been impressed, and had been as soldiers six months in his Majesty's service, should be freed from paying taxes for 1746.² In 1757, Phinehas Ward was paid eight shillings for casting bullets for the town.

We find no further allusion to the subject until 1773. It appears that Ebenezer Cutler, Doct. Stephen Barton and William Campbell, then held a quantity of military stores belonging to the town, and in March, 1773, Capt. Ebenezer Learned was appointed by the town to sue for and collect the same, which he did.

In May, 1789, a committee on ammunition reported they had collected 155 pounds powder, 587 pounds of balls, 1,083 flints, and had obligations for 77 pounds additional of powder.

In July, 1794, the town voted, in addition to Federal pay, to non-commissioned officers and privates who should enlist in the town's

² The old French war began in 1744, in which, as we learn from this vote, Oxford soldiers were engaged. We have no means of knowing who they were. From Queen Anne's war up to this time our frontier had been protected by troops.

The French and Indian war began in 1753, although not formally declared until 1756.

quota of the 80,000 men ordered by Congress to be in readiness for service at a minute's warning, as follows: £3 to a sergeant, £2. 4s. to a corporal, £2. 4s. to a musician, and £2 to a private; and in Sept., voted to raise the above to eight dollars a month per man, if called into actual service, and to add one dollar bounty.

In Sept., 1796, the town voted to give $\frac{1}{4}$ of a pound of powder to each soldier for muster day.

Powder-house. In May, 1806, the town voted to build a powder-house, and on 1 Dec., Sylvanus Town leased to a committee, for the town, land near the north end of the plain for this building. It was of brick, about seven feet square, and stood on land now occupied by the Norwich and Worcester Railroad, near the common. The building never had repairs, and at the time of grading the railroad was much dilapidated, and by vote of the town in May, 1837, the selectmen were directed to dispose of it and its contents.

"Independent Company." From early times Oxford soldiers were enrolled in two companies, north and south. In Feb., 1824, the south was, on petition of Ebenezer Rich, captain, disbanded, and an independent company authorized, to be called "Oxford Invincibles" (later changed to "Light Infantry"), provided 45 were enlisted. The new company met 21 April, 1824, at Flagg's Hotel, and chose Andrew Sigourney, Jr., Capt.; Elihu Harwood, Jr., Lieut.; Archibald Campbell, Ens. The roll numbered 66. A uniform was adopted of "dark blue coats, leather cartridge boxes, white belts and cross straps, black leather caps [high], black [ostrich] plumes, white pantaloons." Company met 5 July, and "trained a day." Attended muster 15 Sept., at Sutton; in 1825, at Millbury. Aug., 1827, Elihu Harwood, Jr., chosen Capt.; Feb., 1829, Hiram Moffitt chosen Capt., Nathaniel Emerson, Lieut., Jasper Brown, Ens. Muster 1829, at Sutton. Sept., 1830, Nathaniel Emerson chosen Capt., Jasper Brown, Lieut., Erastus Evans, Ens. Muster 30 Sept., at Sutton.

In 1830 the 5th Regt. was disbanded, and this company transferred to the 4th Regt. Muster, 1831, at Dresser Hill, Charlton, and 1832 at Southbridge. April, 1837, Jasper Brown chosen Capt., Erastus Evans, Lieut., Robert Frair, Ens. Muster, 1837, at Dudley, the last of the regimental reviews. The company soon after disbanded, and its members were enrolled in the militia.¹

Cavalry Company. A cavalry company existed in Oxford for more than 25 years. Jeremiah Kingsbury, Jr., was in command in 1797. It was composed of men from other places, many being from Sutton, and Asa(?) Putnam of that town was for a time captain, and ¹Soon after the organization a banner was given the company by the ladies, at a cost of eighty dollars. The presentation was on the common in a speech by Sally Torrey, replied to by Archibald Campbell. A few years before a like ceremony took place, when the cavalry company was the recipient of a standard, Miss Rider of Charlton, then teacher here, making the address. Capt. Putnam, of Sutton, being in command.

Rufus Moore afterward. In Feb., 1808, Kingsbury had been several years Lieut.-Col. of a battalion of cavalry, 1st Brigade, 7th Division, Mass. Militia, and then resigned. Andrew Smith was the last captain of the Oxford company, which was disbanded not far from 1825.

Musters. The expanse of Oxford Plain rendered it peculiarly appropriate for military reviews.¹ On the 30th of Sept. and 1st of Oct., 1817, occurred a Brigade Muster, which was thus described in the Massachusetts Spy :—

"His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief [Gov. Brooks], accompanied by the Adjutant General and Major Brooks, a son of his Excellency, reviewed at Oxford, on the 30th ult., and the 1st inst., four regiments of Infantry, the regiment of Cavalry, and battalion of Artillery belonging to the first Brigade and seventh Division—the whole under the command of Brig.-Gen. Towne [of Charlton]. The weather was fine, and the troops exhibited a degree of patience, perseverance and discipline, with which his Excellency and suite manifested their great gratification, and expressed a belief that many of their manœuvres could not be surpassed by the best troops in the service of the United States."

At the close the Governor and suite were escorted by mounted citizens to Worcester, where they were honored in a sumptuous dinner, and the next day proceeded to Lancaster, where the Second Brigade of the same Division was reviewed.²

A similar gathering occurred here in 1819, but the number of troops was not so large, and the absence of the Commander-in-Chief took from it the prestige of the previous occasion. The Spy, a week or two prior to the day, gave: "The first and fifth regiments of Infantry, with the regiment of Cavalry and battalion of Artillery, we understand will meet at Oxford." Gen. Salem Towne, of Charlton, was in command, and, as on the previous occasion, throngs of people from the region about were present. In the fall of 1825 a review of a battalion of several companies of cavalry, from this and other towns near, took place on ground easterly from the present railroad station, it then being an open field.

Probably the most striking spectacle ever seen in the town was at the time of the first review, when the four regiments of Infantry, the regiment of Cavalry, and the battalion of Artillery, each with its

² Col. Reuben Waters, then of Sutton, was a participant in this review, and related that Gov. Brooks and suite arrived at West Sutton on the evening of the 29th Sept., remained there over night, rode to Oxford on the next morning, and returned and spent the second night at Sutton, and in the afternoon of the second day left for Worcester. The troops, he remarked, were under the command of Maj.-Gen. Burbank of Millbury, and Towne was commander under him. They brought their provisions and tent equipage, and encamped on the field, and the firing of the salute to the Governor by the Artillery was a memorable incident of the occasion. In speaking of the decline of the military spirit later, he said the fifth regiment, to which Oxford and Sutton soldiers belonged, was disbanded because the men became weary of doing military duty, and purposely elected inefficient men as officers, thus bringing the matter into entire discredit.

mounted officers, flag and band of music, filed off the field into our broad street, at its lower extremity, and under the lead of Governor Brooks and aids, marched in broad ranks up its mile of level, and returned to their encampment.

The Civil War. The people of Oxford were fully awake to the condition of national affairs in the early months of 1861. The news of the attack on Fort Sumter on 12 April, sent a thrill of excitement throughout the North. On Monday, the 15th, President Lincoln issued his call for 75,000 troops for three months. Four days later, on the evening of Friday, the 19th,—the day which witnessed the contest between the Sixth Massachusetts Regiment and the Baltimore mob,—an enthusiastic meeting assembled at Sanford's Hall, at which Hon. Alexander DeWitt presided. Spirited addresses were made by Moses S. Johnson, Jasper Brown, Nelson Bartholomew, Luther C. Torrey, and others, and a committee, consisting of Alexander DeWitt, Samuel C. Paine, Emory E. Harwood, William E. Pease and Nelson Bartholomew, was chosen to effect the immediate organization of a volunteer military company. Bartholomew was enthusiastic, and of all the workers the most efficient. The compact for the forming of this company—supposed to have been drawn by him—was as follows:—

Military company.

"The undersigned, residents of Oxford and vicinity, desirous of being qualified, should the emergency arise, to respond to the call of the country for men to defend her against rebellion, do hereby signify their willingness to join a military company to be instructed in the military drill, and prepared to do a soldier's duty."¹ Signed—Nelson Bartholomew, Charles L. Watson, H. S. Dealing,² J. E. Fellows, Josiah G. Brown, George H. Keith, Joseph H. Williams, Albert Prince, Edwin E. Rindge, Edwin Grout, J. B. Gould, John Fitzpatrick, N. Aiken Viall, J. G. Mowry, George B. Works, Luther C. Torrey, William H. Hall, Vernon F. Rindge,—total 18.

This number was within two or three days increased to 45, and on Monday evening, April 22, at a rally at North Oxford a sufficient number was added to assure the success of the company.

On 22 April, three days after the informal meeting, a town meeting was called, which was held on the sixth of May, Jasper Brown, moderator. A vote was passed raising not exceeding $4,000 towards paying the expenses of a volunteer military company in town, compensating its members, procuring uniform and aiding families. The town treasurer was authorized to borrow money to meet expenses.³

³ Provision was later made for the necessary funds by a subscription, and 178 citizens contributed $4,031. In Nov., 1865, a law having been enacted to meet such cases, the town voted that these subscriptions be refunded, which was done in 1867. At this meeting it was voted that the selectmen and Alexander DeWitt, Emory Sanford, George Hodges, Jr., Samuel C. Paine, William E. Pease, Charles A. Angell, Ira Merriam and Elisha M. Smith be a committee to carry into effect the vote of the town respecting a volunteer military company, and that said committee be instructed "to pay each member of such company, except those provided for by other towns, fifty cents a day for time spent in elementary drill up to this date, and hereafter, Organization. The company was organized May 4th under the militia laws of the State, and in honor of Col. Alexander DeWitt was called the "DeWitt Guards." The following were elected as officers: Captain, Charles H. Watson;¹ 1st Lieut., Nelson Bartholomew; 2d Lieut., Henry W. Harold; 3d Lieut., Joseph Wood; 4th Lieut., Bernard B. Vassall. Under the United States laws there could be but two lieutenants, Harold, not having been naturalized was ineligible, and Wood retired, and Bartholomew and Vassall were commissioned. 1st Sergt., Luther C. Torrey; Sergts. Henry W. Harold, Albert Prince, Geo. B. Works, Peleg F. Murray; Corps. Charles A. Bacon, Pliny Allen, Amos H. Shumway; Musicians, Oscar L. Guild, William H. Smith. Two days after the organization the officers had received their commissions and arms had been furnished by the State. Two or three weeks afterward the equipment of the company was completed by the receipt of uniforms, and 1 June an excursion was made to Worcester, where the company was cordially received and entertained.²

Bounties. Under the call of the President, 1 July, 1862, for 300,000 men the town voted, 30 July, to pay a bounty of $150 to each man heretofore enlisted for the war, or who should enlist within three days, and $125 to those enlisting within one week, and $100 to those enlisting thereafter until the town's quota of 38 men be filled. At the close of this meeting 20 men enlisted. On 6 Sept. an additional sum of $50 as bounty was voted. In Aug., 1863, it was voted to pay State aid to soldiers' families in accordance with Chap. 176 of the laws of 1863.³

In camp. Drilling at Oxford continued until 28 June when the company went into camp at Worcester, and was attached to the 15th Regiment, Mass. Vols., and designated as Company E. Camp duty one dollar a day for a time not exceeding 24 days—provided the company be required to drill six hours each day, the first roll-call to be at 8 o'clock A. M. unless the committee otherwise directs, and the last roll-call to be at 6 o'clock P. M., and the company to drill at least one hour previous to the call, the balance of the time for drilling to be left to the discretion of the commanding officer,—also that each and every soldier not on duty at any or each roll-call shall forfeit his pay that day, and fifty cents; and that said committee be instructed to purchase a suitable uniform for said company."

² At the annual meeting of Co. E Association, 1890, its President made the statement that this company was the first new organization in the State to appear armed and equipped in response to the President's call.

A bill was paid by the town for the use of Sanford's Hall "as a rendezvous and armory from 10 May to 28 June, inclusive." In Nov., 1861, the town voted to pay board bills of soldiers not exceeding $267.85. Of this $132 were paid to L. A. Presby, tavern-keeper. The amount paid by the town to the "DeWitt Guards" for drilling was $2,084, and for uniforms $1,043. The bounties paid before the spring of 1862 amounted to $10,650. The amount paid to soldiers' families in the fiscal year ending 1862 was $1,707; 1863, $4,283; 1864, $4,904; 1865, $6,708; 1866, State aid, $2,691. [Town Reports.]

April, 1864, the following appeared in the Worcester Spy: "The town of Oxford considers itself the banner town of the county, having filled all quotas with four or five men in the field in excess, and all have been raised without war meetings, extra bounties or purchases of men out of town."

was continued until 8 Aug., when under the command of Col. Devens the regiment left en route for Washington, arriving on the 10th. On the 12th an encampment was made on Meridian Hill, under the name of Camp Kalorama. On the 25th began the march toward Poolesville, which place was reached on the 27th.¹ Here the regiment was attached to the Corps of Observation, under command of Gen. Stone, and remained as guard and doing picket duty until 21 Oct., when occurred the battle of Ball's Bluff.²

Ball's Bluff. This was the first experience of these men in battle, and while they fought with courage and steadiness which would have been creditable to veterans they could not prevail against overwhelming numbers. Col. Baker, of a California regiment which joined in the movement, was in command. A crossing was made in insufficient transports, a difficult landing effected on the Virginia side, and after marching a short distance on unexplored and partially wooded ground they found themselves confronted by a force more than double their own in numbers, were driven back to the ragged bluff where the command having been given for every man to take care of himself they rushed in disorder to the river, swamped their boats, and by means of logs, rails or whatever could be had to aid, swam toward the Maryland side amid a shower of bullets from the enemy.

Joseph Jennison, Jr., and James Hilton were killed; Bernard B. Vassall, Lieut., prisoner; John M. Norcross, Nathaniel A. Viall, Joseph H. Williams and Patrick Moore (both wounded), Corporals; privates Amidon, Daniel Cobb, Coburn, Thomas Conroy, William Conroy, Geo. P. Davis, William M. Davis, Dockham, Duffy, Eckersley, Emerson, Fellows, Feighan (wounded), McIntire, McKinstry, Moffit (wounded), Moynahan, Phipps (wounded), Vernon F. Rindge, Schmidt were taken prisoners; 5 officers, 22 privates; total 27. The number of men of the regiment who crossed was about 625, of these only one-half returned.

Subsequently the command remained in camp at Poolesville until 25 Feb., 1862. At that date, having been brigaded under Gen. Gorman as 1st Brigade, 2d Division, Gen. Sedgwick, they broke camp and marched toward Harper's Ferry, reaching that place on the 26th, where they were quartered in houses until 2 March, when they removed about three miles to Bolivar Heights, encamping until the 7th.³ Marches were made thence southerly, Berryville being occupied on the 10th, and after repeated movements toward Winchester they returned on the 15th to Bolivar Heights, and thence on the 22d via Sandy Hook by rail to Washington, stopping until the 26th, on the

By an order 26 Aug. Capt. Watson was placed third in order of captains in the regiment.

² On 12 Sept. Albert Prince was promoted to 1st Sergt. in place of Luther C. Torrey, who returned to the ranks. On 12 Oct. Amos H. Shumway was made Sergeant.

night of which they moved to Alexandria, and on the 29th embarked for Fortress Monroe, landed at Hampton 1 April, and on the 4th took up a line of march for Yorktown to join in the siege. Andrew B. Yeomans kept a diary during his service, from which we quote: Yorktown. "On the 5th after a march in the rain and mud encamped at Camp Misery; 8th Co. went out as provost guard." In the siege, continuing several weeks, the company was detailed repeatedly as support of R. I. Battery, to picket duty, and in regiment to building fortifications.¹ On 5 May the rebel fortifications were occupied by Union troops. That night occurred the battle of Williamsburg.

"Ordered up about 7 at night, dark, rainy, muddy time. Artillery got stuck and were until 8 o'clock A. M. in getting one mile, and returned to camp. Early in the morning, 6th, went to Yorktown landing, took steamer and arrived at West Point about 11 A. M. Gen. Franklin's Division engaged with the enemy. 8, at night regiment on picket. 9, marched on about 3 miles to near Eltham. 11, on picket. 15, had a hard rough march in a rain storm, camped in the pine woods. 18, moved about 5 miles. 21, had a hard hot march of about 12 miles and struck the railroad 14 miles from Richmond. 25, moved on about 5 miles, regiment on picket. 24, returned and went into camp with rest of the Division near the 'Tyler house.' 26, ordered to be ready to move at a moment's notice. 28, routed up at 1 o'clock A. M., started at daylight double-quick up to near Cold Harbor or Gaines' Mill to support Gen. Fitz John Porter; laid in the woods all day and night until 29, returned to Camp near 'Tyler house.'"

Fair Oaks.

"About 2 o'clock P. M., 31st, ordered up double-quick through mud and water, crossed the Chickahominy on 'Sumner's Bridge,' water rising rapidly, formed lines just as action commenced in the battle of Fair Oaks. Forepart of the engagement the regiment supported Battery 'I,' 1st U. S. Artillery, Kirby's. About dark regiment charged into the woods, remained in line until 3 o'clock A. M. Regimental loss 22 killed and wounded."²

On 1 June the battle was renewed, 15th regiment not engaged. Remained in line of battle until the 9th, under very adverse conditions, "rainy weather, no shelter or overcoats, scanty rations, as the bridge behind had been carried away, little or no sleep on account of constant alarms. Aroused at 2 o'clock every morning, and were under arms until daylight," were marched and counter-marched, and employed in building breastworks, and on picket duty, and subject to frequent shellings from the enemy.

"June 27, attack on our right, went up as reserve, regiment not engaged.³ 28, company on picket; was attacked about 11 o'clock, fell back a few rods . . . held our ground until next morning. 29. About 9 A. M. the line was ordered back, came to our camp, found the balance of the regiment and all the rest of the troops gone, did not stop to take tents, packed knapsacks, but as the Rebel Cavalry came in pursuit, threw away everything and double-quickened for Savage's Station. Arrived there, joined our brigade, and found the balance of the regiment destroying stores."

Savage's Station.

"About 5 o'clock battle of Savage's Station. After dark, line fell back and marched all night; crossed White Oak Swamp. 30, demolished the bridge, brigade deployed to prevent the enemy crossing at that point."

White Oak Swamp. Then occurred the battle of "White Oak Swamp," with heavy loss on both sides. In this contest Yeomans was taken prisoner. He says :—

"Ordered up to the left, double-quick, woods on fire; got exhausted and fell out. In a few moments went on to join the brigade, the woods were full of smoke, got lost, ran on to the Rebel line of battle, and was taken prisoner by the 28th North Carolina regiment."¹

Malvern Hill. On 1 July occurred the battle of Malvern Hill, the last of the Richmond battles, in which the Confederates were repulsed at every point. The 15th regiment was engaged, but the loss was small. On the pay-roll, 31 Aug., 1862, is endorsed as follows :—

"Regiment engaged on Malvern Hill, Va., 1 July. From thence marched to Harrison's Landing. On 4 Aug. marched to Malvern Hill on a reconnoissance in force; 6 Aug., returned to camp at Harrison's Landing; Aug. 15, marched across the Chickahominy through Williamsburg, Yorktown, Big Bethel, Hampton to Newport News, arriving 22d. 25, embarked for Alexandria, landed 28, marched about five miles on the Manassas turnpike, and encamped. 29, marched for Chain bridge, arriving 30; thence to Fairfax, and 31 to Centreville, and encamped near the enemy's old works."²

The efforts of the Union troops, in the early summer, to reach Richmond had failed. The Confederates were encouraged, and having raised the siege laid plans at once for removing the scene of action nearer the national Capital, and for the invasion of Maryland. The Union forces were now on their way northward, and a few weeks later the two opposing armies were arrayed in force at Antietam. The diary continues :—

"1 Sept., 1862, Brigade went out reconnoitering, back at night; marched all night to Fairfax. On morning of 2d, formed line of battle and remained all day; . . . at nearly dark the Rebels brought up their Flying Artillery and annoyed the rear of our column; the 1st Minn., with one section of artillery, formed across the road, and our regiment took a cross road and formed, and waited an attack. The enemy's cavalry came upon the Minn. regiment, who gave them a volley and fell back. We joined the column and marched until 2 o'clock; halted about two miles from Chain bridge.³ On 3d, crossed the bridge and camped at Tenellytown, Md.; 5, marched on to near Rockville; 6, moved a few miles and camped; 9 and 10, moved slowly; 11, near Clarksburg, shelled the Rebel cavalry; 12, went on through Hyattstown; 13, through Frederick City, and encamped near the city; 14, marched through Middletown; battle of South Mountain, arrived on the field after dark, just after firing had ceased; relieved line of battle; 14, during the night, the enemy left; 15, went on in pursuit, through Boonsboro and Keedyville, bivouacked; 16, artillery fight all day; 17, battle of Antietam."¹

Antietam. This was one of the great battles of the war. Each army numbered about 100,000 men, and the contest continued from morning till night. During the night the Confederates retreated. In this struggle the 15th lost heavily. The casualties in Co. E were: Killed, Serg. Amos H. Shumway (buried on the field); Alfred W. Davis, d. of wounds 22 Sept.; John H. Curran, James H. Davis, Alexander Thompson, Conrad Amptaur, Charles H. Wheelock, Edwin E. Rindge, d. of wounds 21 Oct. Wounded, Lieut. Albert Prince; Corps. Edward Cudworth, Simon Carson and Horace P. Howe; privates Matthew Brennan, Cyrus J. Dodd, Edward Ennis, Frank Eaton, Fred. A. Hall, Joseph E. Haskell, John W. Humphrey, John B. Marcy, Elliot F. McKinstry, Jerome P. Southwick, John Sullivan, Marquis E. Steere, Stephenson Sill, Luther Stone, George O. Williams, William Y. Woodbury, Oliver L. White. Yeomans says: "On the 18th only 10 from Co. E were present for duty; 19th, detailed to the battle-field to bury the dead and care for the wounded. Bivouacked until the 22d," at which date the regiment marched through Sharpsburg, down the Potomac valley toward Harper's Ferry, and again encamped on Bolivar Heights, where it continued until 30 October. At that date camp was broken and a line of march taken through the Loudon Valley toward Fredericksburg.²

Falmouth. After moving in different directions to meet the motions of the enemy, the regiment skirmishing, acting as picket guard and rear-guard for wagon-trains, etc., the vicinity of Falmouth, opposite Fredericksburg, was reached on 20 Nov., where preparations were made to go into winter quarters.

Fredericksburg. On 13 Dec., 1862, occurred the first battle of Fredericksburg (Gen. Burnside being in command), in which the fifteenth was engaged. The Confederates fought behind entrenchments and the Unionists in the open field, with great loss. One, Edward Lovely, wounded, and one, Emory F. Bailey, missing, in Co. E. A note [in Co. E Records], dated 11 Dec., says: "Regiment marched across the river to Fredericksburg,—in active service till the 16th,—then ordered to old camp near Falmouth."

Recrossing the river, the regiment remained in winter quarters near Falmouth until 2 May, 1863. On that day marched to the

ing and skirmishing till the battle of Antietam closed the year's campaign."

river bank, and at daylight on the 3d crossed to Fredericksburg and joined, under Gen. Hooker, in the second attack on the Confederate works. Failing in the attempt, it recrossed the river the same night, and for four days acted as picket guard and support of a battery near the river. On the 8th, "moved back to the hill opposite the Lacy house," where an encampment was made, continuing about five weeks.¹

Marches. The movements of the Confederates at this time indicated another invasion of the North, and on 15 June camp was broken, and the tedious marches began backward toward the old scenes of conflict. Yeomans says:—

"Started at 2 o'clock A. M.; hot, hard march through Stafford Court House, 18 m.; 16, started at 2 A. M. through Dumfries, Wolf Run Ford, etc., 19 m.; 17, to Fairfax Station, 6 m.; 19, to Centreville, 6 m.; 20, through Gainesville to near Thoroughfare Gap, 17 m.; staid till 25, on through Haymarket, Rebels shelled our rear, camped near Gum Springs, 14 m.; 26, crossed the Potomac at Edwards' Ferry, 13 m.; 27, through Poolesville to foot of Sugar-loaf Mountain, 12 m.; 28, through Barnesville to near Frederick, 12 m.; 29, long, hard march through Liberty, Union Bridge, 35 m.; 1 July, through Taneytown to near Gettysburg, 17 m.; 2, battle of Gettysburg."

Gettysburg. Fighting had begun the previous day, and notwithstanding the strain of long continuous marches in the rain and heat, these men joined "early in the morning," says the diary, of the 2d of July, in this greatest battle of the war. Starting at daybreak they marched several miles and at sunrise had joined a portion of their second corps, in its position behind Cemetery Ridge. Skirmishing began early, but the hard fighting of the day, in which the 15th took a part, was not until the afternoon and continued until night without decisive results. On the 3d the contest was renewed and in the forenoon the Unionists gained some advantage. At 1 o'clock began the final struggle, and for two hours a terrific cannonading from 150 Confederate and 80 Union guns continued. At 3 o'clock Gen. Lee, thinking the Union lines weakening, precipitated upon their left centre his reserve of 18,000 of his best troops, intending to sweep the field. The Union veterans were equal to the emergency, met the assault with coolness and bravery, forced back the attacking column and decided the fortunes of the day. In a Spy editorial, 23 July, 1864, occurs the following:—

"The next day [3 July] the battle was renewed. The shock was terrible. Late in the afternoon, when the rebel lines showed signs of wavering, the colors of the Fifteenth were ordered [by Gen. John Gibbon] to advance. The remnant of the regiment rallied to their support, and as if by one impulse the whole line pushed forward with a shout and carried the position. The rebel army was defeated."

The Spy of 23 Nov., 1863, contained notes of a visit of several members of the regiment to the battle-field to fix the location of a monument. We quote:—

“Another point established was where the final charge of Pickett’s division was repulsed at the summit of the hill near a clump of trees, mentioned in most accounts of the battle, called ‘the high-water mark of the rebellion.’ Here the 15th made a heroic stand at the crisis of the fight, and the spot was selected to be marked by a permanent memorial in its honor.”¹

Of Co. E, privates Geo. W. Cross and Michael Flynn were killed; and Capt. Prince, Corp. Anthony Murphy and Owen Tonar, Robert Lusty and Thomas King, privates, wounded; Flynn was on detached service in a R. I. Battery and is said to have been among the bravest. On the 5th a line of march was taken southward again, through Taneytown and Frederick and across Antietam Creek, near the battle-field, where they were on the 10th. On the 18th Harper’s Ferry was reached, and keeping almost continuously on the move southward on the 23d an encampment was made near Warrenton Junction, about 60 miles south from Harper’s Ferry. Here they remained until 12 Sept., making marches in different directions to meet exigences.² At this date a movement was made, crossing on the 13th the Rappahannock to Culpepper Court House, and on the 17th going on to near the Rapidan and Cedar Mountain. Oct. 5, says Yeomans:—

“Returned through Culpepper. 10, marched up through the town, formed line of battle, at night sent out pickets. 11, at 2 A. M. withdrew pickets, marched back, recrossed the Rappahannock . . . and marched back . . . beyond Bealton Station, hard march of 18 m. with 8 days rations on our backs. 13, marched to near Sulphur Springs between Warrenton and Warrenton Junction and bivouacked.”

Bristow Station. On 14 Oct. occurred the battle of Bristow Station in which the Confederates attacked and were repulsed with great loss. Henry Jirvensen, in Co. E, wounded.³

During the few succeeding weeks the position of the regiment was often changed, but did not remove far from Warrenton Junction. The diary continues:—

“Nov. 27, went on through the Wilderness to near Locust Grove, came on the enemy, formed line, the regiment advanced as skirmishers,—heavy skirmishing all day—regiment relieved at 9 at night—loss small. [Leander T. Kirby, wounded; Serg. James Comrie and Louis Jaquier, missing.] 28, advanced in line of battle through thick swampy woods . . . heavy skirmishing all day, remained in line all night. 29, moved out through the woods by White Hall Church on to plank road to Orange Court House, our corps and one division of 6th Corps intending to flank the enemy’s right; skirmishing—first division slightly engaged. 30, turned out at 2 A. M. intending an assault, but as the enemy had been heavily reinforced during the night did not attack. Fell back after dark and marched from 8½ P. M. all night. 2 Dec., crossed the Rapidan at Culpepper, Mines Ford, and reached old quarters at 8½ P. M., having had a hard 24 hours' march of 35 miles. On 5 Dec. moved 4 miles to near Stevensburg and went into winter quarters.¹

"On 6 Feb. marched six miles to Morton's Ford, on the Rapidan, after dark crossed the river and engaged the enemy; 7th, recrossed and were on river bank all day, and in the evening returned to camp."

Campaign of 1864. Until early in May, 1864, the encampment continued near Stevensburg with only occasionally an incident to break the monotony of camp life. Then came the battles of the Wilderness and Spottsylvania. Gen. Grant was now in command. The Union army, with recruited ranks, crossed the Rapidan, and Gen. Lee fell back toward Richmond. C. C. Coffin says:—

"The month of May, 1864, will be remembered on account of the momentous events which took place in one of the greatest military campaigns of history. We are amazed by a succession of events unparalleled for rapidity. We cannot fully comprehend the amount of endurance, the persistency, the hard marching, the harder fighting, the unwearied, cheerful energy and effort which carried the Army of the Potomac from the Rappahannock to the James in forty days, against the stubborn opposition of almost equal numbers. . . . Morning, noon and midnight the boom of cannon and the rattling of musketry echoed unceasingly through the Wilderness, around Spottsylvania, along the North Anna, and among the groves of Bethesda Church and Cold Harbor."

Wilderness and Spottsylvania. On the 5th and 6th was fought the battle of the Wilderness, with many losses and no decided advantage to either side.² On the 9th, after three days hard fighting, the Confederates retreated with 13,000 loss. On the 11th and 12th occurred the battle of Spottsylvania, when 4,000 Confederates were captured. Of these movements Yeomans says:—

"3 May broke camp at 9.30 P. M., marched to Corps headquarters; 4, went on about midnight, crossed the Rappahannock at Ely's Ford, marched to Chancellorsville, halted and formed lines; 5, went on about five miles to Todd's Tavern, took another road, came back, fight began about 5 P. M., regiment engaged slightly; 6, hard fight, regiment engaged all day—battle of the Wilderness—regimental loss about 50 killed and wounded; 7, the fight

² Of the battle of the Wilderness, a recent writer has said: "It was the most strange and indescribable battle in history. A battle which no man saw, and in which artillery was useless. A battle fought in dense woods and tangled brake, when manœuvring was impossible, where the lines of battle were invisible to the commanders, and whose position could only be determined by the rattle and roll and flash of musketry, and where the enemy was also invisible." Another says: "Nothing can be stranger or more difficult to understand and picture mentally than this death grapple between 200,000 men in virtual darkness, this desperate struggle, costing from 12,000 to 15,000 lives, fought out without perception on either side of the entitles that were moving rifle-trigger and gunlock. The firing was guided wholly by the flashes of the opposing volleys. No men were to be seen. Yet death was everywhere. In no battle of the war could the courage of the combatants have been so severely tried as here." —[N. Y. Tribune, 22 June, 1888.

still continues, regiment changed position several times, but not engaged; 8, moved down by Todd's Tavern supporting cavalry; hot, hard march; 9, early in morning went back a short distance, formed lines, remained a short time, came back and moved down near River Po, and laid there all night; 10, crossed the Po, formed lines, staid but a short time, recrossed the river, and moved up to the left—Spottsylvania—hard fight, Capt. Prince wounded, charged breastworks, Henry Koch and Corp. Geo. S. Williams killed [the latter] on picket front of breastworks, remained till 12 at night; 12, at daylight charged the enemy's works successfully, captured Maj.-Gen. Johnson, Gen. Stuart, and many other officers, 18 pieces artillery, and many prisoners. In the afternoon attacked by the enemy—hard fight all the afternoon, regimental loss large, remained in line all night; 13, engaged slightly; 14, in line all day, not engaged; 17, remained quiet till dark, moved up to the Rebel breastworks; 18, at daylight moved on the enemy's works again—hard fight all the forenoon, at night moved further towards the left, about seven or eight miles by Mary's bridge; 20, moved on; 21, marched all night through Guiney's Station, Bowling Green, Milford, etc., crossed the Mattaponi river, went on picket at night; 23, moved at 7 A. M. to North Anna River, some skirmishing; 24, crossed river, built breastworks, went out to support skirmish line, out all night; 26, recrossed the river; 28, crossed the Pamunkey near Newmarket, regiment deployed as skirmishers, got shelled, out all night as pickets; 29, joined Brigade; 30 and 31, moved each day, on night of 31 deployed as skirmishers, dug rifle-pits, out all night and next day; June 1, unsuccessful charge on the enemy's works;¹ 3, battle of Cold Harbor; at daylight made unsuccessful charge on enemy's works, at night dug rifle-pits within 50 yards of works, hot, hard, rainy time, constant sharp shooting; 7, flag of truce to bury dead; 8, quiet; 9, firing resumed on both sides, remained till night of 11, moved back."

Change of plan. At this point Gen. Grant altered his plan and suddenly moving by a circuitous route to the southward of Richmond, began the attack on Petersburg. The diary continues:—

"12, marched all night; 13, crossed the Chickahominy in the morning on pontoons, below Bottom Bridge, marched to Charles City Court House; 14, at 5 P. M. crossed the James on transports and moved up about two miles; 15, marched towards Petersburg till 12 at night, built breastworks; 18, routed at 1 A. M., moved on enemy, regiment under fire all day, loss small; 19, at night moved out in front of rifle-pits, staid all day and all night; 20, moved back and camped; 21, in the morning crossed Norfolk railroad, moved up Jerusalem Plank road [nearly south of Petersburg], regiment laid in woods all night . . . ; 22, at 2 A. M. moved on through thick swamp to skirmish line, threw up breastworks, Rebs came in through a gap in our lines and took us all prisoners—77 in our regiment."

Thus ends the diary, so far as it describes the movements of the regiment. The prisoners were taken to Richmond, and thence toward Andersonville. On 1 July, while being marched around a break in the railroad under a guard of old men, boys, etc., Yeomans made a dash for the woods, was fired upon, but escaped, reaching the Union lines near Knoxville on 11 August.

Twenty days after the capture the time of their enlistment expired, and some of the prisoners having been paroled, they, with others from different posts to which they had been assigned, started homeward via. Baltimore, arriving by steamer at Boston on 21st July. On 22d a grand reception was given them at Worcester. On 28th they were mustered at Brinley Hall, in that city,—7 officers and 80 privates,—paid off, and honorably discharged. The efficiency of this stanch Corps cannot be overrated. It distinguished itself for bravery on many occasions, and was one of the half-dozen regiments in the Union army which sustained the heaviest losses during the war.

GEORGE WHITLEY, substitute for Benjamin W. Childs, served from 7 Dec., '64, to the close of the war.

U. S. Engineers.

HOWARD CARSON. LEANDER A. POOR.

Number of Oxford Soldiers. It is impossible to give from data accessible, the precise number of men properly called inhabitants of Oxford who engaged in the war, as many from abroad enlisted in Oxford's quota, and were credited here, while a considerable number from the town enlisted in other places. The number furnished by Oxford is given officially in the Selectmen's Report for 1865 as 252, including five three years' men enlisted in the southern States, which was a surplus of 23 one year's men over all calls.

Grand Army of the Republic. Oxford Post, G. A. R. No. 27, Charles Devens, was organized 15 Oct., 1867, in the Engine Company's hall, met there for a time and removed in 1868 to Sanford's Hall, continuing to the fall of 1870. A reorganization occurred Nov., 1870, in the basement of the store next south of the bank, and meetings were held there until about 1878, when the hall over the store on Sutton Avenue, near the railroad station, was occupied. In Nov., 1881, Sanford's Hall was again leased and has since that date been headquarters.

In 1879 a Relief Fund was established for the benefit of sick soldiers, and in 1889 $366.82 had been disbursed. In addition special contributions to needy comrades were made to the amount of about $500. The regular fund has been kept up by donations and the profits of public entertainments. The number of members, 1889, was 43.

Commanders: 1867, Bernard B. Vassall; 1868, A. Burrill Yeomans; 1869, A. B. Clark; 1870, '71, '72, Lewis T. Emerson; 1873, William S. Forrest; 1874, George H. Baker; 1875, '76, J. Potash. For the first hundred years of the town's history its inhabitants were almost entirely devoted to agricultural pursuits. Scythe-making was undertaken in a small way toward the close of the last century, and before the Revolution the manufacture of potash began. This was, indeed, almost the only article of manufacture sent out of town for sale before 1800. Wood ashes were abundant; traders received them in exchange for goods, and several had attached to their premises buildings fitted with leaches and kettles for its manufacture, and transacted a considerable business, marketing it in Boston, whence it was shipped to England.

Six factories are known to have existed in town. At the north were the works of Uriah Stone, who cut and burned large quantities of wood on the Gore lands, and was perhaps the largest producer of the town. He is said to have operated two establishments. Another was at the northwest on Cox's land. In 1765 Stephen Barton sold to Dr. Alexander Campbell "potash works on Cox's land." [See Homestead 94.] Another stood north of the Butler tavern and was owned and operated by James Butler. At the north end of the Plain on the brook, called from the fact "Potash Brook," was another, owned in 1793 by John Wolcott and probably earlier by his father, Josiah; and in the east part of the town near the outlet of Robinson's Pond, on homestead No. 14, was one owned and operated by Elisha Davis, and another on Sucker Brook in the south part of the town, owned by Ephraim Kingsbury and Jeremiah Davis in partnership. In 1788, '89, '90, Jeremiah Kingsbury, Jr., carried on a considerable business at potash making, probably at this location.

Iron. One of the earliest manufactures of the town was bar iron, the making of which began about 1798 at South Oxford, now East Village, Webster, where an establishment operated by water-power was owned by Philip Brown and John Healy. These bought of Asa Robinson in April, 1798, six acres on which were a saw-mill and a grist-mill, where they built a furnace and forges. The ore was mined on the hill easterly from the mouth of Sucker Brook [see "S. Gore grants"], and was smelted, worked into bars and used to some extent on the premises. In Nov., 1799, Brown sold to Healy, who continued the business for a time. A letter written 21 Jan., 1801, from Dr. James Gleason to his son Jacob, then at Greenbush, "on the New York Grants," says:—

"Jesse [the writer's son] has had 3 tons of pig iron of him [Dr. Dyer of Providence]. Capt. Heely is a working them into bar iron and expects to have a ton soon," etc.

Operations must have been quite limited. In March, 1805, Healy sold the estate and the making of iron terminated.

Eliott Mill. Eliott mill brook, near the Hawes place, was in early times larger than at present. A stream sufficient to drive a saw-mill issued from "Burnt Swamp," near Wellington's, H. 129, now drained and cultivated. This mill was built by Reuben Eddy a short distance north of the Pope house, H. 132, and was dilapidated in 1820, but was used by Pope after he came to town. It was removed many years ago. By means of a dam at the south end a large pond serving as a reservoir was raised over the swamp. The east branch of Mill Brook rising in Auburn, now nearly dry in summer, was sufficiently large to operate a considerable mill at North Oxford station village. These branches meeting near the Pope homestead furnished a good water-power below, and near the crossing of the stream and Worcester road as early as 1715 Daniel Eliott built the first grist-mill of the English settlement. Before 19 March, 1716, he had sold his home lot, on which stood the mill, to Jonathan Provender. At a proprietor's meeting, 19 March, 1716, it was voted "that Jonathan Provender shall take up a small piece of land to set his house upon, lying near to the house lot he bought of Eliott." In June, 1716, Provender sold the lot and one-fourth of the mill to Samuel Barton, who settled there and died in 1732. His sons Caleb and Joshua, in 1733, sold their interests to Jacob Cummings. The mill had several owners. On 15 May, 1716, Joseph Dana sold to Jonathan Pratt one-fourth of it, "standing on Samuel Barton's rights." Eliott had removed to Sutton but retained his half until 1720, when he sold to Richard Moore "one-half a saw-mill and one-half a grist-mill." Cummings owned three years and in 1736 sold to Eleazer Ward of Newton, a capable business man, who owned mills and farm. In 1750 Ward sold to his son-in-law, Ebenezer Eddy, who, 18 years later, 1768, conveyed to his son Thomas, reserving the privilege of taking water to fertilize the meadow on the west side of the 8-rod way. The next year Thomas Eddy deeded the estate to Uriah Stone and William, son of Rev. John Campbell, who in Nov., 1771, conveyed the same to John Stone of the North Gore. In Jan., 1778, Stone sold to Anthony Sigourney, who in 1792 sold to Nathan Patch of Worcester. In Patch's deed the property is described in two lots, one of 67 acres and one of six acres. The latter lot of six acres Patch probably sold to Jeremiah Learned, who deeded the same to Whitmore, and Patch in March, 1796, sold to Whitmore 53 acres adjoining the same. All details of early operations at this location are lost. There is, however, reason to believe that milling was continued here by the successive owners up to Sigourney at least.

Scythe making. On 1 April, 1793, Jeremiah Learned sold to Nathaniel Whitmore, Jr., of Sutton, six acres of land, the dwelling-house, now standing, and blacksmith shop, near the site of the Eliott mill. Whitmore put in a trip-hammer and carried on blacksmithing and scythe making until 1801, when he sold to John and Thaddeus Hall, father and son, of Sutton, who raised the dam, enlarged the shop and continued scythe making for nearly ten years. In 1810 they deeded to Jonathan Davis, who in 1811 conveyed to Amos Hudson, who in partnership with John Wait, his brother-in-law, continued the scythe business.

Cotton Spinning. As early as 1811 an interest was awakened in the town on the subject of working wool and cotton by machinery. John Hudson, Thomas Kendall, Jr., and Ephraim Edson projected a plan for the business at South Oxford, and completed a bargain with Elijah Pratt for the necessary land and water-power, but meeting with discouragement gave up the enterprise. Mr. Edson then went to Pawtucket and solicited Mr. Samuel Slater to purchase, which he subsequently did through Bela Tiffany.¹

Slater's Mill. No event in the history of the town, viewed from a business standpoint, was so far-reaching and important in its results as that of the beginning of manufacturing at South Oxford by Mr. Slater. Its immediate effect was to give the wives and daughters of the farmers what they never before had, a means of accumulating earnings outside household duties; it led the way to the introduction of other like enterprises which have added materially to the prosperity of the mother town, and it was the germ from which has grown the present thriving town of Webster. Unlike most other similar undertakings in the vicinity, this interest continued in the family ownership through a long series of years, and had a steady and continuous growth until it was classed among the wealthiest and most successful

Col., I., 464. The letter there quoted, from Bela Tiffany to him, dated 27 May, 1811, evidently describes a place Slater had not then seen. Therein Tiffany states that he had obtained a refusal of it until 20 June, and that other parties were negotiating for it. Doubtless Hudson & Co. were the other parties. They had no deed of the property but were in some manner bound and lost a considerable sum in the operation.

manufacturing concerns of the State. Its operations at South Oxford were a very small part of its later transactions, but these only, come within the scope of this work.

In the latter part of 1811 the land purchases were made, the first deed being of 6 Jan., 1812, from Elijah Pratt, and included nine and one-half acres, a dwelling house, barn, grist-mill, saw-mill and trip-hammer shop, for $3,700. The next was of 28 Jan. from Asa and Samuel Robinson, and included a farm of 203 acres with buildings, for $3,500. A third, of 4 May, from Josiah Kingsbury, included 56 acres, a house and clothiers' works, for $1,800. These embraced the territory now East Village, and all the water-power at that locality. Mr. Tiffany, who acted for Mr. Slater in purchasing, continued owner of one-sixth and was a partner in business, until Nov., 1816, when he sold to Mr. Slater. In 1812 the "Green Mill" was built, and early in 1813 machinery was put in operation. For about 12 years spinning only was done by power, all weaving having been done in the dwelling houses of the vicinage. This method was superseded by power looms about the beginning of 1825. [See power weaving.] The mill was enlarged as the increase of business demanded, and in 1832, when Webster was incorporated, contained 4,000 spindles and 100 looms, producing sheetings, thread and knitting cotton.¹

Dye House. Dye works being required as a part of the manufacture, a large house was built in 1813, and with John Tyson (who had been employed at Pawtucket) as the head, a company was formed called the "Oxford Dye House Co.," which transacted a thriving business until Mr. Tyson's decease, 1821, doing a large amount of custom dying as well as that of the Oxford and Pawtucket mills.

Woolen Mill. In 1815 an important addition was made by the erection of a woolen mill near the Green mill, and the beginning of broadcloth making under the management of Edward Howard, an Englishman, previously employed at the Merino factory. This branch also flourished until 1820, when the mill was burned. Soon after the woolen plant was removed to the present South Village site, then in Dudley.

¹ Samuel Slater was born at Belper, Eng., 9 June, 1768, learned cotton spinning of Jedediah Strutt, partner of Richard Arkwright, came at about 21 years of age to New York, was employed a few weeks in a cotton spinning establishment, but the machinery being inefficient he applied for a situation to Almy & Brown of Providence, who were experimenting at Pawtucket in the same line. Mr. Brown replied: "Almy & Brown want the assistance of a man skilled in the frame or water spinning. An experiment has been made which has failed, no person being acquainted with the business, and the frames imperfect. . . . If thy present situation does not come up to what thou wishest, and from knowledge of business can be ascertained of the advantages of the mills, so as to induce thee to come and work ours, and have the credit as well as the advantage of perfecting the first mill in America, we should be glad to engage thy care so long as it can be made profitable to both, and we can agree.

MOSES BROWN."

Slater went to Pawtucket, engaged with these men, introduced Arkwright machines of his own construction, and the first successful power spinning in America began. He was soon admitted as a partner in the firm. Later with other partners he enlarged operations at Pawtucket, building a new mill and machinery, continuing after he began business at South Oxford.

We learn something of the profits of the early manufacturers, and Mr. Slater's business tact, from the fact that in Jan., 1829, he estimated his estate at nearly a million dollars.

Town's Pond project. Another scheme originating about the same time was that of Dr. Daniel Fisk, Titus V. Shepard and others who contemplated mill operations on the west side of Town's Pond. In the hope of obtaining power a canal was dug from the pond to the swamp on the west, which had the effect to reduce the level of the water somewhat, but furnished no considerable power, and the plan was abandoned.

In 1813 the making of woolen goods at the "Merino" Village, Dudley, began, and here two Oxford men, at least, Peter Butler and Elijah Pratt, were engaged. This and the operations of Mr. Slater familiarized the people with manufacturing, and when the proposition was made in 1814 to introduce it in Oxford adventurers were readily found to join the enterprise.

Central Manufacturing Company. The first legally organized business concern was "The Central Cotton and Woolen Manufacturing Company," incorporated 17 Oct., 1814, the following, all men of moderate means, being named in the act: Daniel Fisk, John Hudson, William T. Fisk, Henry G. Learned, Joel Eddy, Daniel Eddy, Amos Hudson, Ezra Lovell of Millbury, and Sylvanus Pratt. William Craig of Auburn, John Wait and Thomas Kendall, Jr., were also of the company. Dr. Daniel Fisk, John Hudson and Amos Hudson, each acted for a time as agent, Kendall, who had been a head mechanic at the Merino factory, Dudley, was machinist, and Lovell accountant and store-keeper. The place of business was near the Eliott mill site. In Jan., 1816, Amos Hudson deeded to the company four acres of land and the water power. The mill, containing a picker, carder, roper and two spinning frames of 72 spindles each, stood about 40 rods easterly from the Worcester road. A store was added. But the times were inauspicious. The markets were full of English goods which had been kept back by the then recent war, which were being sold at rates with which small operators could not compete, and in less than three years the capital of the company had been sunk and the business suspended. The result was disastrous to the stockholders, some having been ruined financially and several were arrested for debt and imprisoned, while others absconded to avoid the enforcement of the law.

Pope & Warner. In May, 1819, Jonathan A. Pope of Rehoboth and Thomas Warner of Providence came in and continued the business. In 1822 Warren Cudworth, to whom Hudson had sold the lower privilege, built for them a weaving shop near the old grist-mill, which with ten looms went into operation in the fall of that year. The water-power proving insufficient a plan was formed to reinforce it by drawing from the Maanexit, and by agreement with Stephen Learned water was taken from above his dam and conveyed to the pond by a canal. A trench nearly half a mile in length was finished, but the project was a failure, as the gravelly soil through which the canal passed absorbed the water so that little was available.

Early in 1826 Pope and Warner dissolved partnership, Pope remaining at the old mill and Warner removing to the Joseph Stone mill, previously occupied by Cragin and Dudley. In 1828 both removed to Millbury.

Nahum Sibley. In 1826 Pope mortgaged to Abijah Davis five acres of land, the mill and two dwelling houses. In June, 1832, Davis assigned his mortgage to Nahum Sibley, who began making cotton thread, his brother Francis being partner, and later friction matches, their operations being quite limited, continuing until 14 Jan., 1837, when the mill was burned. The store had been destroyed by fire the previous year. The site has been abandoned and hardly a trace of the mill remains.

On 18 May, 1818, Amos Hudson deeded to Warren Cudworth 14 acres with buildings, at the lower site, including the old mill, blacksmith shop, etc. Cudworth operated the grist-mill ten or twelve years and it passed into the possession of Abijah Davis on a mortgage. On 1 July, 1833, the executors of Davis deeded the same to William Sigourney, who in partnership with Jasper Brown conducted here a small business at pistol making, employing Brown's brothers, Danforth and Daniel. This continued only a short time and the buildings were left to decay, the old house only now remaining. The widow of Sigourney sold the premises to Michael Toomey who sold to Jasper Brown, whose heirs are present owners.

Pratt Mills. On the east branch of the stream, a little north from the present North Oxford railroad station, Sylvanus Pratt, in 1809, built on his father's estate, H. 156, two dams near each other, and at each place a mill, the lower being the principal one, and for several years transacted a brisk business at scythe making. Later two of his apprentices, Nehemiah P. Barton and John McKnight, continued the same for about two years. In 1818 Silas Ludden, who had been an employé, took the business and made scythes at the lower shop, while Abijah Craig turned bobbins for the cotton mills at the upper one. The business declined under Ludden and later Craig occupied a part of the lower shop. In 1834 Amory Trumbull having bought the property, fitted it up for wheelwright work and occupied it until about 1860. Later Nathaniel Eddy became proprietor and in June, 1868, sold to Joseph S. Swain, who died soon after. In Jan., 1870, the estate came into the possession of Ebenezer B. Walker, who built the present dam and a large two-story building containing a grist-mill, saw-mill and wheelwright shop, adding a steam engine for auxiliary power. He operated the mills for several years and later rented them for box-making. In 1875 he died, and on 10 May, 1878, the estate passed to the ownership of Orlando C. Ward of Worcester, who leased to Warren Glover of Millbury. On 25 Oct., 1878, the building was burned, and on 10 Oct., 1880, Ward sold to William H. Marble, the present owner. Nothing has been done here since the fire.

Old Huguenot Mill. The occupants and lines of business pursued at the "Old mill" at the lower end of the Plain have been many. Its site was included in the home-lot of Jonathan Tillotson and was sold by him in 1719 with the adjacent orchard, and a "mansion house" to Ebenezer Mackee of Killingly, Conn., who soon sold to John Comins, who removed hither from Killingly and occupied the premises.¹ He was an enterprising man and much improved the estate. [See Comins.] He sold in 1726 to Josiah Cummings of Woodstock, perhaps his son, from whose possession it soon after passed into that of Ebenezer Learned and Benoni Twichell. The next proprietor was Nathaniel Patten, a cooper, of whom we can learn very little. In Dec., 1729, Patten sold to Joseph Read of Leicester, who took possession and operated the mill until 1731, when he died. In May, 1733, his heirs conveyed the whole original estate to Timothy Harris of Watertown, who with his descendants owned and occupied a part of the premises nearly 150 years. Before 1750 a saw-mill was built on the east side of the stream, the grist-mill being on the west. In 1805 Jonathan Harris sold the west part to Peleg Foster, the grist-mill at that time having been removed and clothiers' works erected instead. These works had been built a few years before by Thomas Davis, Ebenezer Humphrey and Elihu Harwood in partnership, who had leased the premises, the two latter selling out to Davis before the completion of the building, and cloth finishing had been carried on under the management of one Binney. Samuel Jewett had also been employed and managed the business in 1793. Foster continued successfully for five or six years, when he leased to Zebina Abbott of Southbridge, who occupied until July, 1814, when Foster sold to Russell Clark of Chatham, Conn. Clark continued until 1819, and returned to Connecticut, the property passing through the hands of Stearns Witt to Jeremiah Moffit, who had in 1808 purchased the saw-mill on the east side of the stream and rebuilt it. Henry Puffer then took the cloth-finishing shop as lessee, was occupant in 1820, remained two or three years and was succeeded by Welcome Green, who in partnership with Thomas Aldrich of Oxford continued the business until the death of Moffit in Dec., 1824. At the settlement of Moffit's estate the mills were bought by his sons, Jeremiah, Sumner and Rufus, who continued sawing and cloth-finishing until 1829, when they sold to Rufus Robinson. He was the first to manufacture at this place, bought the right of flowage, removed the old buildings and erected new and much larger, in which were a grist-mill, custom carding machine and cloth-finishing appliances.² To these he added machinery for the making of satinets, and began this branch with eight looms. Later, facilities for making cloths were increased. In 1836 the mill was sold to William E. Hacker of Philadelphia, Robinson continuing as manager until 1841, when he retired, and the estate was sold to Learned Davis and Col. Alexander DeWitt.

In 1842 Jonas Bacon engaged in spooling thread in a small building attached to the factory, and the saw-mill, of which Daniel Davis, Robinson's brother-in-law, had charge many years, was kept in operation, but the main mill was unoccupied until the spring of 1843 when Lyman P. Low took possession and began the manufacture of satinetts. In Oct., 1844, he received a deed of the property and for a few years was very prosperous. Desiring to increase his operations he enlarged the mill, putting in an expensive breast water-wheel, auxiliary steam power, and a quantity of new machinery. He retired in 1848 and died the next year, and the estate reverted to Davis and DeWitt. The mill was unused again until 1851, when Lyman Copeland from Rhode Island began operations, but remained only a few months and returned, taking his machinery, to Rhode Island. In April, 1852, the place was sold to Olney Bolster, who put into it a grist-mill, planing machine and other facilities for making shoe boxes, which he operated for a year or more and leased the establishment to Charles Fuller, who was then doing a large business as carpenter and builder. While thus occupied, on the 27th of May, 1856, the buildings were burned. Bolster soon after rebuilt of stone, as it now stands, adding at the east end a wood building for a grist-mill, which was operated until Warner came in, 1866. In July, 1857, Bolster sold one-half the estate to Col. DeWitt at the same time mortgaging to him the remainder.

In the spring of 1859 William and David Perry of Dudley leased the place for making stockings and stocking yarn, continuing until after May, 1861. Thereafter it was unoccupied (excepting a few months from Sept., 1861, when George Hodges used it as accessory to his mill in the manufacture of army flannels), until the spring of 1866, when Daniel Warner of Woodstock took possession and fitted it up for making cotton twine and carpet warps. This business he with his sons George and Charles and sons-in-law Joseph Dart and Albert E. Merriam, continued until 1879, when upon the settlement of Col. DeWitt's affairs the property reverted to his estate, and was sold by the executors at auction to Francis L. Chapin and Calvin D. Paige of Southbridge. In 1880 the proprietors leased the mill for five years to Samuel Perry and a partner from Southbridge, who put in machinery and began cotton spinning. They retired in less than a year and were succeeded by Parley Brown of Douglas and a partner under the name of the "Oxford Yarn Company." They in turn left after a few months, removing their machinery. In 1881 the "Pioneer Rubber Company," incorporated, Edwin H. Allen, treasurer and manager, bought Perry and Company's lease, put in machinery for finishing cotton goods for waterproof garments, and for a time did a thriving business. The lease expiring in 1885 was not renewed and the rubber business was relinquished. In 1886 the property was purchased by Nathaniel E. Taft, the present owner, who with two sets of machinery began the manufacture of fancy cassimeres under the name of "The Bernon Mills." In the winter of 1887-8 a change was made to satinets, on which the mill was operated until 26 April, 1888, when a fire occurred damaging building and machinery to a considerable extent. The mill is now, 1890, under lease and being operated on satinets by Gillespie & Sullivan. Capacity, two sets. Hands employed, 38. Production, about 300,000 yards per annum; estimated value, $95,000.

Bug Swamp Mills. The uppermost mill on Bug Swamp stream is the saw-mill on the Hudson farm, H. 168, a little over the line in Sutton, built in 1792 by John Hudson; unserviceable in dry seasons.

At the lower end of the swamp, near Lovett's, Samuel Davis had in 1788 built on his own land a saw-mill. In 1801 he sold and removed to Eddington, Maine. David Lilley, the purchaser, soon built a shop for the manufacture of scythes, which business he followed until his death in Jan., 1815. Joab Maynard succeeded him, continuing in 1816 and 1817; later, John and Lewis Lilley, sons of David, carried on the same business until the spring of 1821. For a time the premises were unoccupied. On 8 Dec., 1827, Lawton and Joseph, sons of Baxter Pratt, bought the property and put up and operated a shingle machine and also made washing machines and other household utensils, but became involved in debt and in 1830 left for parts unknown. Later Reuben Davis and Silas S. Taft occupied each a few months. For lack of water it was unfit for any permanent business, and was abandoned and with the dwelling near went to decay, and both were removed many years ago. The property is owned by Slater & Co.

"Saccarappa." The next mill below was built prior to 1792 by Joshua Stockwell, "nailmaker," from Sutton. In July, 1792, Elijah and Learned Davis, sons of Samuel, sold to him two acres and ten rods of land on the north side of the brook, including a house, blacksmith's shop and coal house, and Elisha Davis owner on the south, a half-acre adjoining, on the south side of the brook, "where Stockwell has erected his trip hammer." Stockwell (who was brother-in-law of David Lilley), and his brother Wright here manufactured scythes and nails until 1802. There were two shops and two dams; in one forging was done and in the other scythes were ground and finished.

Nails. On 27 April, 1802, Rufus Moore became owner and carried on nail making until March, 1815, when he sold the upper shop to John Kenney, Jr., of Sutton, who built the house now (1890) standing, and carried on scythe making until his decease in 1819. Moore after selling the upper shop continued nail making at a considerable outlay, at the lower site. The making of nails by machinery was then a new process. Previously they had been forged separately from rods; Moore began by cutting them with shears from plates and heading them by the old process by hand. A Mr. Morgan of Belchertown had invented or made machines which cut and headed at the same time, and in 1814 Moore bought and transported from that place one of these machines, Morgan coming to put it in operation. James Collier was the operator. Learned Davis, father-in-law of Moore, was interested in the business, and not far from 1822 became owner, continuing for about two years, and nail making was given up.

After the death of Kenney, Amasa Taft of Uxbridge made scythes for two years or more, and later Perez and Daniel Hovey for one year. On 12 Dec., 1828, the place was bought by Col. Reuben Waters, who began a brisk business at scythe making, built a new dam and shop and for several years was successful. On 18 Feb., 1833, he mortgaged to Jonas L. Sibley of Sutton who assigned to the Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of Worcester, which later sold to William Sigourney. Soon after Waters retired. Next a Mr. Schofield, employing Amos Bigelow of Sutton, made hoes for a year or two, after which no manufacturing was done. On 17 March, 1845, the place having been long deserted, William Sigourney purchased it as stated and fitted up a saw-mill and a grist-mill which were leased to different parties. Silas Putnam of Sutton, Ebenezer Fitts and Israel Peters successively lived here, having charge of the mills.¹ In 1859 Francis F. Sibley was lessee, and was followed in 1860 by Charles Lovett and Sumner Howard. But the business was small, the water-power deficient and the mills became dilapidated, and before the expiration of their lease the water wheel gave out and milling ended. About 1862 the buildings were removed and only ruins remain to tell of the former busy industries of the place. Mr. Slater holds the stream and by a large dam above, controls it as a valuable tributary to the Maanexit. [See Homestead 18.]

Elisha Davis' Saw-Mill. On the southerly branch of Mill Brook, coming from the "Robinson Reservoir," Elisha Davis built, probably as early as 1750, a saw-mill near his house, H. 14, which he and his son Nehemiah and the successive owners of the farm operated more than a hundred years. This mill was removed in 1881 by John W. Robinson. The last sawing there was in 1865.

Howarth's Mill. The site of this mill was sold by Abraham Skinner, the original proprietor, to Thomas Gleason in March, 1722. No mention is made of a mill in the deed. Gleason, a man of means, settled here, built a grist-mill and a saw-mill and died

¹ The wife of Putnam was from Saccarappa, is known, in honor of her old residence, Me. He gave the locality the name by which it

Jan., 1732, his estate including "mills and stream, with homestead and buildings." In March, 1734, Moses, his son, sold to James Coller of Uxbridge, who the next year conveyed to Jonathan Ballard of Andover, who with his son Ephraim owned and occupied until Dec., 1770, a period of 35 years. At the latter date Ephraim Ballard deeded to Amos Putnam of Sutton (brother of Gen. Rufus, the Ohio pioneer), who in March, 1779, sold to John Nichols, Sen., who owned until Nov., 1790, when he sold to his son John, who in 1801 conveyed one-half the same to his son David, who afterward became sole owner and sold in 1826 to the Oxford Woolen Manufacturing Company, the privilege and farm contiguous having been in the Nichols family about 47 years. This grist-mill was the second built in Oxford by the English and for many years was the only one in the south part of the town to be relied upon in dry seasons.

Power Weaving. The first use of this water-power for manufacturing purposes was in 1822 by Dr. Delano Pierce, son-in-law of David Nichols. During 1822 he often met Mr. Slater and discussed with him the subject of power weaving, Slater maintaining that hand looms were required for the best results, while Pierce, having knowledge of Dudley's operations at North Oxford, was positive as to the success of the new method. The result was a contract by which Pierce agreed to furnish first-class weaving at a certain price per yard. In November, in the old mill building, he began with eight looms, each producing at best 25 yards per day. Joseph Clark and Alfred Kingsbury were his overseers. The operation proved a success. Pierce realized a good profit, Slater was convinced as to machine weaving, declined to renew the contract which expired in 1824, bought Pierce's looms, removed them to his own mill and set them running, and hand-weaving of cotton in this region soon became a thing of the past.¹

"Oxford Woolen Company." A little later a company was formed for manufacturing woolen goods at this locality, and Pierce, Richard Olney, Stearns Witt and Samuel Dowse were the leaders in the scheme. During 1825 the real estate and water-power were secured, a new dam begun and the main factory building erected and brought well on toward completion. At the beginning of 1826 a change occurred, Dr. Pierce withdrew, and on 26 January a new company was formed under the following compact:—

"We, Richard Olney, Lyman Tiffany, Stearns Witt, Sylvanus Holbrook, Samuel Dowse and Alexander C. Witt, do severally agree to form ourselves into a company under the name of 'the Oxford Woolen Manufacturing Company' for the term of five years from the first day of January, A. D. 1826, for the purpose of manufacturing Woolen Goods in its various branches, and transacting any other business the stockholders may think proper."

HOWARTH'S—FORMERLY OXFORD WOOLEN COMPANY.

On the same day a deed of the real estate was executed by David Nichols running to this company. During 1826 the mill building erected by Collins and Rufus Moore of Dudley was completed, the breast water-wheel and the fulling-mills were finished by Israel Sibley, and under the charge of William F. Morgan, during the fall and winter of 1826-7, machinery was set up and put in operation. In the spring of 1827 two sets of cards were running and five houses, including the old Nichols house, were standing on the premises. In 1828 the boarding-house and other dwellings were built by Willard and Daniel Underwood of Pomfret, Conn. In the latter part of 1827 an addition was made to the mill, and early in 1828 another set of cards added, increasing the producing capacity one-third.¹

On 28 Feb., 1828, the company was incorporated with power to hold real estate to the amount of $50,000, and personal property to the amount of $150,000, and on 24 Oct., 1828, the old partnership, consisting of Sylvanus Holbrook, Stearns Witt, Samuel Dowse, Richard Olney, Alexander C. Witt and William F. Morgan (who had bought, 3 April, 1827, one-twelfth), sold for $50,000 all their real and personal estate to the new company. The corporation organized 1 Aug., 1828, with Richard Olney President, Alexander C. Witt Clerk, Richard Olney Treasurer, and Stearns Witt Agent.² A code of by-laws was adopted 7 Jan., 1829. On 5 Jan., 1830, a dividend was declared amounting to $2,715, being "all moneys that the shares may have cost over 1,000 dollars each." The later dividends were as follows: 1832, $7,500; 1833, $7,080; 1834, $12,720, "being the remainder of the original stock paid in, with interest"; 1835, $6,000; 1836, "10 per cent. on the capital stock," being $6,000; 1837, $6,000, which was the last dividend recorded. Stearns DeWitt was continued agent until Jan., 1836, when Sylvanus Holbrook was chosen, and continued until 1840, when DeWitt was again elected for the year. In Jan., 1841, Dexter W. Jones, having become a stockholder, was chosen agent, continuing until Nov., 1845. At a meeting of the company on the 17th of that month Peter C. Bacon was empowered to make sale of all its property, real and personal, and on 1 Jan. 1846, the mill and other real estate passed into the possession of Geo. Hodges, Jr.

Stearns DeWitt was prominent among the men of this company for enterprise and executive ability. He had strong common sense, and inherited from his Scotch ancestry a shrewdness and faculty to judge of men, and to profit by their best qualities, which fitted him to organize and conduct successfully such an undertaking. He moved quietly and cautiously, and in the main, wisely, and brought together an excellent set of men as managers of the different departments of a business which demanded much skill and judgment. In Mr. Morgan he had a thoroughly practical supervisor to whom he confided all the details of the mill, and to conduct the several branches under him were found artisans, chiefly residents of the vicinity, who interested themselves in the success of the enterprise and gave to it their best efforts.¹

For several years the office of the company was at the rooms over the Witt and Dowse store on the Plain, and payments to employés were made largely in goods from that establishment. In 1829 Benjamin F. Campbell bought into the store and the office of the company was removed to the village. Gradually the designs of DeWitt were being realized at the mill. Robinson by his skill at carding had succeeded in producing a mixture, new and desirable, which became very popular in the trade as "Oxford Mixed." At Boston and Philadelphia exhibitions medals were repeatedly awarded for these and other fine productions, their goods became well known in the market, sold freely at good profits, and the credit of the concern stood very high. An important appendage to the manufacturing was the large farm, which was for a time under the charge of Silas Cummings of Douglas, and later of Amos Johnson. Two large barns stood at the entrance to the village, and these were filled yearly with the products of the adjacent fields; the tables of the boarding-house were furnished largely from the farm, and the fat cattle and swine produced annually won the admiration of the farmers of the town.

While affairs were thus moving in a very prosperous manner, Mr. Olney, for some reason desiring a change, proposed to buy of DeWitt his interest. DeWitt, although not wishing to sell, fixed a price at which he would do so, and at the annual meeting in Jan., 1836, a bargain was closed and he left the concern. Sylvanus Holbrook succeeded him, and for a few months affairs progressed as usual. But a change soon came. The close oversight which had been bestowed on every operation was relaxed, the quality of the goods deteriorated, and the reverses of 1837 coming on they were piled up in storehouses and later sold at a loss. The finances became involved, and at the end of Holbrook's administration in 1840 the bankruptcy of the company seemed imminent. To add to the troubles it was found that during the season of prosperity the laws of the State regarding corporations had not been duly observed, and consequently the private

The accountants were in 1826, Alexander C. Witt; 1827 and 1828, Edmund F. Dixie from Marblehead; a few months in 1829, Benjamin F. Campbell; latter part of 1829 and for 1830, Wilson Olney; 1831, 1832, Alvan G. Underwood; 1833, for most of the year, Charles Dowse, Underwood having bought into the store on the Plain; from Nov., 1833, to 1842, Alvan G. Underwood; and later Wilson Olney and Stearns property of each stockholder was holden to pay the debts of the concern. The liabilities of the company were discharged in full, but it was done at a serious loss to the individual owners.

DeW. Harris. Evans Ryan of Sturbridge had charge of wool-sorting; William E. Stebbins, Stephen Collins and John Ryan successively were dyers; Sylvanus Robinson carder and spinner; Elijah Pratt was first weaver, and Rufus Harris and Alfred Kingsbury followed him. Justin Root first fuller, succeeded by James Miller. Mr. Morgan first finisher, followed by James Miller, Henry Dilaby and Oliver Freeman, successively. The grist-mill was kept in operation under the charge of Amos Johnson, later miller at the City Mills, Boston. The boarding-house was kept by Alexander C. Thurston, Nathaniel Brown, Charles Lamb and Ira Merriam, successively.

DeWitt regretted the sale of his interest. To this enterprise he had given for ten years the best of his energies. A large, thriving business and a beautiful village had arisen under his supervision; in the corps of faithful employes were personal friends, and in the whole he had taken a befitting pride. The dropping of this from his life was a change which affected his spirits and his health suffered seriously in consequence. The year 1840, in which he was reinstated as agent, showed little improvement, and neither his efforts or those of his successor, Mr. Jones, could retrieve the ill fortunes of the past. The sale of the estate, 1 Jan., 1846, closed the operations of the company.

George Hodges carried on the single line of fine flannel making here successfully from his purchase in 1846, 35 years, until his decease in 1881. Average production at highest point, 12,000 yards per week.

Andrew Howarth became the proprietor of the establishment in 1882 and is, in 1890, continuing successfully in the same line. The present capacity of the mill is five sets; yards of flannel produced, 2,100 per day; average value, 17 cents; annual production, estimated, $110,000; hands employed, 52. [See Howarth.]

The following appeared in the New York Times for 1 Dec., 1884:—

From the New York Dry Goods Importer.

"At various times the question has come up, Who made the first flannel in the United States? but it has never been successfully answered as yet, that it was made on hand looms and home spun there can be no doubt. And as it was not necessary to send such flannels to any mill to be finished it will be at this late day difficult to trace out who was the original maker of this material. 'Away down East' it used to be common to make and use what were called there 'woolen sheets.' They were home-made, the yarn, both warp and filling, being hard-twisted, and, when woven, they were simply washed out and worn in that condition, there being no nap raised on them. But the question now is, 'Who made the first flannel?' And in reply to this query we once received the following from a 'Veteran': 'Now it is in the memory of people living in and around North Andover, of a certain old lady who came to this country from Rochdale, England, 60 years ago or more. She went by the name of Dolly Howarth, and, if my information is correct, she was the first to weave a piece of genuine wool flannel in New England, if not in America.' If such be the case, I think it is nothing but right and just that the credit be given to her and be recorded in the archives of Massachusetts. She had a grandson living a year or so ago and he may be living yet. His name is Andrew Howarth. He has been connected with flannel manufacture all his life and the last the writer heard of him he was running a flannel mill with his son in Vermont. If Mr. Howarth, who is now getting along in years, could be induced to write what he knows about the matter, I think he could throw considerable light upon it."

On the foregoing Mr. Howarth remarks :—

“ ‘Dolly,’ or Dorothy ‘Howarth,’ spoken of, was an aunt of mine by marriage, having been the wife of my uncle James Howarth. She was among the first workers at flannel making at Andover, but was only a spinner and not a weaver. The first fine finished flannels made in the country, so far as my knowledge goes, were made by my said uncle James in partnership with his brothers, Charles (my father) and Isaac. These all came, bringing skilled workmen with them, spinners, weavers and finishers, in 1826 from Rochdale, the home in England of the flannel manufacture, to Andover, where they started the first mill with 27 hand looms operated by men. Precisely who was the weaver of the first flannel probably can never be known, but the credit of the first manufacture of the article as a business belongs, I think, to James, Charles and Isaac Howarth. Another manufacturer was early at Andover, but produced only coarse goods.”

Buffumville. The site of this village was sold unimproved in 1793 by Samuel Danforth and Elijah Dunbar to John Nichols and his grandsons, Alexander and Jonathan Nichols, “183 acres, partly in Charlton and partly in Oxford.” In 1795 John Nichols deeded his third to his son John, who in 1811 sold to his sons Alexander and Jonathan, they thus becoming sole owners. In 1812 they built a dam and a saw-mill, in 1815 the two-story house at the south end of the village, and in 1818 a grist-mill.

Scythe making. A year or two previous to the building of the grist-mill they erected a large blacksmith shop, containing two trip-hammers, which was first occupied by Sylvanus Pratt for making scythes and for custom blacksmithing. Later, Joab Maynard was proprietor and continued scythe making. In 1821 James Farwell of Douglas leased the shop and grist-mill, continuing scythe making and blacksmithing, employing Israel Moore and Ebenezer Fitts with others. In April, 1823, his lease expired. Alexander Nichols died the same month, and the following June, seven-eighths, and in Nov. one-eighth of the shop, mill, house and 29 acres of land were sold to Stearns Witt.

Thread making. In April, 1824, Witt conveyed three-fourths of the same to his brothers, Hollis, Archibald and Alexander C., and these, under the firm of “Stearns Witt and Brothers,” soon began the manufacture of cotton thread in the upper part of the grist-mill. In 1824 Witt and Brothers sold one-third of the water power, the scythe shop and four acres of land south of the river to Farwell, who resumed scythe making, expending several thousand dollars in improvements, including the building of three houses, and the purchase, Feb., 1826, of Pierpont meadow of 58 acres and other property below it for a reservoir, and after two or three years was obliged to retire. In 1830 the real estate reverted to the Thread Company.¹

Col. Reuben Waters of Sutton with one Davis, as partner, next occupied the shop as scythe makers. They remained but a short time and were succeeded by Joseph Putnam and J. Flint Taylor in partnership. In 1832 Hunt Brothers of Douglas made axes here for Waters & Davis, and were the last occupants. Soon after this date the shops were removed to make room for the enlargement of the thread factory. The main thread manufactory was erected in 1825 and contained 600 spindles, and as business increased additions were made until the dimensions of the building were about 100 by 40 feet, two stories. Before June, 1832, Samuel Dowse and Benjamin F. Campbell had become part owners. About one year later Mr. Harrison, an Englishman and a skillful mechanic, was admitted as a partner.¹ Under his management machinery for spooling, brought from England, was introduced and Litchfield brothers, of late shuttle makers at Southbridge, furnished spools.

In 1835 Elias B. Crawford came, and for a time made spools, but later was interested in the thread business which was continued under the firm of DeWitt, Campbell & Co., Alexander DeWitt being agent until after May, 1836, and succeeded by Benjamin F. Campbell, who continued until 25 May, 1842, when the mill was burned and business suspended. On 20 Sept. following, Stearns DeWitt conveyed to Crawford three-fourths of the estate, including "Pierpont," with the personal property of the old company. Crawford continued the making of thread in a shop near the site of the mill, and 24 April, 1845, Dowse having deceased, his widow deeded to him the one-fourth belonging to that estate. He then began the building of the present mill of brick, and had nearly completed it 1 July, 1847, when he sold to Charles L. Harding, who fitted it up for the manufacture of broad-cloths and doeskins. This manufacture Harding continued with varied success until Dec., 1852, when he sold to Moses Buffum and Edward Thayer, both of Millville. In 1855 Thayer sold to Buffum and removed to Worcester. In 1863 Moses H., and in 1868 Charles H., sons of Mr. Buffum, were admitted as partners, and a thriving business was transacted until his death in 1874. His heirs are the present owners. In 1872 the building was much enlarged and improved and now contains four sets of machinery, with a capacity of 15,000 yards per month, employing 60 operatives.²

Sigourney Mill. The first trace we find of this property in the records was the purchase of it, 22 Aug., 1812, by Joseph Stone from Aaron Sibley, administrator of the estate of his father, Aaron. According to tradition Sibley built a grist-mill here in 1794, the stones of which were brought from Cape Cod, and had been used in a windmill which stood on the Jesse Eddy farm on Prospect Hill. The dam had been washed away in the freshets of the winter of 1806-7, and rebuilt by Sibley. Stone rebuilt the mill, adding

² The large house on the Charlton road was built by Stephen Prince, Jr., but never occupied by him. It was sold in March, 1833, to the Thread Company, and was later the residence of Benjamin F. Campbell, Elias B. Crawford, Charles Harding and Col. Moses Buffum.

wool-carding and scythe grinding (in which he employed Amos Eddy), and operated carding machine and grist-mill until the close of 1821. In Jan., 1822, John Andrews of Douglas leased the place and began the first weaving of cotton on the power loom done in Oxford, operating six or eight looms, continuing for one year.¹

In 1823 Benjamin Cragin and William Dudley, both of Douglas, succeeded Andrews, continuing until March, 1826, at which time Thomas Warner, having dissolved partnership with Jonathan A. Pope at the "Central" mill place, began on a lease and continued the spinning of cotton until the autumn of 1828. On 1 April, 1830, Asa Cutler and Joseph Stafford, in partnership, leased the mill and carried on a very prosperous business until the end of 1831. William K. Greene of Rhode Island succeeded them, with whom was associated in 1832-3 Robert D. Dorrance. In Aug., 1833, Ebenezer Henry of Northbridge and John A. Henry of West Boylston, brothers, bought the estate, "factory, three houses and a store," and began the manufacture of cotton batting. On 15 April, 1835, Ebenezer Henry of Oxford and Frederick Purinton of Northbridge conveyed the property to Edward Denny, who, in partnership with Hiram A. Pettibone, fitted up the mill with new machinery and began the making of fine satinets, under the firm of H. A. Pettibone & Co. In 1838 the establishment was very much improved, the old mill was removed and fitted for dwellings and a new one built in its place for cotton manufacture. In 1842 it was leased by Charles Lawton, who made a good quality of cotton sheetings for one year. In Sept., 1843, Denny sold the mill to Waterman A. Fisher, previously of Killingly, Conn. Benedict & Drury of Millbury operated it as lessees in 1847, and from 1849 to 1851 Jonathan Williams & Co. had possession. On 22 May, 1852, the mill was burned, and in 1853 was rebuilt of stone, as now standing, and called Phenix mill. Horatio G. Sanford of Worcester took a lease of the new mill and operated it on knit goods, stockinet, etc., until 1856, when Fisher took possession and manufactured cotton goods until his failure in 1857. In 1854 Elias B. Crawford occupied the basement as a twine factory. After Fisher's failure the property passed into the hands of his brother Erastus, who on 16 Jan., 1865, sold to Joseph Burrough and Edwin Bartlett. It was operated with the other mills of Burrough & Bartlett and sold with them to O. F. Chase & Co., from whom it passed, in Nov., 1885, to Edwin Bartlett, who is, 1890, proprietor. Until 1867 this mill was run on cotton sheetings; at that date a change

A power loom was invented in England in 1785. In 1811 Francis C. Lowell went thither to investigate. In 1831 he with Nathan Appleton and another formed a company for operations at Waltham, and soon began spinning and weaving. The crank loom, superior to that used by Lowell, was a Scotch invention introduced in Rhode Island by William Gilmore under the patronage of Judge Lyman in 1817. It came thence into this vicinity, and, as appears, to Oxford through Douglas, or men from that town.

Rockdale Mill. The Oxford Cotton Manufacturing Company was the second legalized concern in Oxford for manufacturing purposes.¹ On 28 Dec., 1814, the privilege, 16 acres with water-power, was bought of Joseph Stone, it being the upper portion of the Aaron Sibley grist-mill property. On 13 June, 1815, an act was passed incorporating the company, as follows: Charles Cleaveland, Jacob Rich of Charlton, Joseph Stone, William P. Rider of Charlton, Sylvanus Coburn, Jonathan Rice, Benjamin Eddy, Samuel Watson, 2d, of Leicester, Israel Stone, Jr., of Ward, Thaddeus Hall, Sylvester McIntire, Elijah Waters of Millbury, Jeremiah Stone, William Hall of Northbridge and Elijah Rich. Samuel Harris, Benjamin Benson, and Joseph Farnsworth of Millbury were also of the company. Operations began in May, 1814, before the purchase of the estate. Cleaveland was chief manager and during the summer and autumn of 1815 the dam, the factory building and two two-story houses were built. But the limited capital was soon expended, and in a year or two all operations ceased. The losses were serious to many of the stockholders and some absented themselves to avoid arrest for debt. Later, Samuel D., Joseph E. and Charles B. Elliott, brothers, of Leicester, came into possession and continued cotton spinning. In April, 1823, Charles B. Elliott of Oxford and Joseph E. Elliott of Leicester sold their interest to Samuel D. Elliott of Oxford, who continued till Jan., 1825, when he sold to Calvin Leffingwell, Charles Preston and Asa Cutler, previously partners at the present Attawaugan, Conn. They were practical men and began the first power weaving at this locality. In Aug., 1825, Willard Arnold from Providence, who had previously lived in town, bought one-fifth, and in Sept. John Truesdell of Woodstock another fifth of the concern. The next Jan. Thomas W. Chapman of Thompson, Conn., became owner of one-fifth, Arnold at the same time purchasing another fifth. At about this time the concern assumed the name of "The French River Manufacturing Company." In March, 1826, Arnold was agent. The following September Leffingwell sold to Arnold and Cutler. In Jan., 1828, Truesdell bought a part of Chapman's interest, and in 1829 was taxed for one-fourth. Before 1830 a machine shop and several dwellings had been built. One after another the proprietors sold their shares to Arnold, Cutler in Jan., 1830, selling three-eighths and Truesdell all his interest in Nov., 1831, at which time Arnold became sole owner. He died Jan., 1832, and on 1 Oct., following, Ahab Arnold, his father, deeded the estate, "mill of 1,320 spindles," ¹This enterprise was projected by Abisha Learned and Joseph Stone as early as 1812, and considerable progress had been made in preparatory work at Texas Village, then owned by

to Col. Samuel Damon of Holden. At same date Damon deeded to Phinehas T. Bartlett and Thomas W. Chapman, and thereafter the business was conducted under the name of "Bartlett, Chapman & Co." until Dec., 1833, when Chapman sold to Damon and Bartlett.¹ This firm continued, making cotton cloths, with Bartlett as agent, until 1 April, 1845, when he sold to Damon and retired. For a time in 1845 Henry A. Naglee was manager, and later George Hobart had charge until 1853, when Col. Damon died. On 18 March, 1853, while under Hobart, the mill was burned. On 20 Aug. Damon's heirs sold to Waterman A. Fisher, who removed the machine shop to the mill-site and began twine making, "E. M. Smith & Co." being the firm name until 1857. In 1859 Fisher was operating the mill on twine.

After Fisher's failure in 1857 the estate passed to his brother Erastus, who in 1864 sold to Edwin Bartlett, "factory, 7 houses and 2 barns." Later the estate was owned by Burrough and Bartlett, and 20 Feb., 1880, was reconveyed to Bartlett, who now, 1890, owns and operates the mill on cotton warps and yarns. Number of spindles, 2,300; hands employed, 22; the estimated value of the annual production in this and the Sigourney mill combined, $125,000.

Acworth Mill. The site of this mill was sold in 1752 by Ebenezer Coburn to William Lamb, and later was owned by Lamb and Joseph Rocket in partnership. In making a division of this property Rocket received the west part and a saw-mill and yard on the river. This he deeded, 30 Aug., 1762, to Benjamin Davis, who in Sept., 1763, conveyed the same to Phinehas Ward. In Jan., 1764, Ward deeded to Ebenezer Learned, Jr., "a saw-mill standing on . . . French river, with the privilege of the dam, and liberty of the waters running in the ditch to the said mill, with a piece of land about half an acre for a mill yard." In April, 1764, Davis and Lamb quitclaimed to Learned as follows:—

"all their right in and to the stream and rocks in the river in Oxford, in the farm they had of Joseph Rocket, and since we have sold all on the west side to Daniel Phillips and to others all on the east side, the river and privileges thereof not included, and whereas the said Learned owns a saw-mill on said river and the stones and privileges of the stream will be of advantage to him and as his land joins upon it, etc."

Here for many years, excepting when in the public service, Gen. Learned managed his saw-mill. In June, 1799, he sold 24 acres, including, as supposed, the Phillips house, to Thomas Parker.

In April, 1802, Gen. Learned having died, Sylvanus, his son and executor, sold at auction the saw-mill "near the house of Thomas Parker" to Andrew Sigourney. It later came into the possession of Parker, who in Oct., 1811, deeded the "Phillips place" 76 acres with the saw-mill to Sylvanus Pratt, who built a blacksmith shop with two tilt-hammers and dug the canal from the pond, now in use, and for a time manufactured scythes. In April, 1814, he sold to Abijah Abbott and Jonathan Rice, brother-in-law of Pratt, who continued the making of scythes. Abbott sold 7 April, 1817, to Rice, who continued blacksmithing in its various branches until 1831, and returned to Millbury. On 5 Feb., 1831, Rice sold to Asa Cutler and Joseph Stafford (to Cutler two-thirds), 34 acres of land with water-power and buildings. They at once built on the site of the present mill a stone factory 84 by 37 feet, three stories, for making print cloths. In 1831 Cutler sold one-fourth to George Torrey, his brother-in-law, of Killingly, Conn., who removed hither and was overseer in the mill.

In 1833 Cutler sold to Joseph Rogers of Providence one-fourth, and in 1837 the mill was taken on a five years' lease by Rogers and a partner who continued making print cloths for Providence market. On 20 March, 1839, the mill was partially burned and soon after Cutler came again to town, rebuilt it, and, about 1843, erected the large dwelling house east of the mill, burned in 1883. On 1 Oct., 1839, Cutler and Torrey bought out Stafford, and continued until Nov., 1843, when Torrey retired. On 1 May, 1844, the firm was Cutler & Rogers. On 1 July, 1846, Cutler & Rogers sold each one-eighth to Thomas Moies and Theophilus W. Wilmarth. On 1 April, 1847, Cutler sold another eighth to the same and removed to Putnam, Conn. Moies and Wilmarth continued about ten years, when Moies sold to Rogers and Wilmarth, who under the name of "Protection Mills, Joseph Rogers & Co.," built a new dam and continued until early in 1864, when Rogers sold five-eighths to John Rhodes of Millbury, and the firm became Rhodes & Wilmarth. On 1 July, 1870, Wilmarth sold to Rhodes, who became sole owner. The mill was nearly destroyed by fire 22 Sept., 1870, and soon rebuilt in its present condition. The old mill contained 64 looms. The present one, with new machinery, was operated on yarns by Rhodes until 10 May, 1888, when it was purchased by Frank E. Lancaster of Worcester, present owner and occupant. Capacity, 4,000 spindles; hands employed, 43; estimated value of annual production, being yarns and warps, $100,000.

Lamb Mill. At the second 60-acre division of lands among the proprietors, 12 Dec., 1720, John Town drew lot No. 30. On 1 March, 1735, he deeded to Caleb Lamb of Pomfret, Conn., what is supposed to have been the same. Lamb sold, 29 April, 1736, to Jacob Cummings "with a saw-mill thereon," undoubtedly built by Lamb. In 1742 Cummings deeded the same to Samuel Baker of Ashford, joiner, who built a grist-mill, and 3 Oct., 1749, sold it with two dwelling houses and 35 acres of land to John and Joseph Edwards. These added clothiers' works and carried on milling and cloth dressing. On 30 May, 1760, Joseph Edwards sold the west part to Asa Conant, who continued the clothiers' business, having in his deed "full liberty to carry on clothing business on the east side of the river, where the fulling-mill and shop now stand." In 1765 Edwards deeded to Conant the remaining portion, being 44 acres of land, dwelling, barn and corn-mill. Timothy Sparhawk, son-in-law of Conant, lived near the mill and conducted the business after Conant's decease in 1810, and later Chester Boyden of Ward managed for a time, employing Peleg Foster, and was the last to do cloth dressing at this locality.

In March, 1766, Conant sold the corn-mill, a house, shop and barn and six acres of land, chiefly west of the river, to Jonathan Phillips, reserving the clothier's works. On 21 June, 1769, Phillips deeded the same to Reuben Lamb, who operated the grist-mill (adding also a malt-house) for many years. On 12 Feb., 1812, he sold to his son, Joseph Lamb, and Stephen Atwood a lot 20 x 26 feet, south of the road, on which to set a shop, with the privilege of water-power, also the "Malt house lot" of six square rods. At about the same time Sparhawk deeded to these land and use of water-power. Lamb and Atwood erected a building and began chair making by machinery, continuing two or three years.

In 1814 Reuben Lamb sold to his son Joseph "one-half the pond room, the benefit of the dam and liberty to take water to the grist-mill, reserving to Atwood one-half the stream and the spot for the chair shop." In 1822 Joseph Lamb sold to his nephew, Cyrus Lamb, the mill property, and soon after opened the tavern on a part of the estate near the mill. In 1824 Atwood, then of Merrimac, N. H., deeded to Cyrus Lamb his rights, thus giving to Cyrus the full ownership. He was a millwright, a skillful mechanic and in addition to milling carried on to some extent machine making and repairing, until 7 Jan., 1832, when the mills were burned.¹

In 1874 the heirs of Cyrus Lamb sold the privilege, it having then stood unused for over 40 years, to Nathaniel E. Taft, present owner, who built and operated a shoddy mill, and, 1890, enlarged the buildings and put in machinery, one set, for making satinets, and also added a dyeing establishment. He employs 22 hands, produces 800 yards of satinets per day; estimated value per annum, $24,000.

Texas Mills. These mills are in the eastern portion of the large estate bought in 1754 by Ebenezer Learned and Edward Davis of the heirs of Robert Thompson, original township grantee. The water-power descended to Gen. Ebenezer Learned and to his son Sylvanus, who in 1803 built here a dam and a saw-mill. In 1810 the estate was bought by Abisha, son of Sylvanus, Joseph Stone having been associated with him in the mill. This saw-mill was operated by

In the winter of 1840-1 the dam and a building which stood below it were swept away by high water.

Learned until his decease in 1854, and afterward by his heirs and later owners, until its removal, its last occupant having been Joseph S. Swain in 1868.

In 1831 Learned built a four-story stone mill 100 by 40 feet, which in May, 1832, he leased to Edward Denny of Oxford and Henry B. Stone of Boston, for making broadcloths.¹ On 13 March, 1833, the new mill, three sets of machinery, was burned, but was immediately rebuilt, and the manufacture of broadcloths under the name of the "Denny Manufacturing Company," continued until March, 1836, when Denny retired. Robert Appleton and Montgomery Newell, both of Boston, having bought the lease continued the business until the latter part of 1839, Capt. Stearns DeWitt having been their agent, when their operations terminated. Afterward little was done for several years. In 1841 a company consisting of Abisha Learned, Asa Cutler and George Torrey, "their associates and successors," was incorporated under the name of the "North Oxford Manufacturing Company," but no progress seems to have been made under this arrangement. In 1843 a second company was organized consisting of Abisha Learned, who was the principal stockholder, Jasper R. Rand of Westfield, his brother-in-law, and Lucius O. Ackley, with a nominal capital of $30,000. Preparations began in Aug., 1843, and in the spring of 1844 the mill was started on fine cotton goods. On 18 Sept., 1844, Learned conveyed to the company real estate as follows: the stone factory, store, seven dwelling houses and other buildings, with ten acres of land. The capacity of the mill was 60 looms. Rand was treasurer and Ackley agent, the latter continuing as manager until 25 Feb., 1847, when he retired and Abisha Learned succeeded him for one year, Joseph Brown, 3d, being supervisor under him. In Feb., 1848, Loren C. Parks, who had been for several years overseer in various departments, bought one-third of the concern and assumed the management, Learned, Rand and Parks then constituting the company. The business continued thus, Parks manufacturing by the yard, until 8 Oct., 1850, when the mill was burned and operations suspended.²

On 1 Dec., 1862, Betsey, widow of Abisha Learned, and Elizabeth R., his daughter, deeded the water-power, saw-mill, nine houses, a store and two stone shops to Chamberlin & Burrough. In 1864 the same went into the possession of Burrough & Bartlett, and in 1870 of O. F. Chase & Co. On 10 Feb., 1882, Oscar F. Chase and Edwin Bartlett conveyed the same to Frederick Thayer, the present owner, who did not immediately occupy. In 1886, after a period of 35 years, business in the village was revived, and a large brick mill erected, which is now, 1890, being operated by Mr. Thayer on and sheds, and 5 acres of land," Learned retaining the saw-mill.

satinets. A considerable addition was made to the mill in 1887; present capacity, six sets; number of hands employed, 140; annual production, 800,000 yards; estimated value, $240,000.

North Oxford Optical Works. As early as Sept., 1844, Henry M. Paine in a shop near the Texas mill site began the manufacture of spectacles and philosophical instruments. In 1845 a company was formed under the name of the "North Oxford Optical Works," and with a large outlay for machinery and experimenting, began operations under the management of Phineas T. Bartlett, who was the principal capitalist. At the close of the year 1846 the company was embarrassed financially, and Mr. Bartlett took the assets and wound up its affairs. Later Francis Clark and son carried on pistol and rifle making, repairing, etc., at this place for a time. Thereafter until 1886 the water-power was unimproved.

Chase Mills, No. 2. These mills, the lowest two at North Oxford, stand on the original home lot of Ebenezer Learned, who as early as 1728, according to tradition, built here a saw-mill, which was operated by himself, his son and grandsons for a hundred years. The last survivor of his grandsons, Jeremiah Learned, died in 1829. In March, 1830, his administrator sold the home farm, 275 acres, with the mill, through a third party, to Sylvester McIntire, who soon conveyed it to Capt. Stephen Barton. On 17 Aug., 1833, Barton deeded to his sons Stephen and David 25 acres of the same, including mill and water-power. The Barton brothers were energetic men, and for several years transacted a large business in lumber. Soon after their purchase they built in the rear of the saw-mill a grist-mill, a part of which was after a short time utilized as a satinet manufactory, they in partnership with Parsons brothers running it on a contract for Sylvanus Holbrook of Northbridge, who stocked the concern, one run of stones being in the meantime operated in the grist-mill. This mill was burned 17 March, 1839. It was at once rebuilt and leased to Royal Chapin of Providence and Orsamus Taft of Uxbridge for cotton manufacturing, who occupied in 1849. Later, Waterman A. Fisher was lessee and was occupant 10 March, 1852, when the second mill was burned. The present one, of stone, 108 by 40 feet, three stories, with an L 150 by 28 feet, was soon after erected by Barton brothers, and leased to Mr. Fisher, who continued cotton business until his failure in 1857, William C. Tucker having been superintendent until 1855, and Thomas Harrington afterward.

The lower mill was built by Stephen and David Barton in 1848, and leased with the upper one to Fisher. On 22 Jan., 1856, it was burned, and 1 Oct., 1856, Henry D. Stone of Worcester bought the whole estate. The following winter he rebuilt, 80 by 60 feet, two stories, at the lower site, Otis Learned having been the contractor, and the new mill was filled with six sets of new wool machinery. Stone failed soon after, and on 26 July, 1858, his assignees deeded the estate, one-half to Henry H. Chamberlin of Worcester, and one-half to Edward H. Tower of Boston and John A. McGaw of Oxford. Business began under the name of Chamberlin, McGaw & Co., the cotton mill with 100 looms being started as soon as practicable. After a few months Tower sold out to Joseph Burrough. The woolen mill was started in the spring of 1859, and on 1 Feb., 1860, McGaw sold to Chamberlin and Burrough. In 1861 the cotton machinery was sold from the upper mill and woolen machinery placed instead, and the mills were operated together on fancy cassimeres.

On 1 Dec., 1864, Chamberlin sold to Burrough and Edwin Bartlett, and the firm became Burrough & Bartlett. This company became the proprietors of the four lower mills at North Oxford and of the Texas Village, so called, and continued cotton and woolen manufacturing with varied success (E. Harris Howland having been for a time associated with them under the name of the "Huguenot Manufacturing Company"), until 10 Jan., 1870, when one-third of the property was sold to Oscar F. Chase, and the firm became O. F. Chase & Co. On 19 Sept., 1874, Burrough retired, selling his interest to the company. On 1 March, 1880, Bartlett conveyed his interest in the Huguenot Mills, 100 acres and buildings, to Oscar F. Chase. They were occupied on a lease by Briggs brothers of North Adams until April, 1881, and later, until Dec., 1885, by Haines, Maxwell & Hallowell, who in 1886 were succeeded as lessees by Learned, Howard & Co., Oscar F. Chase being an active member of the firm. In the spring of 1887 this firm dissolved.

John Chase & Sons of Webster now, 1890, own and operate the mills, producing fancy cassimeres. Capacity of both mills, nine sets; hands employed, 170; annual production, 190,000 yards; estimated value, $370,000.¹

Stone's Mills. The water-power near Leicester line was first utilized by Uriah Stone, who purchased in 1754, and built there a dam and a saw-mill. In 1807 Luther, son of Uriah, Jr., in partnership with his uncle Samuel, built at the same location a new saw-mill, adding a grist-mill. These they operated together until the decease of Samuel in 1820, after which Luther bought his rights and continued the business until Oct., 1848, when the mills were burned. He then built at a new location a few rods lower on the stream, and continued milling until his decease in 1853, after which the property came into the possession of his grandson, William H. Rice. On 15 April, 1854, Rice deeded to William B. Field and James Shaw of Andover. On 29 Oct., 1859, Field sold to Isaac B. Hartwell "the mill lot" of five acres. Hartwell sold the same 21 Nov., 1863, to William B. Field of Stow, who soon sold one-half to Shaw of Ballardvale. They, in 1865, removed the grist-mill, erected a small factory and began making flannels. This building was burned 19 April, 1872, and for nearly ten years the place was unoccupied. In 1880-81 the present mill was built by Mr. Shaw who soon after died. On 31 May, 1881, his heirs conveyed the mill, machinery, etc., and five acres of land to Reuben Cummings of Troy, N. Y., and Edward I. Comins of Worcester, firm of E. I. Comins & Co., who have since operated it for making satinets, running two sets of machinery, and employing 35 hands; production in 1889, 394,000 yards.

Rich's Mills. According to tradition Thomas Davis, in 1747, built a grist-mill on his farm, now Chaffee heirs, H. 15, one mile east of Main Street. In 1782 his heirs sold to Jeremiah, son of Elisha Davis, who operated it during his life. After his decease Capt. Ebenezer Rich of Sutton, in 1824, bought the property. The mill was operated for several years by Rich, but became dilapidated and after a time was removed, and for many years the water-power was unimproved.

On 11 June, 1847, Capt. Rich deeded one-half the water-privilege and half an acre of land to Ivers A. Davis, who in partnership with Rich erected a saw-mill, which Davis and George L., son of Ebenezer Rich, operated together. In 1852 Davis sold back his interest to Ebenezer Rich. George L. soon after added a grist-mill. In 1857 the mills with the farm were leased, and one-half the farm sold, to George L., who died soon after. In 1858 Ebenezer D. Rich, his brother, bought his share of the property, took possession, rebuilt the mills and operated them successfully until March, 1884, when farm and mills were sold to Abel M. Chaffee, who made radical improvements, adding a cider-mill. Chaffee's heirs continue, 1890, the milling.

Gates' Mills. In 1845 Hiram Moffit, then owner of the estate, H. 79, built a dam and, about 20 rods below, a grist-mill, which he operated about two years, and sold with the farm to John Gates, who continued milling until 1858. That year he removed the mill-stones and rented the building for five years to Thomas Ashworth and partners, Day, Peal and Jones, who put in machinery and began the manufacture of shoddy, continuing to the end of their lease, when they removed. Benajah, Clovis and Dennis S. B., sons of John Gates, then occupied the building for the same purpose for six years. Later the mill stood idle, until Aug., 1870, when it was burned. A small saw-mill was built in 1871 on the site and run for several years, and was removed. Nothing has been done there since.

In 1852 Gates brothers built nearer the dam another small mill for the manufacture of wicking and batting. This was burned 24 Jan., 1854. In 1858 Luke White, son-in-law of Gates, built on the spot a grist-mill, putting in the stones Gates had taken from the lower mill. This he operated a few months and rented it to Gates brothers, who began here the making of shoddy, continuing until the expiration of Ashworth & Jones' lease, when they removed to the lower mill and continued making shoddy as noted. In April, 1872, this second mill at the upper site (which Gates brothers had continued to use with the lower one) was burned, and the power there has not since been utilized. All mill operations at this locality ceased when the saw-mill was removed.

Wallis' Mill. In 1851 Pliny M. Moffit built a dam and a shop on Mill Brook near the bridge on the Webster road, putting in machinery for making shoe boxes, and in 1852 sold to Eliphalet and Levi Eddy. They put in an upright saw-mill and a shingle-mill, but the power was inefficient, and in a year or two Levi sold to Eliphalet, who in 1865 sold to Col. Alexander DeWitt. He sold to Benjamin W. Childs, who owned for several years and later it was owned successively by John Dinsmore, Sylvanus Robinson, Mr. Buell of Worcester and Henry J. Whiting, standing unused much of the time. In 1880 it was bought by Frank G. Wallis of Sutton, who put in a cider-mill and for two seasons did a brisk business. In 1882 he enlarged the building, making it two stories, added a steam engine to the power and fitted it with machinery for wagon making. In July, 1884, it was burned. A few weeks afterward a temporary building was erected, a cider-mill put in, and the property was sold in the autumn of 1884 to Rodney M. Dadmun. In 1886 it was again sold, the buyer being the late Benjamin G. Wallis, who operated the cider-mill, and a circular saw and other machinery for wagon making and repairing.

Wool Carding. In the laborious task of preparing materials for the clothing of the large families of olden times, no mechanical appliances were employed until after 1800. About 1805 Hale of Worcester put in operation wool carding machines, and seems to have been the medium of their introduction in this vicinity, as he sold if he did not manufacture them.¹

The first carding done in Oxford was by one of the Hale machines in 1806, at John and David Nichols' mill. At about the same time Simeon Waters began the business at Sutton, and David Rich at Charlton, near Oxford west line. John H. Rich, son of David, attended this machine, man and boy, for 70 years, much of the patronage coming from Oxford. The last of its operation was in 1876.

Joseph Stone, soon after his purchase of the "Sigourney Mill" privilege in 1812, began wool carding, continuing eight or ten years, and relinquished it when he rented his mill for manufacturing purposes. Rufus Robinson in 1829 attached a machine to his manufacturing establishment at the south end of the Plain.

Scholfield, Jr., began the operation of one at Jewett City, Conn. Few inventions have brought more instant and general relief and emancipation. Women everywhere exulted in the beautiful white, soft, clean, fleecy rolls which made spinning and weaving a positive enjoyment. [Miss Larned, Wind. Co. His., II., 399.]

Millwrights. Ebenezer Phelps of Sutton was among the first millwrights of this region. He removed to New Boston, Conn., where he owned mill property. Elijah Davis, Jr., a very ingenious mechanic, went in young manhood to that place to learn the business, and from him originated what may be termed a school of artisans in Oxford, which became widely known among the manufacturers of New England. Prominent among them was Ezra Davis, brother of Elijah, who for a time was esteemed as the leading man in the line in Worcester County. Others were Francis and Israel Sibley, brothers, apprentices of Ezra Davis, Clark Putnam, Rufus, Sumner, Jeremiah and Pliny Moffit, brothers, George and James Lovett, brothers, Moses Burdon, John Rowland and others, who were for many years after the opening of the manufacturing era employed far and near in building water-wheels, fulling-mills, etc., and placing shafting in new factories. On account of the substitution of metal for wood in mills the business gradually decreased and little has been done in this line in Oxford of late.¹

Brickmaking. In the first houses of the town, chimneys, ovens, etc., were built of stone laid up in clay, and for the first 50 years bricks were but little used. Of the beginnings of this industry little is known. One of the first places of operation was on the land of Micah Pratt, not far from the river west from the north cemetery. This land before the Revolutionary war seems to have been valued for its brickyard and "clay pits," but we have no detail as to the manufacture. Soon after 1800 Samuel Rider was in the business at the clay pits, west of his house, a mile north of Augutteback pond, H. 84.

The "oldest inhabitant remembereth not" the time when bricks were not made on the Ebenezer Merriam farm at North Oxford, H. 103, and it is believed that the manufacture was begun by the first Ebenezer, who died 1761. Charlton, Leicester and Oxford were all more or less supplied from this source for many years, and the business was continued up to 1854, David Merriam, the present owner, being the last operator.

Bakery. A bakery, now standing, was built on Barton Street opposite the present Methodist meeting-house, in 1829 by Justin Root and Josiah Moore in partnership. Skilled workmen from Boston were employed, a fine quality of bakers' productions made and for about five years the concern flourished. In 1831 Moore having withdrawn the firm was Root & Clemence. In 1832 Daniel

¹ Tradition says the use of belts instead of gearing in mills was a cause of much discussion among the Oxford mechanics. Rumors came from the eastward that such changes had been made but the Oxford men were skeptical, and it was declared that "the idea of running a factory by means of a strap was nonsense." To settle the matter Ezra Davis started on foot for Lowell. He went, saw and was convinced, and a few weeks later had machinery in a mill at Fitchburg successfully running by the same means.

T. Penniman was proprietor, and after one year resold to Root, who owned until Jan., 1835, when he disposed of the estate and soon left town. Operations were discontinued thereafter.

Chaise and Harness. In the spring of 1821 Seth Daniels and John Mellish came to town from Walpole where they had been employés in a chaise factory, and in partnership began making chaises and harness at George R. Larned's, H. 218. In 1823 Mellish withdrew and Benjamin F. Town and Sylvanus Harris joined with Daniels, the firm being Daniels, Town & Co. In 1826 Town retired and Daniels & Harris continued the business. In 1828 the shop at the south end of the Plain (estate 211) was built and soon occupied. In 1830 Sanford Gilmore who had been an apprentice became a partner, and the firm was Daniels, Harris & Co. In 1832 Harris had left and Daniels & Gilmore continued until 1836, when a copartnership was formed with Elihu Harwood, Jr., for the manufacture of shoes, and carriage and harness making was relinquished.

Distilleries. About 1810 Dr. William Fisk and Amos Hudson began distilling liquors in a small building near Town's Pond, H. 144, buying grain, potatoes, cider, etc., of the farmers and producing whiskey and cider brandy principally. The business continued only a year or two and the building was fitted up and occupied as a store by the same owners.

About 1811 or 1812 John Pratt began the same business, having erected a building for the purpose on the Millbury road a short distance south from his house, H. 148, now William H. Marble, and his sons Ebenezer and Abijah D. were employed. After about three years the enterprise was abandoned.

Tanneries. The tanner, with the shoemaker, the carpenter and the blacksmith was indispensable in the new settlement. As the farmers slaughtered their animals the skins were marked with their initials and taken to the tannery to be made into leather for shoes for the household. The beginnings of this industry in Oxford are lost in the obscurity of the past.

Jacob Willson of Pomfret, Conn., tanner, bought in 1730 estate No. 188, at north end of the Plain, and may have followed his trade, the meadows on his home lot being adapted to the business. The first positive knowledge we have of a tannery is in 1754, when Jeremiah Shumway conveyed property to William Watson, a saddler from Leicester, "lying fifteen rods south of the meeting house" [at the north common] the west line running southerly on the 8-rod way "to a stake in the edge of the meadow near the Tann Fatts," conveying said "Fatts" and house, H. 182. This was the northern extremity of the original Peter Shumway home lot. Experience, daughter of Jeremiah Shumway, married Thomas Read who lived near the tannery, and was, as conjectured from his inventory, a currier. He died in 1750 and is believed to have carried on business at the old tannery. Watson owned and probably continued business here till 2 Jan., 1773, when he sold to Jonathan Gould of Woodstock, tanner, who held it for five years and sold, 3 Oct., 1778, to Samuel Hardy of Oxford, tanner, formerly of Sutton. On 15 March, 1781, Hardy sold to Andrew Duncan, merchant, of Worcester, who the next year sold to Jesse Jones, tanner, who sold, 26 June, 1783, to Daniel Goulding of Worcester, cordwainer. On 1 May, 1785, Goulding conveyed the property to William Forbes of Worcester, tanner, a man of good business capacity, who demonstrated by marked success that it was not the fault of the location or appliances for business that his predecessors were not successful. He enlarged the works and built up a thriving business, drawing many orders on Butler's store in payment for stock and labor, as was the custom, until his decease in 1808. From that date operations began to decline. Samuel Barstow of Killingly, Conn., who had, as is supposed, been Forbes' journeyman, in Nov., 1809, bought the estate and continued the business until about 1818, when he returned to Killingly. Alexander Campbell occupied the premises on a lease for tanning purposes from 1825 to 1829. After he left, the building, now standing, was changed to a dwelling.

The second, and only other establishment of the kind in Oxford, was at the crossing of the Sutton road and Mill Brook east of the main street. In 1810 William Sigourney, having learned the trade of a tanner at Warren's in Leicester, began business here, continuing with moderate success until 1816, when he removed to the corner, now George W. Sigourney's, into the store previously kept by his father, and began trading. He continued tanning under the care of Alexander Campbell, doing a small business only, until 1824, when he sold to Nathaniel Nolen, whose operations were quite limited. After 1829, by the raising of the dam at the Old Huguenot Mill for manufacturing purposes, the water damaged the premises and business thereafter amounted to but little, and entirely ceased six or seven years later, although the buildings stood until after 1840.

Shoe Manufacture. The shoe manufacture has for more than 50 years been the principal industry of Oxford Centre. The pioneer, Elihu Harwood, Jr., apprentice of Col. Arial Bragg of Milford, began about 1820 at his house at the south end of the Plain. The next operator was Capt. William Sigourney, who made men's boots and brogans from about 1828 until the burning of his shop, which stood near the site of the Memorial Hall, Jan., 1835. In 1836 Harwood formed a partnership with Seth Daniels and Sanford Gilmore at the chaise and harness shop at the south end, and in 1837 Samuel Dowse and Daniel T. Penniman joined the firm, adding the store next the bank to the shoe business. The reverses of 1837 terminated this scheme. In 1838 Harwood and Dowse were partners. In 1839 Harwood was alone and continued thereafter until 1858, when he retired. Sanford Gilmore was, 1839, with Loriston Shumway; from 1840 to 1846 he was alone, and 1846 removed to Boston, entering shoe trade. Seth Daniels continued at the south end from 1839 (his sons, George F. and Albert H., being partners after 1844, under the name Seth Daniels & Co.), until 1847, then removing to the Sigourney homestead, H. 192, and enlarging operations. In 1851 Stearns DeW. Harris entered the firm, continuing until Nov., 1854, when he and Albert H. Daniels left, and Franklin G. Daniels became a partner, continuing until 1872, when the business was closed.

Andrew S. Wetherell began before May, 1840, continuing for five years. In 1844 Daniel Stevens was partner.

Lament B. Corbin was a very successful manufacturer, perhaps the most capable in the town. He began with Daniel Harwood, 1844. In 1845 William H. Shumway was with him, from 1845 to 1860 he was alone, excepting 1850-1, when Samuel C. Richards, and 1855 to 1858, Charles A. Angell were partners. From 1860 to 1870 Allen L. Joslin was of the firm. In 1870 William H. H. Thurston came in and was partner until Corbin's decease, 1872. Business was continued here by Thurston and Franklin G. Daniels until 1878 and by Thurston alone until the fall of 1885, when operations terminated.

Daniel Harwood on leaving Corbin, 1845, entered the trade in Boston, and Harwood & Mosely manufactured in the Arcade building, Albert H. Daniels manager, in 1845. In 1846 Gilmore and Benjamin F. Campbell were Harwood's partners in Boston, and manufacture continued, 1846 to 1849, with Samuel C. Richards as agent. In 1849 the business was removed to the Andrew Sigourney building, opposite Joslin's factory, and Edward W. Bardwell took charge. In two or three years, Gilmore & Cole of Boston being owners, it was removed to the rear of the present Catholic Parsonage, continuing till 1865. In May, 1865, Bardwell bought the shop on Sutton avenue, opposite the railroad station, and as partner with Cole, Wood & Co., successors of Gilmore & Cole, manufactured until the fall of 1866, when business was closed.

Samuel C. Richards, 1849, until the burning of the "Arcade," Jan., 1850, continued in that building with A. G. Underwood and Samuel C. Paine, partners. In 1852 and part of 1853 he occupied the shop opposite the railroad station. Loriston Shumway was in the "Arcade" at the time of the fire; and later with Henry Boyden operated at Boyden's house, H. 200, during 1850-1. Soon after he built a shop in the rear of his own house and manufactured alone, 1852 to 1856. In 1857 the firm was L. Shumway & Son. In 1859 Allen L. Joslin became partner, leaving in 1860. Later, Henry L. and Issachar Shumway conducted the business several years; in 1866 Loriston was alone and before May, 1868, retired.

Emory E. Harwood was, 1847-8, at the shop opposite the railroad station on Sutton avenue, in 1849 at Webster when Charles A. Angell joined him. They, after the fire, bought the "Arcade" lot and built the brick shop, 1850, continuing there till 1854. From 1855 to 1873 Harwood was alone and very successful. In 1873 he sold the shop to his brother Daniel and son, who also bought the adjoining property, connected and enlarged the buildings, introducing steam-power and machinery. Emory E. Harwood was manager for two years and the business was suspended. In 1876 he was tenant here, in 1877 removed to south end of the Plain, and in 1883 left town.

Craft Davis, Jr., began before May, 1847, near George W. Sigourney's residence. John R. and Ebenezer S. Williams began before May, 1852, on Charlton Street, and removed, 1853, to the old tavern store, and that year the firm of Davis & Williams was formed. After the burning of the tavern, 1854, they occupied the Andrew Sigourney building near railroad station, and in a few months moved to the new building next east of the brick shop, continuing until Jan., 1870, when they dissolved partnership. Davis remained till 1873 and retired. Williams brothers went into the shop opposite the railroad station, continuing till the decease of John R. Williams, 1879.

Thaddeus T. Gay began before May, 1847; in Jan., 1850, was partner with S. William Smith in the "Arcade" and burnt out. In 1850 he joined with Samuel Southwick, name Gay & Southwick, continuing (James M. Sanford having been partner one or two years) until 1857. Southwick left, and Gay, with his brother Charles L. part of the time, went on until 1867 at the shop near the freight depot. Southwick later made stays and inner soles until 1873.

William H. Thurston began before May, 1853, near the Universalist meeting-house, in present bakery; was two years on his own account, later going on for Campbell, Harwood & Co., and Benjamin F. Campbell until 1867, his son William H. H. being partner the last two years.

Allen L. Joslin began before May, 1858; in 1859 was with Loriston Shumway, and 1860 to 1870 with Lament B. Corbin. On 1 Jan., 1871, the firm of A. L. Joslin & Co. was formed, and 1871 the new shop at the Centre built. The firm, originally A. L. and O. F. Joslin, now includes Homer S. Joslin and Walter D. Tyler.

Larkin D. Newton and Eden Davis partners were, in 1845, in the "Arcade." In 1846 Newton went on alone.

David Whittemore was, 1846, partner with Elihu Harwood; in 1847 with Eden Davis; 1848 to 1851 alone; in 1852 removed from town.

Daniel Jennison began before May, 1850, at his house east of the railroad, on a fine leather boot for New England trade, continuing until 1854.

William Stone began before May, 1851, continuing until 1856 at his shop, Barton Street, near the Universalist meeting-house (shop later sold to Corbin and removed). In 1857 John Anderson was his partner, who continued alone 1860-1, and left town.

Henry Boyden, Seth W. Field and George Miller, firm Boyden, Field & Co., began before May, 1852, at H. 200, then Boyden's. In 1853 Field left; Boyden and Miller went on until 1856, Boyden continuing in 1857.

Charles E. Daniels and Wilson Olney in 1854 were partners at a shop in the rear of Seth Daniels & Co.

Lorenzo Morgan and H. Wilbur Snow were from 1854 to 1859 at Snow's harness shop near the north common.

Adams G. Barnes began before May, 1855, near the freight depot; in 1856 Abel F. Stow was partner; Barnes went on until 1860 alone.

Benjamin Paine began before May, 1854, at his house; Charles Watson, his son-in-law, was with him, 1856 to 1858; Paine continued 1859-60.

S. William Smith and A. Waldo Lackey began, 1854, at the shop opposite the railroad station; 1855, Albert Lackey, father of A. Waldo, came in (name Smith, Lackey & Co.), continuing to the fall of 1857. Charles C. Twichell had begun before May, 1857, in the rear of the brick store. Smith left Lackey 1857 and joined Twichell, and in a few months sold to Albert Lackey; the firm became Lackey & Twichell. They gave up business before May, 1859. A. Waldo Lackey continued at the old place till the spring of 1859.

George Appleby was, 1857, at his father's residence, continuing one year.

William H. Harrington, 1858, manufactured in the three-story building near the freight depot.

Albert G. Underwood manufactured a few months in 1859 at his father's house.

T. Vernon Nichols, Amasa Stowe and Daniel R. Cortis (name, Nichols, Stowe & Co.) began before May, 1866, at the south end; removed, 1867, to opposite the railroad station, Sutton Avenue, continuing until 1868.

It is impossible to give statistics of the past. Good judges estimate the total annual production when the business was at high tide, in 1856, at about a million dollars. The principal article produced was a woman's heavy pegged lace boot, which had a large sale, South and West, to the agricultural population. Harwood began on a cheap low cut "strap shoe" which went South. As time passed different patterns and improved qualities were made. A revolution was wrought in the business by the introduction of power and machinery, and the smaller concerns which could not advantageously adopt new methods, one after another yielded under the competition until there is now only the factory of A. L. Joslin & Co. in operation. This concern has largely extended its variety and quantity of productions. Their factory is 160 by 30 feet, four stories including basement, is fitted with the best improved steam machinery, employs 150 hands, and when in full operation turns out 1,000 pairs of shoes per day. Value of yearly production, $280,000.

BURYING-GROUNDS. SEXTONS. POUNDS. CATTLE, ETC. TOWN POOR. CENTENARIANS. EXCISE BILL. EMBARGO. JUSTICES IN COURT. CASES IN COURT. CORONERS. DEPUTY SHERIFFS. WILD GAME. SMALL-POX. WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. TOWN SURVEY. MILL. HALLS. MINES. BANK. TAVERNS. TRADERS AND STORES. POST-OFFICES. CARRIERS. STAGES. FIRE DEPARTMENT. MASONIC LODGES. AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY. IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY. THE GRANGE. HUGUENOT MEMORIAL SOCIETY. LEARNED RELIEF FUND. LAWYERS. PHYSICIANS. GRADUATES. DOG TAX. CATTLE DISEASE. TOWN CLOCK. MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS.

Burying-grounds. In Nov., 1713, John Town, Samuel Hagnburn and Benjamin Chamberlain were chosen to lay out a minister's lot and a burying-ground. The latter was located west of the common, and in Jan., 1750, it was voted to fence it, but lines not being settled it was not then done. In Dec., 1751, the proprietors voted "two acres . . . to be set off bounding on the east on the west line of the training field, south on . . . Manning's land and extending north and west so as to include all the graves." This the town confirmed 1754, and in 1755 voted £13. 6s. 8d. to fence it. In March, 1756, voted that Dr. Jabez Holden may fence it "for what he owes the town for the old meeting-house." In 1788 the south line was not fenced, and it was agreed that the people should meet the first Monday in June to finish it. In 1796 James Gleason gave three-fourths of an acre as an addition on the west, deeded in 1803. For 135 years this was the only burying-ground of the town.

In Nov., 1847, it was voted to buy 12 acres at north end of Town's Plain for a new cemetery and to enlarge that at the Centre. In 1848 three-fourths of an acre, two rods wide on the south and extending several rods on the west, were added to the old ground, and 11 acres, 25 rods purchased of John Fitts for a new one, now the North Cemetery.

The Catholic ground contains $14\frac{3}{4}$ acres and was opened in 1864, having also been bought of Mr. Fitts.

In March, 1859, voted to improve the south ground and fence it at a cost not over $500. In Nov., 1870, voted to set apart lots 462, 455 and 424 in North Cemetery for burial of soldiers. In April, 1871, voted $500 to improve the North Cemetery. In Nov., $300 additional was voted for the same purpose. In April, 1856, it was voted to build a receiving tomb, which was done at the North Cemetery.

Hearse. Up to 1796 the bier was the only means of carrying the dead to burial. In Feb. warrant was an article "to see if the town will provide a carriage to carry their dead to a place of interment," on which we find no action. Soon thereafter a vehicle was in use consisting of a pair of long shafts without springs placed on an axletree with two wheels, with a flooring and a long canvas top over a series of small bows like a chaise top, a rude, unsightly affair. In 1817 it was voted to "procure a decent hearse for the conveyance of the dead." Another was voted in 1837, and in 1858 the present carriage was bought, costing $251.

In Nov., 1821, by-laws were adopted fixing the price for digging graves, etc. Sextons were to receive 50 cents for attendance at funerals with hearse; and it was recommended that "giving public invitations to bearers and mourners . . . to return to the houses of the deceased for refreshments be discontinued."

In 1821 voted to have the bell rung Sundays and tolled at funerals at town expense. In 1825-6 George Nolen served at $12½ per year.

Sextons. The first choice of sexton or "grave digger" recorded was May, 1768, when Robert Manning was chosen; Sept., 1768, Aaron French took his place. In May, 1776, David Mellen came in, Abner Mellen following in 1793. In May, 1819, Charles Town began, and later Charles P. Nichols acted several years. In April, 1842, Elliot Marsh offered to furnish "a good pine coffin" for persons 12 years and older for $2, other charges to be 50 cents for attendance, and $1 for grave, total $3.50; and for those under 12 years $2.75. He was chosen sexton. Alexander C. Thurston later held the office for several years, and 1856 Edmund Miller succeeded him. In 1860 Caleb Thompson was appointed, Charles R. Carlton following in 1868. In 1870 Reuben Rich took the place and has since officiated, excepting for one or two years, when Melvin W. Pierce was elected.

Pounds. March 30, 1714, it was "voted to build a pound two rods square to be set on the west side of the 8-rod way, against the 6-rod way, to be built by John Town by the last of next May," each freeholder to pay a day's work or 2s. 6d. in money. This was, excepting roads, the first public work of the town, and the location about on the site of the present brick store. Farm stock ran at large for which each owner had a mark, a description of which was entered in the town records.

On 24 May, 1716, £2. 5s. was voted for a pound.

On 24 March, 1719, "Agreed with Abraham Skinner, Sen., to build a pound 33 foot square and 7 foot high to be completed by the 7th of May," and voted £2. 7s. for the same. By a later vote Skinner was directed to repair the old pound.

April, 1728, voted to build a pound 30 feet square.

May, 1769, voted to build a new pound at the southwest corner of the burying-ground, of stone, six and one-half feet high, four feet thick at the bottom, with eight-inch timber on top of the wall. Former structures had undoubtedly been of wood. This substantial work stood nearly 80 years, until the enlargement of the cemetery in 1848, when it was removed. In Nov., 1850, a new pound was voted, and soon after the present one built near Turcott's, H. 184.

Cattle, etc. April, 1726, "Voted that no herds of cattle be brought into town [to feed] the ensuing year." May, 1729, "Voted that every person taking a herd [to pasture] shall pay 10s. per head to the town." In 1734 a by-law was made against receiving cattle to feed or graze, under a penalty of 10s. per head, to be in force three years. March, 1735, "Voted that horses and cattle of the inhabitants may go free on the commons."¹ May, 1735, field-drivers were ordered to "clear the town of all herds of cattle" and "prosecute the owners." March, 1739, "Voted to make an act to prevent bringing such herds of cattle to feed in the town." March, 1748, "Voted, that no person shall take any cattle belonging to persons in other towns, upon forfeiture of 40s. to be recovered by the town treasurer, this for 3 years ensuing." 1769, "Voted, to let hogs go at large yoked and ringed."

Town Poor. In early times aid to the poor was given by individuals at discretion and bills sent to the town. In 1734, by a by-law, a penalty was required for a certain offence, "for the use of the poor," probably to be distributed by the selectmen. We find that Hannah Frail died at Daniel McIntire's before 6 March, 1749; Susanna Groo with a child travelling from Lebanon to Hampton sojourned at John Wiley's, 29 Jan., 1754; William Lackey, wife and child, of Waltham, at William Brown's, 19 April, 1753; and bills were sent for these severally to the selectmen. The Revolutionary war greatly increased this class, and a workhouse was discussed in many meetings but not decided on. In May, 1775, nearly 5,000 poor were sent from Boston into the State for support, 35 having been assigned to Oxford.² On 1 Jan., 1779, the selectmen reported to the Court four aged persons from Charlestown who had four years lived on the town, Matthew Mallet and wife, between 70 and 80, Margaret Fosdick, 78, Dorcas Delany(?), 60, asking relief. In reply these were ordered to be sent to Sutton. On 18 May, 1779, pay was voted to Ebenezer Fish for supporting Lydia Cop, "one of the poor of Boston." Stephen Pratt provided for her in 1780. Jan., 1780, David Mellen sent a bill for support of widow Munsell for a year. In 1784 voted to sell to the lowest bidder the support of the poor.

In April, 1818, Ezekiel Davis, insane, was dependent on the town and in Worcester jail for safe-keeping. The selectmen were instructed to remove him and "put him out to those who will take him on the lowest terms and give bonds for the damage he shall do and for his good behavior." In 1819 he was in jail again. Living in the south part of the town he wandered into Nipmuck woods, where he lived in a hut near the "Goat ledges" with "bell-fish," as he called the rattlesnakes, for company. He was harmless and spent much time in travelling about the region bareheaded and barefooted. When Webster was set off in the division of the poor he was assigned to that town.

¹The commons were extensive, much of the outland at that date not having been allotted.

²It is very doubtful whether so large a number actually came to the town for support.

Auctioning the poor annually was continued until 1826, when their support for ten years was contracted for by Capt. Stephen Barton at $574 per year. For five years their residence was at H. 49 on Rocky Hill.

Early in 1831 a committee was chosen to review the matter, which advised the purchase of a farm for the support of the poor. In Sept. they further reported in favor of the "Harris place," which the town voted to buy at a cost of $3,683. In March, 1832, the estate was conveyed and the dependants of the town have since been there domiciled. After a few years the old house was found insufficient to accommodate the increasing number of inmates, and an addition of about 25 feet was made at the north end. A tramp house was built 1878 at a cost of $258. In the spring of 1890 it was voted to enlarge the accommodations of the place, and during the summer and autumn the old house was removed to the rear and the new and commodious front part added, as now existing. The institution is now fitted to receive thirty inmates.

Centenarians. Nancy Cady, widow, perhaps from Northbridge, died at the almshouse, 1 Aug., 1873, age 105. [Oxford Record.] Record of birth not found.

Mary, daughter of Israel Town, born 16 Nov., 1709, at Framingham, married Theodore Kingsbury, resided at South Oxford, and died Jan., 1810.

Mehetable, daughter of Israel Town, born 23 Dec., 1731, married Samuel, son of Josiah Larned, removed to Ashford, Conn., "d. over 100" years of age. [Adams, Framingham, who might have had this name confounded with Mary her sister.]

Sarah, daughter of Dea. Ebenezer Humphrey, born 30 Oct., 1771, married, 1795, Jesse Kidder, removed 1802 to Livermore, Me., where she died 24 Oct., 1874. In 1872 it was said of her "She is very deaf, but in her 103d year her health is remarkably good, and her face smooth and fair as a girl's." [His. Livermore.]

Huldah, daughter of Jonathan Pratt, born 1 March, 1739, married Isaac Town, (2) Samuel Bixby, resided at Oxford, removed 1831 to live with her son at Bethel, Me., where she died May, 1843.

Naomi (m. n. Everden), widow of Josiah Wolcott, died 18 July, 1848, age 108. [Gravestone.] No record of her birth is known to exist. It is understood that Dr. Bardwell from what he could gather from her, personally, became satisfied that the reputed age, 108, did not exceed the truth.

Dinah, colored, in the family of Josiah Wolcott. "Dinah, a faithful slave, died 1829, supposed to be 100 years old." [Gravestone.

Dennis Tonar, Irish, died, aged 108, 23 Dec., 1874. [Oxford Record.

Excise Bill. In town meeting, Aug. 30, 1754, the Excise Bill was read and it was voted not to accept of it. "Voted, that the said Excise Bill is disagreeable to them." This bill was to lay a tax upon wines and spirituous liquors. Gov. Shirley opposed it as unjust to require families to render an account of what was consumed in their private houses. The bill was sent to the towns for action, and with some amendments became a law.

Embargo. In Aug., 1800⁸, the town voted to join with Boston in petitioning the President for redress of supposed grievances on account of the embargo, and chose James Butler, Sylvanus Learned and Abijah Davis to draft a proper petition. This was done and presented in town meeting and by vote the selectmen were requested to sign it. Three refused, viz.: Nehemiah Davis, Asa Harris and Josiah Kingsbury; Elias Pratt, Jr., and David Stone, Jr., complied. The signatures of the committee were added and it was forwarded.

State Constitution. In Aug., 1820, on the question of a revision of the State Constitution the vote was 47 yes, 6 no. In Oct. Richard Olney was chosen as delegate to a convention at Boston for the purpose of a revision. In April of 1821, 14 articles of amendment were voted upon and a very large majority vote against all was given.

RICHARD MOORE in 1739, '40, '42, '44.

DUNCAN CAMPBELL, 1754, '55, '56, '59, '60, '61, '62, '66, '67, '68, '69, '70, '71.

EDWARD DAVIS, 1763, '64, '65, '66, '67, '68, '70, '72, '73, '74, '76, '78, '79, '80, '81, '82, '83.

JOSIAH WOLCOTT, 1769, '71, '72, '74.

EBENEZER LEARNED, 1776, '77, '78, '80, '81, '83, '87, '88, '89, '90, '91, '92, '93, '94, '95.

SYLVANUS TOWN, 1793, '94, '95, '96, '97, '98, '99, 1800, '1, '2, '3, '4, '5, '6, '7.

SYLVANUS LEARNED, 1796, '97, '98, '99, 1800, '1, '2, '3, '4, '5.

In Sept., 1807, by law a radical change was made in the court and the number of justices was reduced from 30 or 40 to one chief justice with five associates. JONATHAN DAVIS was in 1808 and 1811 associate justice, and in 1812, '13, '14, chief justice with three associates. In Aug., 1814, a Circuit Court of Common Pleas for the County of Worcester, JOHN HOOKER, Chief Justice, was held. In 1828, Feb. 26, the Court of Sessions was abolished and the Board of County Commissioners established.

Oxford Cases, Court of Sessions. Feb., 1732, John Mayo vs. Elijah Moore, recovered "for a gun of small bore, barrel 4 feet long, with a varnished stock of speckled color, with a lock to it."

1737, Aug., Joshua Haynes of Sudbury vs. Richard Moore; plaintiff bought of Moore a negro man named Sharper for £115, said to be sound; claimed he was so blind as to be incapable of service; verdict for defendant.

1738, Ebenezer Humphrey, for absenting himself from public worship, fined 20s.

1741, Thomas McIntire, for the same, pleaded living a great distance from meeting [at Charlton] and poor roads, sentenced to pay costs, amounting to £3. 16s., was committed, afterward paid, and was released. Ephraim Morey, fined £5 for killing a deer.

1742, Ebenezer Humphrey, for absenting himself from public worship, fined 20s. and costs. Richard and Stephen Carey, fined £10 for killing a deer in North Gore.

1743, Alexander Nichols, near Worcester line, fined for killing a deer.

1763, Aug., Alexander Nichols vs. John Wiley for assault. [See "Wiley."]

1764, Feb., Mary Jackson, widow, William Jackson, brazier, and James Jackson, shopkeeper, all of Boston, vs. Hezekiah Bellows, for ejectment from Campbell tavern property, verdict for plaintiffs.

1777, June, appeal, Ebenezer Coburn, clerk of First Foot Company in Col. Holman's regiment. In accordance with a resolution of the General Court, 10 July, 1776, this company was notified to meet to "enlist or draught" one man in each 25 to recruit the American army. A man, of an Oxford family, "living near Oxford," being duly warned absented himself, for which he was arraigned by said Coburn before Edward Davis, Esq., at Ezra Bowman's hotel in Oxford on 27 Aug., 1776, and pleaded that "it was against his opinion to train or take up arms," which was not considered by the court a sufficient defence, and he was fined £10. He appealed and the higher court confirmed the action of the justice, adding costs.

Coroners. Although the chief duty of coroners was the holding of inquests on persons dying unnatural deaths, at the beginning of the present century when suing for debt was frequent, they acted in place of deputy sheriffs in serving writs. So far as known

Jonathan Harris was the first coroner in Oxford, having been appointed June, 1797, and continued for about 20 years.

Inquests. The first inquest we find under him was June, 1801, when it was ordered that he be paid for expenses in the case of "Phillis" (colored), found dead. [See Whittemore.] In 1802 the same on Joshua Wetherell of Dudley, drowned. In 1804 on Harvey, minor son of Stephen Kenney of Sutton. In 1805 on Reuben Barrett [Burrell?], drowned in Peter Pond, Dudley. In 1813 on James Howard of Dudley. In 1815 on David Howard, "found dead in the woods about one-third of a mile northwardly from Joseph Brown's house," in east part of Oxford, H. 23. On 3 June, 1819, on Elihu Moffitt, who hanged himself in the west part of Oxford, H. 69. On 22 July, 1819, on Asa Harris, insane, who threw himself into the well at the present almshouse. In the winter of 1819-20 on James Maxwell of North Oxford, who returning home from Millbury, being intoxicated, fell in the road near the present house of Asa H. Pope, H. 132, and died from freezing.

In 1817 Lemuel Crane was a coroner and held an inquest on the body of Capt. Ebenezer Redding.

Rufus Harris, son of Jonathan, whom he succeeded, held inquests in 1821 on Sumner Barton of Sutton, and Hezekiah Healy of Dudley, both shot; 1 Oct., 1822, on Eden Davis of Dudley; 28 Dec., 1824, on Jeremiah Moffitt, at the old mill, south end of the Plain. On 18 Sept., 1825, James Farwell held an inquest on Day Phipps, drowned in the river in south part of the town. On 25 Dec., 1825, Rufus Harris on Stephen Webster, drowned in Chaubunagungamaug; 9 Oct., 1825, on John M. Wilder; 24 Oct., 1825, on Leonard Eddy, accidentally drowned in north part of Oxford; 14 Sept., 1826, on David Dudley; 29 May, 1828, on Benjamin Learned, who hanged himself at North Oxford; 22 Oct., 1829, on John Rowley, an Englishman and factory operative, found dead in the strip of woods between the north end of Augutteback Pond and the road. He had been dead several weeks.¹

Sylvanus Harris, the next incumbent, on 7 Oct., 1834, held an inquest on William A. Smith, son of Simeon, who was drowned in the river near the present stone arch bridge on Charlton road; and on 9 July, 1835, on Thomas, son of John Larned.

Deputy Sheriffs. As no record of appointments has been found we can only give the years in which these are known to have officiated. Richard Moore, Jr., 1753-1757; Jeremiah Learned, 1762-1767; Jonas Pratt, Jr., 1780; Benjamin Hovey, 1782-1787; Archibald Campbell, 1801-1804; Learned Conant, 1805, 1806; Jeremiah Shumway, 1822; Samuel Smith, 1823-1845; Jasper Brown, 1852; Orrin W. Chaffee, 1859-1875.

¹ The bark of a sapling near which he lay was gnawed off to the height of two feet.

Wild Game, etc. May, 1739, the town chose Thomas Gleason and Edward Davis to prosecute those who kill deer contrary to law. In 1742, John Nichols was chosen to do the same. For many years "deer-reeves" were regularly elected town officers. In 1791-2 and 1801 the town voted to pay bounties on crows killed.

Small-pox, then greatly feared, was brought to town by soldiers from the army in 1776-7. In the Court of Sessions, 15 Aug., 1776, Ebenezer Learned was made one of a committee to oversee hospitals in the County. Dec., 1776, the town voted liberty to Dr. Daniel Fisk to inoculate for it at the house of Samuel Davis, Jr., H. 17, four months from 1 Jan. Jan., 1777, Dr. Alexander Campbell was refused leave to inoculate at his house. In April, William Nichols, Ezra Bowman and Ebenezer Humphrey were chosen to take names and number of persons in the hospitals, and to warn doctors not to take more persons, if they would avoid the penalty of the law. A hospital was established, 1777, at North Oxford, at the "Cary house," H. 114. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nichols of Ward were employed as nurses. In 1798 Dr. Fisk and Dr. Learned asked leave to establish a hospital but were refused. At about this date the old Moore tavern, rear of Israel Sibley's, H. 205, was used as a hospital. In 1864 there was a "scare" at North Oxford, there being several cases, and 16 April Joseph Stone was appointed by the selectmen to take charge of them.

Weights and Measures. March, 1725, "Voted to purchase a standard of weights and measures." Our present standards are of comparatively recent date.

State Maps. In 1802 the State had furnished the town with maps, and it was voted that they be deposited at James Butler's house.

Town Survey. A survey of towns was required by the State in 1795, but we find no allusion to it in Oxford records. In March, 1830, the selectmen were authorized to hire a surveyor to prepare a map of the town in accordance with a late act of the legislature. Sylvester McIntire was employed, and a plan made from his surveys is in the office of the Secretary of State.

Incumbrances removed. In Aug., 1816, it was voted that the building on the common, built in 1802 by Archibald Campbell [saddler's shop], be removed in 60 days. This building stood on the west side of the common near the present house of Charles Lamb, and was about 15 by 25 feet, one and a half stories. After Campbell left it and went into the tavern, Ashbel M. Hawes used it as a shoe shop employing Andrew Smith. Later it was occupied by Josiah Ware as a dry and fancy goods store and straw shop. He was from Franklin and was the first to trade in straw braid in the town. [See Ware.]

In April, 1852, it was voted that the hay scales in front of Barton's hotel be removed. These were the property of William Sigourney, who had for more than 25 years thus occupied a location in the middle of the main street. The tavern sign-posts which had also probably stood in the same location nearly 100 years, were removed about the same time.

Orchard. Jan., 1714, "voted that Ebenezer Humphrey should have the orchard adjoining the southwest corner of his home lot, making allowance to the town in money in full, of what two men shall judge it to be worth," and chose John Town and Abiel Lamb to appraise the same. This was a Huguenot orchard, located directly west of the Old Mill at the south end of the Plain. It did not go into Humphrey's possession.

Mill. Jan., 1714, it was voted that Daniel Eliott should "build a greust mel for the town yuse." May, 1715, voted and chose Richard Moore and Benoni Twitchell "to go to Daniel Eliott and discors with him concerning building y^e Corn Mill to see whither he will go on and accomplish it in a reasonable time." Up to this date the people were obliged to go out of town for grinding.

Public Halls and Meetings. For the first one hundred and twenty-five years of Oxford's history its town meetings were held in the houses of public worship; from 1717 until 1748 in the house at the north end of the Plain, and from 1748 until 1808 at the house on the north common, continuously. In 1795 the Universalist Society offered the use of their house, but the proposition was not accepted until Oct., 1807, when the town voted to hold its meetings alternately at the north and south meeting-houses. The first meeting at the south house was in March, 1808. Thereafter, with the exception noted below, until the building of a town hall, the meetings were continued in the same manner. In 1832 an unsuccessful attempt was made to have all meetings held on the Plain.¹ In May, 1835, it was voted to hold all meetings for one year at D. D. Clemence's hall [north tavern], he to "furnish the hall gratis and pay the town ten dollars for their company."

First Town Hall. In June, 1835, it was voted to build a town hall, and a committee on plan and location was chosen. In July this vote was rescinded. There being a disagreement between the north and south parts of the town as to location, although repeated efforts were made, it was not until April, 1839, that a vote could be obtained to proceed to the carrying out of this plan. At that date it was voted a large elm tree near the meeting-house, the large tree now standing in the centre of the highway at the common.

to build at once on the site of the old meeting-house at the north common, and to appropriate toward this object an unexpended balance of the surplus revenue received from the national government. Money sufficient to make up the sum of $1,800 was raised and a building committee consisting of Cyrus Lamb, Liberty Lamb, Nathaniel Brown, Stephen Barton and Jotham Eddy was chosen.

Great excitement throughout the town followed this action, and immediately another meeting was called by the opposing party, which assembled at Brown's Inn, April 17. After the choice of a moderator an adjournment was made to the common, the house being too small to accommodate the assembly. The result was the dismissal of every article in the warrant looking to the rescinding of former action. This was a second victory for the northerners. But the matter was not suffered to rest. A petition for another meeting was presented to the selectmen, which request was refused. Upon this, application was made by 27 voters to George B. Slater, Esq., of Webster, who issued a call for a meeting, which was held May 20 at the meeting-house on the Plain. There were nine articles in the warrant bearing on the rescinding of former votes and building nearer the centre of the town than the north common, every one of which was summarily dismissed and the meeting adjourned. The town hall was built upon the site of the old Meeting-house in 1839, and the first meeting in it was in November of that year. It was of wood, in size about 50 by 32 feet and 12 feet stud, of one story, the main hall having an arched ceiling. It was plain in its exterior, had a pediment end fronting the street, and with comfortable heating and seating conveniences was creditable as a public building. It was sold at auction in 1874 for $314 to Craft Davis.

In March, 1841, an article to see if the town would grant the Methodist Society the privilege of raising the hall one story and fitting up in it a house of worship for their use, was dismissed.

For many years a jealousy had existed between the north and south portions of the town, and when in 1851 North Oxford obtained the new road from the railroad station to the villages, as a means of "getting even," the old bone of contention, the town house, was picked up by the southerners and in Sept., 1851, it was voted to remove this building to some convenient spot on the Plain, and a committee chosen to carry out the vote. This action aroused the people of the north and in Jan., 1852, a meeting was called—(1) to see if the town would rescind its action of Sept., 1851; (2) to see if the town would sell the town hall; (3) to see if the town would petition the Legislature to divide said town in the centre by a line running east and west. By a vote 127 to 123 it was decided that the house remain where it then stood. The south still persisted and in February another meeting was held to act upon the same subject. A general rally was made, the check list used and a ballot vote taken, resulting in a vote 219 to 201 against a removal of the house. This set at rest a long vexed question, and until the erection of the new hall on the Plain, meetings were continued at the north common.

In 1861 it was voted to hold annual town meetings in April instead of March.

Memorial Hall. At the close of the Civil War a general desire existed to build a durable memorial to the soldiers, and Nov., 1865, $10,000 was voted for a monument. This action was reversed April, 1866. In June, 1868, a committee reported in favor of a Memorial Hall, and George Hodges, Emory E. Harwood and Daniel Warner were chosen a building committee, who proceeded with the project until August, when they were discharged.¹

In April, 1872, a new building committee was chosen, Emory E. Harwood, George F. Daniels and Samuel W. Smith, with instructions to build at a cost of not over $25,000. Earle & Fuller of Worcester were employed as architects, and the building was erected by Thomas G. Learned of Worcester, and completed in the fall of 1873 at a cost of $24,664. Cost of heating, seating and lighting appliances, $3,755.² The dedication, at which an able historical address was given by Peter B. Olney, Esq., of New York, was on 19 Nov., 1873.

A public hall was finished in the steam fire-engine house at North Oxford when that was erected, 1885, and later furnished at the town expense.

Private Halls. The first place in town (excepting the meeting-houses) adapted to public gatherings was at the old tavern at the Centre where two adjoining rooms, separated by a swinging partition, could be thrown into one, measuring about 15 by 30 feet. This sufficed for dancing parties, singing schools, etc., until about 1800, when a hall about 20 by 45 feet was added at the north end of the building.

The next similar room in town was that added, 1827, by Samuel C. Butler to the tavern at the north common.

In 1791 Dr. Daniel Fisk in building his mansion-house opposite Town's Pond, finished a large room in the upper story, which was used for dances and social parties, and here private schools were kept. [See Schools.]

Rev. Josiah Moulton in building the present Campbell house at the north common had a similar room finished, in which were held social meetings, and Mr. Ludden taught singing schools.

A small hall was constructed in the house of the late Col. DeWitt, H. 226, by Richard Moore the builder, and also by Richard Gleason at the corner of Sigourney and Main Streets, H. 239. These were used for social purposes, and in the latter a girls' school was taught in the summer of 1820.

² Measurements are as follows: main building, 92 x 55 feet, exclusive of porch; large hall, 68 x

52 feet; platform, 24 x 12 feet; lower hall, 45 x, 40 feet; library, 30 x 20 feet; selectmen's room 25 x 20 feet; height of lower story, 13 feet; upper, 25 feet. The walls are of Southbridge brick; trimmings, brownstone; floors, hard pine; finish, ash and walnut.

Huguenot Hall. The chambers over the store near the Bank were arranged as a hall not far from 1855; it was much used, and known as "Huguenot Hall." In 1860 it was leased by the Oxford Lodge of Masons, who have since occupied it.

Sanford's Hall. Until the erection of Memorial Hall, that built by Emory Sanford in 1855 over the brick store and known as "Sanford's Hall," was the usual place for public gatherings. For several years it has been occupied by the G. A. R. Post, and is now known as Grand Army Hall.

Mines. On Long Hill, east of the north common, very early traces of iron were found. On 13 Oct., 1735, Jacob Willson deeded to Elisha Johnson and Simon Dakin of Sutton all the minerals to be dug on 20 acres on the south part of Long Hill, and in 1740 Thomas Mayo deeding land here to Henry Cooledge, reserved one moiety of all the iron ore "with free liberty to dig and cart away said ore." In the South Gore in 1798 iron was mined and smelted. [See Industries.]

In the north part of the town at different times attempts have been made to develop paying mines. In 1761 Edward Davis deeded to Col. Ebenezer Learned, Benjamin Davis, Dr. Alexander Campbell and Ebenezer Learned, Jr., land at North Oxford, reserving to himself the right to one-fifth of all minerals upon his paying his share of the cost of mining, "whenever he chooses to come in for it," indicating that a company existed of the four grantees, of which the grantor might, if he chose, be a member. Tradition confirms the fact of this company, and traces of its operations may be seen a few rods east of the river, a mile north of the Texas mill-dam. Considerable money was sunk in the enterprise. There seems to have been superstition in the matter, as it is said expectations of finding precious metals were raised by seeing smoke issue from the ground. In 1786 Gen. Ebenezer Learned owned this property, and then deeded to his son Sylvanus 30 acres, embracing the mine, reserving all rights before conveyed to other parties to dig and carry away minerals. There is no evidence that further operations were carried on. In Oct., 1789, Learned sold to Jacob Work, owner of land adjoining on the north, reserving the right of passing and digging for ore. As late as 1875 persistent efforts were made by several parties to find precious metals at about a mile south of this locality. There are undoubted evidences of their existence, but in too small quantities to be mined with profit. In a deed, Daniel A. Pierce and others of Providence to Philip Cannon, 24 Aug., 1881, of land lying east of Texas Village is a reserve of rights to enter said land to mine at the shaft known as the "Big Hole."

In an article in the Worcester Spy, 28 Dec., 1890, on silver bearing ores in central Massachusetts, by George M. Rice, 2d, he says:—

"A complex ore from a locality in Oxford, which contained an intimate mixture of quartz, iron pyrites, zinc blend and galena, the latter being about 20 per cent., gave a result of 12 oz., 10 pwt., 20 gr., a value of $13.16 for the silver; lead 20 per cent., equaling 400 lbs., value, $16, total, $29.16 per ton. This ore also contained a strong trace of gold, enough probably to add about $2 or more per ton in value.

"These are smelting ores and would require a furnace process to extract the values."

Oxford Bank. The Oxford Bank was incorporated 8 Feb., 1823, with a capital of $100,000. Its organization was, 13 March, 1823, at "R. Olney's Inn." Jonathan Davis, Aaron Tufts, Richard Olney, Jeremiah Kingsbury, Andrew W. Porter, Henry Sargent, Daniel Tourtellotte, Joseph Thayer and Nathan Heard, Jr., were chosen directors; Jonathan Davis president.¹

House. The lot was bought 30 April, 1823, and the building, including dwelling for cashier, erected the next summer. Jonathan Davis was president for ten years. In 1833 Richard Olney succeeded him continuing until 1836, when Aaron Tufts was chosen and filled the office until his decease in 1843. In November of that year Alexander DeWitt came in and retained the position until July, 1848. John Wetherell was next president, continuing until Oct., 1849, when John Jewett was elected. In Oct., 1857, Jewett resigned and Emory Sanford was his successor, serving until 1864, when he declined a re-election and Charles A. Angell took the position. The health of Wilson Olney, cashier, failing, he resigned that office 30 Sept., 1873, and Charles A. Angell was elected his successor, having resigned the presidency. Samuel C. Paine was elected president and continued until Jan., 1881, when he declined further service and the present incumbent, Allen L. Joslin, was chosen.

The cashiers have been Sumner Barstow, 1823 to 17 Oct., 1845; Alvan G. Underwood, to 28 May, 1855; Wilson Olney, to 30 Sept., 1873; Charles A. Angell, to 3 Nov., 1882; Eben Harrington of Worcester, to 27 Sept., 1887, at which date Charles B. Sherman was chosen, and, 1891, fills the office.

On 30 June, 1856, it was voted to build a new Bank building, which vote was carried out the succeeding autumn. On 3 March, 1857, the old estate was sold to Emory Sanford. In June, 1857, the Bank voted to accept the act of Legislature increasing the stock to $150,000. The business was at this time increasing, but the plan of enlargement of capital was given up on account of the financial reverses of 1857.

In Dec., 1864, it was voted to organize under the laws of the United States and assume the name of "The Oxford National Bank," and on 18 Feb., 1865, the old corporation was merged in the present one.

Taverns. The first licensed public house in Oxford was kept by Daniel Elliott in 1714 for one year only, at the extreme north end of the village, H. 132. The second legalized tavern was that of Richard Moore in 1715 on the Hagburn estate, late Israel Sibley's, H. 205. The house stood about 15 rods east of the main street, and was a large two-story, gambrel-roofed building, and for 45 years was the principal public house of the village. In 1734 Elijah, son of Richard Moore, assumed the business, continuing until 1760. A change was then made in the location of the popular resort of the people for public and social gatherings to a more eligible location, northerly on the main street. Dr. Alexander Campbell that year purchased the estate at the present corner of Main and Charlton Streets, where he opened the place which for almost a hundred years thereafter was the chief public house of the town.¹ In 1762 Dr. Campbell was succeeded as owner by Hezekiah Bellows from Dudley, who had been innkeeper there. He remained until 1766 when Dr. Stephen Barton succeeded him, having leased the house of Obadiah McIntire of Charlton. Ephraim Ballard was the next tenant, and was licensed from 1769 to Nov., 1773, when the property was sold to Ezra Bowman, previously of Dudley, then taverner at North Oxford. He was a man of enterprise, remodelled and enlarged the buildings and for a time was successful, but the reverses of the Revolutionary period so reduced his means that he was obliged to retire, and in 1782 he sold and soon after removed from town. Dr. Joseph Lord, of whom but little is known, was the next occupant and managed the business in 1783. In 1784 Samuel Campbell with his father-in-law, John Nichols, bought the estate, and Campbell began the landlordship which was continued for nearly 25 years. In the latter part of 1807 he became financially embarrassed, and from 1808 to 1811 the business was conducted in the name of Henry Campbell, his son. In 1812 they removed to Vermont and the tavern was taken by his brother, Maj. Archibald Campbell. He being an enterprising and competent business man the popularity of the house was sustained until his decease, in 1818. In April, 1819, the place was sold to Richard Olney, who

continued until the spring of 1823, when Joseph Haynes of Leicester came in on a lease. He remained but a few months and sold his lease to Jonathan Flagg of Worcester who was landlord until the spring of 1827, when he left and Benjamin F. Town and Andrew Sigourney in partnership became lessees and conducted the house until 1830. During their occupancy the hall and store under it were enlarged by extending the building north. Peter D. and Daniel D. Clemence occupied in 1831; Daniel D. Clemence alone in 1832-3, and in 1834 Jonathan H. Learned, assisted by his uncle, Henry G. Learned, became manager and continued until August of that year, when he gave up the business to William H. Bigelow, who was landlord until after 1 May, 1836. Some time in that year Daniel Moulton came in (Bigelow and Moulton both having been licensed), continuing until 1838. In the spring of 1838 William C. Walker bought the property and took possession. He had means and efficiency, and expended liberally in repairs, enlarged the house and built a portico across the whole front, 70 feet or more. Erastus Ormsbee of Thompson leased the place in the spring of 1840 and left in 1841. James G. Scott with his brother Rufus succeeded Ormsbee and remained until June, 1842. Ormsbee was again licensed in 1842 and perhaps returned for a few months. Rice Barton in partnership with Amasa Dowe occupied next in 1843, Dowe retiring after six months. Barton continued until 1845, in September of which year Sumner Holman was "licensed to sell liquors in the building occupied by Rice Barton," Charles C., son of Liberty Lamb, being his partner. In April, 1846, Barton resumed the management, having bought one-half the estate, and continued until April, 1853, when he sold to Franklin F. Snow and Otis Learned. The latter kept the house with Sanford Jones as partner at one time, until it was taken by Snow (Learned still living there), who was landlord 21 April, 1854, at the time of its destruction by fire.

In April, 1846, the estate was owned by Rice Barton and Alexander DeWitt. Learned and Snow bought Barton's interest and Emory Sanford bought DeWitt's. Learned then bought Snow's share, and after the fire Sanford and Learned made a division, Sanford taking the south part, on which he built the present brick store, and Learned the north, on which he erected the present hotel building for a residence. In the fall of 1858, after enlarging the house, he opened it to the public, continuing until Aug., 1859, when Alexander T. and H. Wilbur Snow, brothers, came in. Before May, 1860, they sold to Erastus W. Whiting, who managed the house a few months, and in the fall of 1860 was succeeded by L. A. Presby (in 1889 of Waterville, Me.), who continued until April, 1862, when Braman F. Sibley became the lessee and remained one year. April 1, 1863, Whiting again took the house, Sibley having removed to Farnumsville. In Feb., 1863, Sibley bought a mortgage of the estate and April 1, 1864, returned and took possession, continuing until his sale to Alfred J.

Kirby in 1877. Kirby sold in 1879 to Henry J. Whiting who was landlord until 1887, when he sold to the present proprietor and occupant, Hollis D. W. Bacon.

It will be readily seen that with the teaming, staging and private travel over the country roads previous to the era of railroads, and the trainings, musters and convivial habits of the people, the country tavern in former days was a far different institution from what it now is. In the early part of the present century the old tavern on the Plain was by far the busiest place in the region. The travel from Woodstock, Dudley, Honest-Town [Southbridge], Charlton and beyond, all passed here, and the "Campbell Tavern" was well known for many miles in all directions as a place where large quantities of liquors were consumed. A favorite beverage for which the place was noted was "flip," a mixture of New England rum and strong beer, sweetened with brown sugar and heated by plunging into it a hot iron called a loggerhead. It was a popular saying that a huge serpent lay across the three contiguous towns, Sutton, Oxford and Charlton, with the head in the former place and the body in Oxford.¹

Butler Tavern. The second in importance of the public houses in Oxford was that opposite the north common, long known as the "Butler Tavern." The house, now standing, was built about 1748 by Duncan Campbell, who had begun business a year or two previous to this date, where is not known. He continued to receive a license as innholder until 1763, and may have moved his place of business, perhaps his trading, to his new house at the head of the Plain, later Josiah Wolcott's. He met with reverses in 1765, and soon after removed to Dudley. In 1778 Sylvanus Town bought the stand and removed thither, and was licensed innkeeper until his sale of the place in March, 1780, to James Butler, who was legalized innholder 25 years, his son Peter succeeding him in 1806, and continuing to 1822. At that date Sylvester McIntire took the business, Butler having removed to his new brick house and store on the opposite corner. McIntire was landlord two years, and in 1825 Samuel C., son of Peter Butler, succeeded him. In the fall of 1827 he retired and Archibald Campbell came in and remained until the spring of 1828. Samuel C. Butler occupied a part of the house while others were in charge of the business, and in 1827 made repairs and built the tavern hall as it now is. In 1828 Henry G. Learned was lessee and occupied until 1831, when Solomon Davis succeeded him, and was licensee for that and the next year. In 1833 Jasper Brown purchased the property and was that year and 1834 licensed, and with his brother Daniel kept a public house and also a store. In 1835 Daniel D. Clemence understand you are going to Oxford to live; is that so?" "Yes," was the reply, "I am thinking of it." "Well," said his friend, "you must look out, they drink flip there like the d—l."

was occupant, and later Daniel Moulton and Ansel Whitcomb each managed for a time. Daniel Brown was licensee in 1838-9, and Jasper Brown in 1840-41.¹ Business here gradually declined and no public house has been kept since about 1842.

North Oxford Tavern. The principal public house at North Oxford was originally a part of the "Lamb Mill" estate, owned and occupied by Reuben Lamb, whose son Joseph inherited it, and settled there about 1814, opening a tavern as early as 1823. He discovered a reputed medicinal spring on the premises, and considerable interest was awakened in the community as to its healing qualities, in consequence of which he advertised as a "Medicinal Spring Boarding-house," but did not meet with extraordinary success.² In June, 1826, Richard C. Stone became the proprietor. Very little was heard thereafter of the medicinal qualities of the spring. Stone kept the house until Dec., 1829, when it was bought by Henry J. Stratford, who occupied it until 1833 at least, and in 1834 removed from town. In June, 1834, Thomas Clark became the occupant, who with Ansel Whitcomb kept it for a few months, when Clark retired, Whitcomb continuing until the sale of the property to Joshua O. Battey, Jan., 1837. Battey was owner and occupant, with his son Lafayette, who was proprietor in the later years, until Feb., 1875, when the estate was sold to Eliza McMahon. The business of the place later became inconsiderable, and on 3 June, 1877, all the buildings were burned.

There were in different portions of the town other licensed public houses, indicating that in many cases, where dwellings were sufficiently large to accommodate guests, the people availed themselves of the small pecuniary advantages offered by the entertainment of occasional travellers. Moses Marcy was licensee in 1736 and 1738 at the extreme west, now Southbridge. In the western part of the "Country Gore," now Charlton, John Thompson was licensee from 1745 to 1750 inclusive, and gave place in 1751 to Jonathan Wheelock, who continued many years after Charlton was set off. East of the river, in the Gore, Josiah Gibbs was licensed 1746-7. Samuel Curtis succeeded him in 1749, remaining until 1751. Uriah Stone followed in 1752 and continued until 1783 inclusive. He sold his estate in 1787 to his son Samuel, who continued the business a short time, having been licensed in 1790 and 1791. After this date appears no public house authorized in that locality.

At the Centre, William Davis was licensed as innholder in 1739 and ¹ Whitcomb was landlord at least from June, 1837, to April, 1838, and Daniel Brown in Nov., 1838, and April, 1839.

²The Worcester Spy of 23 Aug., 1825, has an advertisement, a part of which is as follows: "The waters of the Oxford Mineral Spring have been analyzed by Simeon Colton of Monson Academy, and found to contain Carbonate of Soda, Murate of Soda, Sulphate of Magnesia and Carbonate of Iron. The Carbonate of Soda and Murate appear to be the most abundant. Mr. Colton observes that the waters possess so many properties of the Ballston Springs, that the subscriber feels a confidence in recommending it to the public. It has been found of greatest utility in cutaneous eruptions, Scrophula, Dyspepsia, &c."

1740, as retailer in 1741 and 1742, and innholder again in 1743, where located, as before stated, is unknown. In 1744 Samuel Davis had a tavern license. Josiah Wolcott was authorized taverner from 1754, the date of his purchase at the north end of the Plain, H. 189, until 1765, inclusive. In the north part of the town, now Auburn, Ebenezer Cutler kept a tavern and store and was in 1765 licensed to sell tea, coffee and chinaware, and thereafter until 1770, inclusive, was a legalized innholder. Duncan Campbell succeeded him in 1771, continuing until 1780. In 1784 Campbell was licensed to keep a hotel at Worcester. David Gleason was innholder in the north part of Oxford, now Auburn, from 1768 to 1773, inclusive. In 1770 Jacob Pierce, after purchasing the place at North Oxford, now Nathaniel Ide's, H. 125, opened there a public house, which he kept until his decease in 1772. In 1773 Ezra Bowman took the business, continuing one year, which terminated the use of the place as a tavern. In the east part of the town a public house was kept in 1764 by Edward Davis, Jr., at H. 12. In 1765 and 1766 Nathaniel, his brother, was licensed at the same place. He removed to Dudley and no further licenses were granted for that location. Ebenezer Learned was authorized to sell spirits and to keep a tavern from 1761 to 1765 at H. 126. In the south part of the town, H. 64, Peter Shumway began as retailer of spirits in 1772 and 1773, and continued as innholder from 1776 to 1796. James Freeland was licensed taverner in 1776, and retailer in 1777 at H. 171. Jonas Pratt was authorized to keep a tavern near Town's Pond, H. 140, in 1778 and 1779. John Wolcott was innholder 1776 to 1778. Samuel Campbell was licensed innkeeper from 1778 to 1784 (the time of his beginning at the Centre tavern), at what locality is unknown, perhaps in the west part of the town.

Traders and Stores. The beginnings of trade were small. In the last century transactions were largely in the line of barter, and a store was often an adjunct to a tavern. Thus William Davis at the Centre was trader and taverner 1739-43; Duncan Campbell at the north common, the same, licensed to sell tea, coffee and chinaware, 1750, '54, '55, '58, '61; Jacob Pierce, 1767-9, at North Oxford, H. 125; Ephraim Ballard was licensed retailer 1752-8, probably at Augutteback village, and 1771 was taxed for goods £40 at the Centre tavern; William Phipps, 1770-3, at north part, now Auburn; Theophilus Lillie, 1770, on the Plain, H. 205, taxed 1771 for shop and goods £200, the largest stock then in town; Robert Fitts, 1771, taxed for "goods and wares" £30 at H. 148; William Campbell, 1771, taxed £20 for same, probably at the Eliott mill; Uriah Stone, North Gore, 1762, was licensed to sell tea, coffee, etc.; Stephen Barton, the same, 1764, on the Plain; James Freeland, 1773-8, at North Oxford, H. 131; John Wolcott, 1776-87, at north end of the Plain; James Butler, soon after 1780 was a leading merchant, taxed 1784 for £120; Charles Dabney, Sept., 1780, sold sugar and coffee, location unknown, but at H. 125 or 225; Andrew Sigourney traded for a time in partnership with James Butler from 1784, removing about 1787 to the Plain where he became the leading merchant, continuing until 1816. William, his son, succeeded him, continuing until 1840 and removed to his new "Arcade" building east of the railroad, but the business declined. William Lamson traded, 1801-4, at site of Episcopal Church. Timothy Lamson succeeded him and perhaps removed to his residence, nearly opposite, H. 225, continuing until near 1810. Rufus Moore, nail maker, traded at "Saccarappa," H. 18, 1808-9 and 1814-18. Sylvanus Pratt, scythe maker, 1811-12, near North Oxford railroad station. Josiah Ware about 1812 traded in a shop on south side the common near H. 243, continuing about two years. Abijah Davis traded in north end of his house, H. 220, 1812, continuing three years at least, with Edward and John Wetherell, clerks. John Wetherell and Richard Moore, partners, bought his stock and went on a year or more, and 1815 built the house, H. 221, late Benjamin Paine, and soon after a store south of it which they occupied. In two years Moore left and built the Col. DeWitt house, H. 226, and there opened a store, continuing until his death in 1819. Wetherell remained at the old stand until 1835 when he retired. Stearns Witt took Moore's stock in 1820, employing Samuel Dowse as clerk, and in 1821 Witt and Dowse became partners, Hollis Witt clerk. They continued at H. 226 until 1824, and removed to the new store next the Bank, built that year; were successful for 12 years and were the leaders of trade in town. In 1826 Witt left to take charge of the Oxford Woolen Co. affairs.

Witt & Dowse Store. Later occupants have been: 1829, Benjamin F. Campbell and Dowse, name Dowse & Campbell; 1831, Wilson Olney, name Dowse, Campbell & Olney; 1833, Alvan G. Underwood, name Campbell, Olney & Underwood; 1834, Underwood left, name Campbell & Olney; 1835, Olney left and Campbell was alone; 1837, Samuel Dowse, Daniel T. Penniman, Seth Daniels, Elihu Harwood, Jr., and Sanford Gilmore, the store having been joined with the shoe business at south end of the Plain; 1838, Dowse & Penniman; 1839, Daniel T. Penniman; Loriston Shumway succeeded Penniman, and in 1840-1 Dowse resumed and the name was Dowse & Shumway; 1843, Loriston Shumway; 1844, Dowse & Underwood; 1845, Underwood & Shumway; 1845, Underwood went into the bank, Washburn Lombard taking his place in the store, name Shumway & Lombard; 1848, "Protective Union," Joseph Pelton, agent, who with Rufus L. Smith bought the stock, the Union having been unsuccessful, and 1849 the name was Pelton & Smith; 1851, Smith was alone, Lewis W. Spaulding clerk; 1854, Charles H. Robinson; 1855, L. F. Woodbury; 1859, Paul Buffum, who sold out the stock and the building for several years was unoccupied; late in 1863 or early in 1864, Freeman Freeland occupied for a short time only. Before May, 1867, Charles I. Rawson and Arthur E. Codding of North Attleborough began flour trade, closed in a few months and the place was again unoccupied. Before May, 1870, Paul Buffum was again here and early in 1871 sold to Baxter E. Davis and Olin O. Foster. In May, 1876, Foster was proprietor and before May, 1881, Eugene Wetherell became a partner, continuing to 1887, when the stock was sold to William J. Lourie, who in a few months sold to Cornelius Putnam and Andrew J. Davis, present occupants.

Butler Store. As noted, Duncan Campbell was first trader at this location, was succeeded by Sylvanus Town, who sold, 1780, to James Butler,¹ who carried on a successful business until 1806, when his son Peter became proprietor. In 1822 Peter Butler removed to the brick store, then new, H. 177, and in 1830 retired, Danforth Brown following, who in about a year sold to his brother Jasper Brown, who removed the stock to his own premises near, and continued until 1849, when he relinquished trade.

Centre Tavern Store. At this stand trade was carried on by nearly all the tavern keepers up to 1823. In 1800 Henry B. Morgan was partner with Samuel Campbell. In 1804 Aaron McIntire of Charlton and later Rufus and Henry Campbell were managers. From 1812 for several years Maj. Archibald Campbell continued the business, and Stearns Witt and Daniel Hovey of Sutton were later partners with him, Hollis Witt and Lyrick Lamson being clerks, name Archibald Campbell & Co.. Hovey left and Joab Maynard came in for a time, the firm being Witt & Maynard. Stearns and Hollis Witt were proprietors from April, 1817, to June, 1818, at least. Richard Olney came next, 1819-1823. In 1825 Andrew Sigourney, Jr., took the store, Benjamin F. Town becoming a partner in 1827, in store and tavern. Danforth Brown and Edmund F. Dixie next came in 1829. Thereafter the store and tavern were separate. Brown left 1830. Dixie continued until 1833 and was succeeded by Daniel T. Penniman, who remained about two years. Stephen Prince occupied in 1836-7, and Capt. Wolstan Dixie in 1838. William Robinson & Co. followed, occupying in 1839-40. Erastus Ormsbee came in 1841, remaining till the spring of 1846, and trade terminated at that locality.

Universalist Church Store. Ormsbee removed, 1846, to this place, continuing until Oct., 1858. Benjamin W. Childs succeeded him, and Oct., 1868, Albert E. Merriam and William E. Bardwell followed, continuing until Dec., 1876, when they retired, selling the grocery to James B. Campbell and the dry goods to Daniel R. Cortis and Amasa Stowe. In April, 1882, Campbell sold to Leonard E. Thayer and Alvan R. Bowdish, present owners. Cortis and Stowe continued until Dec., 1885, and removed to the brick store formerly Wm. E. Pease & Co. Thayer & Bowdish taking the vacated premises for a dry goods department.

Stephen Prince, Jr., on leaving the tavern store, 1838, removed to the "Cash Store," on site of Town Hall, continuing until 1840, removed to his own house, H. 226, and before May, 1843, sold to Sumner Putnam, who about one year later gave up the business. Before May, 1845, Prince erected a one-story building on the site of Joslin's shoe factory and there traded in flour, grain, etc. He sold, 1846, to Emory Sanford.¹

Cash Store. This had been many years occupied as a tailor's shop. After Stephen Prince, Jr., left, William Robinson in 1841 took possession and before May, 1843, sold to William Parker, who continued till his decease in the winter of 1846-7. Later irresponsible tenants occupied who brought the place into ill repute, and Oct., 1849, a party of young men "raided" the establishment and it was closed up. In May, 1850, Caleb Larned was owner of the estate and in about two years sold to Asa H. Pope, who opened a market, continuing to 19 Oct., 1856, when the building was burned. The lot was sold to the town for a Town Hall.

Emory Sanford began, 1832, at Texas Village, continuing about four years; on 1 Jan., 1837, began with his brother Richard at Rochdale; 1839, bought the brick store at North Oxford, and with his brother, James M., traded several years; removed, 1846, to the Plain to the site of Joslin's shoe factory, with Horace DeW. Smith as partner, who retired 1847. In 1850 James M. Sanford and William E. Pease took the business under the name Sanford & Pease. In 1854 Edward S. Pease bought Sanford's interest and the firm became William E. Pease & Co. The brick store on the old tavern site was built 1855 and occupied 1 Jan., 1856. A large business was here transacted for many years. In Dec., 1885, the stock was sold to Cortis, Stow & Co., the present occupants.

The store on the corner near the railroad station was built about 1842 by Andrew Sigourney, Jr., where he kept hardware one year. Later it was occupied as follows: by Paul Perkins and James G. Scott, 1844, variety store and Post-office; by Lyman P. Low and Chad B. Carey, store, 1847; several years thereafter by shoe manufacturers; 1857, by James C. Mills, trader; 1860, William H. Harrington, who late in 1862 resold to Mills; Jan., 1869, P. Lafayette Rich and Asa F. Rich came in, the latter leaving at the end of the year, the former continuing a few months in 1870 and retired; Whiting & Campbell next kept a market here; before May, 1874, John W. Marsh occupied as trader, remaining until 1884; in 1885 Daniel P. Shea, with another, occupied about one year; later the place was used as a market.

¹ This building was occupied in 1856 as a tailor's shop by A. H. Newton, and in part by young men as a club-room, and was burned 8 Nov., 1856.

Hawes Store. At this location trade was carried on early by the owners of the mills near, by William Campbell, 1768 to 1776; Amos Hudson, 1815 to 1817, at least; later by Pope & Warner; 1826 to 1850, Ashbel M. Hawes; 1850 to 1861, I. Sumner Hawes, the last at that locality.

Rockdale Store. Joseph Stone traded near Sigourney mill, 1814; Thomas W. Chapman at Rockdale from before May, 1828, to spring of 1835; Bartlett and Barrett, 1835-6; Damon & Bartlett later for several years; Thomas Clark, 1846; William A. White, 1847, one year; George Hobart, Jr., 1852-3.

Brick Store. Albert Guild was agent for Daniel T. Wheeler, Worcester, 1833; Guild and Joseph Stafford, partners, stock taxed 1834 to their assignees; later came Richard Sanford, 1835-6; Emory and James M. Sanford, 1837 to 1841; Andrew J. Copp & Co., 1842; Sanford Brothers, 1844; Hobart C. and Edward A. Cutler, 1845; Hobart C. Cutler, 1846; Moies and Wilmarth, 1847; Rufus L. Smith, 1848; about this date, William Sigourney (William Tourtellott and Washburn Lumbard, managers); Amos Aldrich, 1851; H. G. O. and Silas S. Taft, fall of 1851; Lewis M. and Benjamin F. Learned, spring of 1852; Lewis M. Learned bought out Benjamin F. Learned, Sept., 1860; R. Alonzo Aborn and E. Gerry Warren, 1862-3; Lewis M. Learned sold the building, Feb., 1864, to Lafayette E. Battey, who occupied 1864-5; Albert W. Kelley and — Fowler came next, Fowler left before May, 1868; Albert W. Kelley, 1870; Silas S. Taft, 1871, he died Sept., 1871, his brother, H. G. Otis Taft, went on until 1876, when James O. Copp became partner, the firm continuing until 1882; Daniel W. Mann, 1882 to 1886; Fred. Thayer bought, summer of 1886, and is present owner.

Thomas Clark built a store near Sigourney Mill, 1847, and occupied; Isaac L. Brown and Samuel Healy owned 1851; Brown died March, 1852, Healy and Elisha M. Smith continued; Smith owned in 1855, continuing until 1864 and Allen F. Brown in 1865-6; Henry S. Brady, Jr., traded here in 1869 a few months, the last at this locality.

Next below Clark's, Silas S. Taft and Joseph Burrough, partners, began before May, 1861; Burrough left before May, 1864; Taft went on till 1868; John W. Robinson succeeded in 1869; later for a time the manufacturing company owned; before May, 1871, E. Harris Howland, previously at the lower store, came in and operated until after May, 1875, when he sold to Lucius H., his brother, who continued until 1884; John W. England then became partner; before May, 1885, Howland retired, and a few months later England removed from town.

At the lower store William S. Dunbar and Hosea Grover began before May, 1865; John W. Robinson followed in about three years, and before May, 1870, E. H. Howland became owner, removing before May, 1871, to the store above. In 1886, Learned, Howard & Co., proprietors of the mill, opened a store, and sold, 1887, to Benjamin F. Learned, who in 1887 sold to Mart A. Howard, present proprietor.

Texas Store. After Sanford left, Jan., 1837, little was done until 1844, when the Manufacturing Company began trade under the management of Albert Huntington, who in 1847 became owner. The burning of the mill, 1850, terminated the business. H. G. O. Taft has kept a small store at his residence, H. 116.

Mrs. Sigourney's Store was long an important institution of Oxford, where a thriving business was transacted in millinery, dress-making and the sale of dry and fancy goods. Business began in the old Sigourney mansion as early as 1828, and continued in the commodious house, now standing, until near the decease of Mrs. Sigourney in 1885. In its palmiest days patronage came from all the surrounding towns, and for many years it was the leading establishment in the line in the south part of the county.

Dr. Daniel Fisk kept a small store before 1800 near his home, H. 141. His son, William T., continued the business, 1802 to 1810, when Amos Hudson, his brother-in-law, became partner, continuing several years, and removed to the Central Cotton Manufacturing works at Hawes' place, remaining until 1817. Joab Maynard was proprietor at the Fisk store, 1818, going on perhaps two years, and trade at that place terminated. Peter Spaulding was trader, 1806, at the fork of Thompson and Webster roads, south. Abisha Learned at Texas Village, 1813-14, Charles Cleaveland, 1814, William Dudley, 1823-25, Charles Preston, 1825, Charles Lawton, 1842, all at North Oxford, indicating that they, at or near their places of manufacturing, had stores connected therewith. Other like places of trade have existed in the factory villages of the town.

Oxford Post-office was established 1 Jan., 1801, Samuel Campbell postmaster, and the mail arrived and was forwarded once a week. The office was at the Centre tavern until 1809, when Archibald Campbell, brother of Samuel, was made postmaster, and it was removed to his dwelling on the site of the Episcopal Church. In 1811 William Sigourney was appointed Campbell's assistant, took charge of the business, and for a few months the location was at his tannery, 100 rods east of Main Street. It was removed thence to the store of Andrew Sigourney, Sen., at the corner of Sutton Avenue and Main Street, where it continued until 1840, William having succeeded his father in trade here, and having been made postmaster on Campbell's decease in 1818. In 1840 he built the "Arcade," near the railroad on the east, and removed his business and the Post-office thither. In 1844 James G. Scott succeeded him and the office was removed to the Andrew Sigourney building on Sutton Avenue, near the railroad station, where Scott & Perkins kept a store. In 1846 Scott resigned in favor of Willard Benson, who took the office back to the Arcade building, where it continued until his decease, Jan., 1847, when Emory Sanford received the appointment and the office was removed to his store on the site of Joslin's shoe shop. William E. Pease was assistant, and in Jan., 1850, was appointed postmaster. On 1 Jan., 1856, the office was removed to the new brick store on Charlton Street corner, where it remained until after the election of Cleveland, and 26 Oct., 1885, Henry A. Moffitt was appointed postmaster and the office was taken to Sigourney's building near Joslin's shoe factory. Moffitt was succeeded, 19 Oct., 1889, by Willis M. Wellington, who removed the office to its present location (1890) on Charlton Street.

The gross receipts have been: 1850, $915; 1860, $831; 1870, $1,131; 1880, $1,315. Postmaster's compensation: 1850, $386; 1855, $533; 1860, $464; 1865, $570; 1868, $620; 1870, $650; 1875, $741; 1880, $946; 1885, $780.¹

The matter forwarded for six days from 1 Dec., 1880, was as follows: letters, 946; postals, 348; other parcels, 232; total, 1,526. The postal facilities are ample, there being five inward and six outward mails daily.

South Oxford Office. The present Webster Post-office was established 7 Jan., 1828, at South Oxford, now East Village, George W. Kimball (accountant of Samuel Slater) postmaster, and the office was at his counting-room in a part of the old "Green Mill." On 9 April, 1829, Kimball was succeeded by William H. Bigelow, trader, and the office was at his store, near the corner of Thompson road. The next incumbent was Rev. Thomas Barrett, who came in on 22 April, 1832, and continued until his decease, 7 Aug., 1832. On 24 Aug. Jonathan Day, successor in trade to Bigelow, received the appointment. The name of the office was changed to "Webster" 21 March, 1832, and about 1840, on the opening of the railroad, it was removed to the present Webster town.

North Oxford Office was established in 1837, Abisha Learned postmaster. It remained in Texas Village until the appointment of his successor, Loren C. Parks, in 1851, when it was removed to the store of Waterman A. Fisher, about one mile further south. In 1853 Capt. Stephen Barton, Jr., succeeded Parks, and the office was removed to his counting-room. In 1854 it was again removed to Fisher's store, where it remained until the appointment of Thomas Harrington in 1856, who established it at the residence of Joseph Stone, where it has since remained. Harrington was succeeded by Luther Clemence in Feb., 1857, who held the office until the following May, when the present incumbent, Miss Martha E. Stone, was appointed.

Carriers. In the last century the principal means of communication with the outside world was through carriers. Boston was the market and source of supplies, and regular trips were made thither, at first with oxen, and later horse carts and wagons, carrying occasionally a passenger, but mainly farmers' produce, which was marketed; and the return commodities were chiefly rum, molasses, codfish, tea, salt and spices, the main stock of the country traders. Joseph Davis, known as "Honest Jo," was for many years the principal carrier, and later James Gleason, James Williams, William Hurd and Joel Eddy were each long in the service.¹

The first regular messenger between Oxford and Worcester so far as known was Daniel Mansfield of Dudley, who began about 1805, and whose weekly route was from Worcester to Ashford, Conn., carrying the mail and the weekly newspapers, going on horseback through Millbury, Sutton, Oxford, Dudley and Woodstock. As business increased he drove a wagon and carried passengers and parcels. About 1824 the mails were transferred to the stages, but newspaper carrying was continued, and David Keith, who began 1807, and Joshua Healy, both of Dudley, and George Nolen of Oxford and Levi Upham of Dudley in turn kept up the route as far as Dudley until after 1850.

Stages. The first public conveyance to and from Worcester, of which we have knowledge, was that managed for a short time in the early part of the century by Henry B. Morgan. The first regular line of stages was established in 1824 and ran from Dudley through Oxford, Sutton and Millbury to Worcester, leaving Dudley early each Thursday morning and reaching Worcester in time for the noon stage for Boston. Joshua Healy was first driver. After a time the route was changed, and as business increased trips were made three times a week from Dudley to Boston direct. This was continued (running to Westboro after the Boston and Worcester railroad was completed) until the opening of the Norwich and Worcester road in 1840. The second and more important was the line from Worcester to New York via Norwich, and was established June, 1826. Stages left Worcester at 4 o'clock A. M. on Sunday and Wednesday (later changed to Monday and Friday), passing through Ward, Oxford (where passengers breakfasted), Dudley, Woodstock, Pomfret, Brooklyn, Canterbury and Lisbon to Norwich, whence the little steamer "Fanny," leaving Norwich at 6 P. M., ran in fair and calm weather to New York, arriving at from 7 to 10 o'clock A. M.² As Worcester and the business of the Quinebaug valley developed other and larger boats were required, and trips were made daily with constantly increasing business until the opening of the Norwich and Worcester railroad in 1840, when it became one of the main lines of travel between Boston and the metropolis.

Tee 2s. 9d.: one quarter of Indego 2s. 2d.: two Boushels Salt, 3s. 6d."

² The "Fanny" began her trips to New York 1 March, 1826. Prior to that time a small steam craft had plied between Norwich and New Haven, where connection was made with a boat thence to New York.

In 1834 a line of stages ran from Worcester to Hartford through Oxford. Passengers to Hartford breakfasted here and dined in returning.

Fire Apparatus. In Nov., 1856, there having been four destructive fires in the town that year, the selectmen were instructed to buy a fire engine to be located on the Plain. This engine was purchased in 1857 at a cost of $1,000. In March, 1857, William Stone, Charles Fuller and William A. Wheelock were appointed as engineers and supervisors of the Fire Department. In May the selectmen were authorized to purchase a hose cart and 300 feet of hose, which was done at a cost of $558. A company was formed under the name of the "Col. DeWitt Engine Company," which organization has been continued until the present time, the town making a yearly appropriation for its benefit. The Company has been efficient, but the principal hindrance to its work has been the want of water.

An engine house, was built by subscription in 1858. No conveyance of it to the town has been found. The engineers' report for 1859 recommended that it be conveyed by the subscribers and in May, 1859, the town voted its acceptance and also land belonging to the same, which was given by Col. DeWitt, and deeded 6 Aug., 1864.

Steamer. In Jan., 1884, the town voted to purchase a steam fire-engine to be located at North Oxford, and chose Samuel R. Barton, Nathaniel E. Taft and Thomas J. Maxwell to procure the same. In the following April it was voted to build a house for its accommodation, and in April, 1885, the sum of $1,300 was voted to finish the said house with a hall in the second story. The purchasing committee reported in the spring of 1884 that they had contracted with the Silsby Manufacturing Company of Seneca Falls, N. Y., for a No. 5 Holley Rotary Engine with heater, for $3,350, and with the American Fire Hose Manufacturing Co. of Chelsea for 1,000 feet of fabric rubber-lined hose at 85 cents per foot, and also with Smallridge & Bourget of Worcester for a hose wagon at $225. Harness was bought of John Turcott at a cost of $200. Of the expense of this apparatus and house, $800 was paid in 1884, $5,143 before the annual meeting of 1885, and in 1885 $1,378, making a total of $7,321.

List of Fires.¹ Dr. Alexander Campbell; 1 Nov., 1771, house on Sutton road, H. 195.

In a large majority of cases the destruction of buildings was complete.

Nov. 1, 1771. This day about 10 o'clock A. M. the dwelling house of Dr. Alexander Campbell, at Oxford, took fire by one of his apprentices breaking a bottle of oil of turpentine, which held about seven gallons, by taking ashes, supposed to be cold, to clean it. It took fire and violently ran to other bottles, which burst, and forced open the door of the room where the Doctor's wife lay, as she had lain in but a few days, who immediately was carried out with her bed and bedding, which is all that was saved, except a few trifles. His books and all his accounts, were entirely consumed, as also a fine assortment of drugs, newly imported from England. This house was finished to the doctor's mind, which he enjoyed but a few weeks, and then, the account says, this cruel Master deprived him thereof: Not leaving him nor his a shift of clothing to put on. The loss is computed at least to be one thousand pounds, lawful money. [Mass. His. Soc. Col., I. vol., 2 series, 89.]

Masonic Lodges. The first Masonic organization in the town was the Olive Branch Lodge. A movement was made for its formation early in 1797, and on 1 May officers were chosen as follows :—

JONATHAN LEARNED, Master.
 DANIEL FISK, Sen. Warden.
 JONATHAN DAVIS, Jun. Warden.
 SYLVANUS TOWN, Treas.
 JONATHAN HARRIS, Sen. Dea.
 JEREMIAH KINGSBURY, Jun. Dea.
 NATHANIEL WHITMORE, } Stewards.
 PETER BUTLER, }
 WILLIAM ROBINSON, Tyler.

A committee was chosen to petition the Grand Lodge for a charter and a vote passed to hold meetings monthly on Mondays at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. A charter was granted the 14th of the following September. The petitioners named were: Jonathan Harris, Allen Hancock, Jonathan Davis, Ebenezer Rich, Samuel Davis, Jeremiah Kingsbury, Reuben Baxter, Jr., Daniel Fisk, Jonathan Learned, Peter Butler, William Robinson, Abel Morse, John Brown, Daniel Hunt, Sylvanus Town, Sylvanus Learned, Nathaniel Whitmore, Amos Keith, Simeon Waters, Moses Sibley, Jr., Ebenezer Dean, Parley Barton, Joseph Howland and Elijah Brown.

Hall. On 25 Sept., 1797, it was voted that the hall for the use of the Lodge, when built, shall be set within three-fourths of a mile of the house of Jonathan Davis. This house was the well known Davis homestead, No. 12, and this vote indicates that a large share of the membership was in Sutton. No hall was built in this town, but the house of Mr. Davis was thereafter the regular place of meeting during the continuance of the Lodge in Oxford. Occasionally meetings were held in the tavern hall on the Plain. In Nov., 1797, it was voted to pay Brother Jonathan Davis $24 per year for the use of the hall, furnished and warmed.

On 13 Sept., 1798, the before named officers were duly installed at the "new meeting-house," Universalist. The members met at Campbell's tavern, whence the procession marched at 12 o'clock to the Meeting-house, where, after a sermon by Thaddeus M. Harris, the ceremony of installation was performed.¹ The procession returned to the hall and "from thence to a booth prepared for that purpose and partook of an elegant dinner."

In Nov., 1814, a new hall was projected, and in Aug., 1815, a committee chosen to finish and furnish the same. The new quarters were built at West Sutton and were first occupied 21 Feb., 1816.

Removal. On 15 Sept., 1815, leave was given to remove the Lodge to Sutton. In March, 1845, it was again removed to Wilkinsonville. In Dec., 1856, permission was granted to hold meetings alternately at Sutton and Webster. After 8 Sept., 1858, all the meetings were at Sutton. On 14 Dec., 1859, leave was granted to remove to Millbury. Early in 1860 the removal was made and the Lodge has since continued there.

Oxford Lodge. The second organization was the "Oxford Lodge," instituted 4 Dec., 1825, on petition of John Wetherell and others. The first meeting was in the Butler tavern hall, 25 Dec.; present: Samuel Harris, John Field, Elihu Harwood, Jr., Thomas Warner, Stephen Learned, John Wetherell, Stephen Barton, Peter Butler, John Mellish, Richard Olney, Samuel C. Butler, Artemas G. Metcalf, Jonathan A. Pope, Jonathan Harris, Rufus Moore. Samuel Harris was chosen Worthy Master; John Field, Senior Warden; Elihu Harwood, Jr., Junior Warden, and Jonathan A. Pope, Secretary. An installation of officers took place at the old Meeting-house on 27 Sept., 1826, at which Rev. David Holman of Douglas gave an address. About 20 officials from the Grand Lodge and like institutions in towns near Oxford were present, and a dinner was provided by Mr. Samuel C. Butler at his tavern. On 27 Oct., 1828, it was voted to remove the place of meeting to the tavern on the Plain. Regular meetings were kept up until 1831, at which date the records end. An officer of the Mass. Grand Lodge at Boston writes: "It [the Lodge] probably died of the Anti-Masonic scare about 1831."

Third Lodge. On 23 Sept., 1859, the following petitioned for a new Lodge under the name of the former: Alexander DeWitt, John Wetherell, Loriston Shumway, Elihu Harwood, John A. McGaw, T. W. Wilmarth, Lovell H. Cleveland, Loren C. Parks, A. W. Fullerton, Wm. A. White, Clovis M. Gates, William Kimball, Daniel Davis, Jonathan Davis, William Sigourney, Archibald Campbell, Dennis S. B. Gates, Leander P. Cobb, Jonas Bacon, Benjamin Paine. The Lodge was duly instituted at Masonic Hall in the upper part of the shoe shop of Davis & Williams on Sutton Avenue. In 1860 the present hall, over the store near the Bank, was occupied. On 5 Oct., a charter having been received, the hall was consecrated, and the officers of the Lodge installed by public services in the Universalist Meeting-house, as follows: Geo. Mason, W. Master; T. W. Wilmarth, Sen. Warden; Loren C. Parks, Jun. Warden; Jonas Bacon, Treas.; William A. White, Sec.; Elihu Harwood, Chaplain; John Wetherell, Marshal; H. L. Shumway, Sen. Deacon; William Hughes, Jun. Deacon; Pliny M. Harwood, Sen. Steward; Eben Walsh, Jun. Steward; Henry Boyden, Tyler. The meetings have been kept up at the aforesaid hall to the present day.

The Worthy Masters have been: Samuel Harris, chosen 1825; Alexander DeWitt, chosen 1826; Ira Barton, chosen 1829; Sumner Barstow, chosen 1831; Geo. Mason, chosen 1860; T. W. Wilmarth, chosen 1861; Loren C. Parks, chosen 1863; Charles A. Bacon, chosen 1867; George H. Dodge, chosen 1870; Edward W. Bardwell, chosen 1871; Lester H. Cudworth, chosen 1878; Cornelius Putnam, chosen 1880; Lester H. Cudworth, chosen 1881; Nelson G. Dodge, chosen 1882; John A. Taft, chosen 1884; Walter D. Tyler, chosen 1886.

Oxford Agricultural Society. On 15 Sept., 1886, a citizens' meeting was held at which an association of 42 members was formed "for the purpose of initiating an annual exhibition of horses, cattle, farm produce, manufactures, mechanical products, fruit, flowers and specimens of skill in the home and shops, curious things in nature, or heir-looms in families, etc., in Oxford." The following officers were chosen :—

RICHARD L. DODGE, President.

EDWARD S. PEASE, Secretary.

JOHN W. ROBINSON, Treasurer.

Joseph L. Woodbury, Frank A. Howarth, Abel Marsh, Franklin Howard, Daniel M. Howe, John P. Cudworth, Denny S. Putnam; Directors.

Exhibition. An exhibition was held 14 Oct., 1886, which was a success beyond the expectations of the most sanguine, and so stimulated the movement that in 1887 the Society became incorporated under the general laws of the State, and another successful exhibition was held 12 Oct., 1887. The interest increased, extending to the surrounding towns, and in the winter of 1887-8 it was decided to enlarge operations and apply to the legislature for a special act of incorporation. The result was an act as follows :—

"James W. Stockwell, Allen L. Joslin, Daniel Dwight, Thomas S. Eaton, E. R. Carpenter, Waldo Johnson, Daniel M. Howe, their associates and successors in the towns of Sutton, Oxford, Dudley, Auburn, Charlton and Webster are hereby made a corporation under the name of the OXFORD AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY to be located at Oxford, for the encouragement of Agriculture, Horticulture and the Arts by premiums and other means, etc., and said corporation is hereby authorized to hold by purchase, gift, devise or otherwise, real and personal estate to an amount not exceeding 25,000 dollars."

At a meeting 3 April, 1888, the following officers were chosen :—

Daniel H. Dwight of Dudley, President. Allen L. Joslin of Oxford, Waldo Johnson of Webster, Erastus Alton of Dudley, E. R. Carpenter of Charlton, James W. Stockwell of Sutton, Thomas S. Eaton of Auburn, William Putnam of Worcester, H. P. Wilson of Spencer, Vice-Presidents; Fred. F. Barnard of Oxford, Secretary and Treasurer; Alfred W. Long, Lester H. Cudworth, Willis M. Wellington, Joseph L. Woodbury, Richard L. Dodge, all of Oxford; Chester C. Corbin and A. C. Burnett of Webster; George H. Marsh and Albert Jacobs of Dudley; Daniel M. Howe and James W. Davis of Charlton; H. S. Stockwell and S. F. Marsh of Sutton; John J. Allen and M. L. Hervey of Auburn; John W. Robinson and Hiram E. Barnard of Worcester, Trustees.

Grounds. In the spring of 1888 the Society purchased of the heirs of Samuel Smith 35 acres near the south end of the Plain, on a part of which was standing sufficient timber to enclose about 25 acres, which during the summer of 1888 was fenced, a good half-mile track was constructed and in September a successful exhibition held. At the annual meeting, 2 Nov., 1888, Jonathan P. Dana was elected president, under whose inspection the exhibition hall and grand stand were built in 1889 and a successful exhibition was held that year. At the annual meeting, 1889, Mr. Dana was re-elected president. In 1890 Hon. Allen L. Joslin was chosen as his successor.

Improvement Association. On 4 May, 1886, Hon. B. G. Northrop gave an address at Memorial Hall on Village Improvements, at the close of which measures were taken to form a society for the promotion of this object in Oxford. On 14 June a second meeting was held at which a constitution was adopted and officers were chosen as follows:—

Allen L. Joslin, President. Edwin Bartlett, Samuel R. Barton, Frank A. Howarth, Charles H. Buffum, Willis M. Wellington, Samuel C. Willis, Jr., Charles C. Lamb, Vice-Presidents. Orrin F. Joslin, Treasurer. Miss Ellen A. Paine, Secretary. Mrs. Reuben Rich, Mrs. N. E. Taft, Mrs. Dr. Cushman, Mrs. Frank A. Howarth, Miss Caroline E. Buffum, Mrs. M. M. Hunt, Mrs. Willis M. Wellington, Mrs. Edwin Bartlett, Joseph L. Woodbury, Charles H. Wellington, John E. Kimball, Charles I. Rawson, Ithiel T. Johnson, John W. Robinson, John D. Hudson, Executive Committee.

The constitution states the objects of the Society to be, improved sanitary conditions in the town, better facilities for travel on roads and sidewalks, and beautifying public and private grounds and buildings; also that any one under 18 who shall plant two trees by the roadside with the approval of the Society, or pay 50 cents to the treasurer, or being over 18 shall plant trees as aforesaid, or pay one dollar to the treasurer shall be a member for one year, and that the payment of five dollars annually for three years or of 12 dollars at one time shall constitute one a life member.

Sidewalks were first considered. Committees were appointed to solicit funds, and 7 Sept., 1886, $112 had been expended on walks. Street lighting was next discussed. At this time $425 had been pledged to the objects of the association. At the annual meeting, 7 March, 1887, it was reported the receipts had been $474, of which $107 remained in the treasury. Three $50 subscriptions were reported promised by individuals.

Lights. The subject of street lighting was next taken up and a committee chosen, which reported in favor of the Wheeler Reflector Company's system, which was adopted. During 1887 fifty posts and lanterns were set at a cost of $191, the lamps and reflectors being the property of the lighting company, which contracted to furnish all supplies and to light the lamps at a certain rate per light per evening. These were lighted as a matter of experiment, largely at the expense of the treasurer, until November, when the town voted to assume the cost, and a contract was made extending to 8 May, 1888. The Society in Nov., 1887, transferred to the town the posts and lanterns.

During the season of 1887 the improvement of the walks was continued, the additional sum of $147 having been expended thereon. At the annual meeting, 5 March, 1888, arrangements had been made for the incorporation of the Society under the general laws of the State, a new Society for purposes essentially the same as the old was formed and the following officers chosen :—

Allen L. Joslin, President. Miss Ellen A. Paine, Clerk. Orrin F. Joslin, Treasurer. John E. Kimball, Edward S. Pease, Reuben Rich, Walter D. Tyler, Asa B. Taft, Ovide Villers, Samuel C. Willis, Jr., Vice-Presidents. Henry A. Moffitt, Allen L. Joslin, Orrin F. Joslin, Miss Frances H. Robinson, Mrs. Amasa F. Stowe, Miss Laura D. Stockwell, Miss Mary J. Shumway, Executive Committee.

The "Grange." Oxford Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, No. 123, was organized 23 March, 1885, with 24 members, since which 92 have been added; present membership [1890] 101. The Masters have been successively, Lester H. Cudworth, John A. Taft, Joseph L. Woodbury, Daniel M. Howe. Meetings are held semi-monthly, and interest is well sustained.

Huguenot Memorial Society. In 1881 a society was formed for the purpose of honoring and perpetuating the memory of the first settlers of the town, of which Zachariah Allen, LL.D., of Providence, was chosen president. He died 27 March, 1882, and Hon. Peter Butler of Boston was elected as his successor. Its members are exclusively descendants of the Huguenots, residing in Oxford, Worcester, Boston, Providence, New York and other places. A fund was raised and several acres of land with the old fort purchased, to be held by the Society in perpetuity. The foundations of the fort have been cleared of earth and stones.

Monument. A subscription was raised for the erection of a monument and a handsome and appropriate memorial, being a massive granite cross on a pedestal, was erected, and dedicated 2 Oct., 1884, with appropriate ceremonies in the presence of a large assembly of people. Rev. Charles W. Baird, D.D., of Rye, N. Y., Richard Olney, Esq., of Boston, and Peter B. Olney, Esq., of New York, were the chief speakers on the occasion.

Learned Relief Fund. Miss Elizabeth R., daughter of Abisha Learned, died 18 May, 1880. A few days before her decease she wrote thus to a friend in reference to a disposition of her property:—

"It has been the dream of my life to bless the unfortunate of my native town by my death. First, all for my mother. Then if not used it shall be a trust fund for the poor, to which I hope others will add."

In her will she made ample provision for the needs of her mother, and adds:—

"After my mother's decease I order that all my remaining estate shall be paid into the hands of three trustees [to be exempted from giving sureties], namely, Samuel C. Willis, Jr., Allen L. Joslin and Orrin F. Joslin, and when a vacancy from any cause occurs in this board, the remaining members or member shall fill said vacancy, after consultation with, and with the approbation of the Judge of Probate for Worcester County. These trustees shall safely invest, on interest, said money, and it shall be a permanent fund forever, and all its net income shall be distributed at the discretion of said trustees annually to indigent widows, maiden ladies and orphans who are actually legal inhabitants of Oxford, and not otherwise. And I order that all assistance rendered in every case be made without partiality or distinction of party or sect.

"My object in leaving this fund is to render assistance to those who are actually needy, and striving to keep themselves from charge to the town, and suffer great privations for the want of a little aid, which if occasionally given would make them comfortable and happy.

"It is not my intention that any part of the income of this fund should be appropriated for the assistance of those who are wholly destitute, and unable or not disposed to help themselves—these will of course fall upon the town for support. There may be cases however where a little aid for the time being, to either sex, would be very acceptable and proper, should there be funds at disposal, but as such cases are not easily described . . . I leave it to the discretion of my said trustees and their successors to act in the premises."

Miss Learned's estate was valued at $11,400, and now yields an annual income of nearly $600.

Lawyers. At some time between 1790 and 1800 SAMUEL JENNI-son opened a law office in Oxford. Although an able man he found so little demand for his services that his stay was short, and he returned to Brookfield, whence he came.¹ With this exception we have no knowledge of a resident lawyer here prior to 1800. The first of the profession to settle in town after that date was ERASMUS BABBITT, who practiced from 1804 to 1806 or 1807.¹

CHARLES G. PRENTISS came in 1821, doing a moderate business until 1829, when he returned to Worcester.¹

IRA BARTON was the first to really prosper in the profession, and his success was due to his superior abilities and the general increase of manufacturing and its attendant operations in the town and vicinity. He began in 1822, was in 1824 in an office over the Bank, where he was first partner with Sumner Barstow and later with Peter C. Bacon. He removed in 1834 to Worcester.¹

PETER C. BACON joined Barton in 1832 and continued here after the removal of the latter to Worcester, transacting a successful business until 1844, when he also removed to the County seat.¹

CHARLES D. BOWMAN came in 1845, continuing until his decease in 1857.¹

L. W. PIERCE opened an office in May, 1854, continuing until May, 1855, when he removed to Westborough. Later he was of Winchendon.

NELSON BARTHOLOMEW occupied Bowman's old office in the summer of 1858, and left in the summer of 1861 to enlist in the army.¹

EMORY F. HOLWAY, born at Westport (Conn.), began before May, 1863, remained about one year and removed to Clinton, Ia.

WILLIAM H. HARDING came in 1864, practiced through 1865, and returned to Lee, Mass., where he died.

For ten years afterwards Oxford had no resident in the profession.

HENRY J. CLARK, son of Isaac, of Southbridge, came to town from Bridgewater in July of 1875, remained three years, removing July, 1878, to Webster, where he resides, 1890.

Physicians. There is substantial evidence that Rev. John Campbell was during his life acting and advising physician in many of the families of the town, and that the profession proper had quite a limited support prior to 1760.

¹See name in Genealogical Department.

HEZEKIAH MERRIAM settled in the North Gore as early as 1730 and practiced in that vicinity. He removed about 1770 to the Marcus Bond place at North Oxford, H. 114; is supposed to have continued his practice and went thence about 1790 to Auburn.¹

DAVID HOLMES from Woodstock appears to have been the first physician at the Centre, and was here from 1742 to 1746.¹

JABEZ HOLDEN came next, having lived here from 1752 to 1760 at least.¹

ALEXANDER CAMPBELL began practice probably before his father's decease in 1761. Little is known of his early professional life. He was an able man, in the full tide of success in 1770, continuing until his death in 1782. Numerous pupils studied with him.¹

DANIEL FISK was a successful practitioner from 1773 to his decease 1815, and had many pupils.¹

WILLIAM T. FISK, son of Daniel, studied with his father and began about 1800, continuing until his removal in 1820.¹

STEPHEN BARTON practiced prior to the Revolutionary war; removed to Maine.¹

AARON HILL settled at North Oxford 1780; remained 12 years and removed, perhaps to Maine.¹

EZRA CONANT was in practice from 1780 to his decease in 1789.¹

SIMEON KINGSBURY, son of Amasa, began about 1792, continuing until his decease in 1806.¹

JONATHAN H. LEARNED studied with his father-in-law, Alexander Campbell, settled at Winchester, N. H., returned to Oxford 1792, where he had a successful practice until his decease, 1810.¹

EBENEZER LILLIE, Dudley, came as early as 1799, remaining until 1807; removed to South Gore.¹

DELANO PIERCE came in 1811, continuing until 1834, and was the leading physician of his day.¹

PORTER DAVIS of Palmer came in 1821, and removed after a few months.

JOHN W. TENNEY, son of Daniel of Sutton, came in 1830, took Dr. Pierce's house expecting to succeed to his business; removed 1831(?) to Webster, where he died. He was graduated 1823 at Brown University; a talented man and skillful physician.

ADDISON KNIGHT next occupied the Pierce house. He came prior to May, 1834, remained two years or more and removed to Rhode Island, and died at Cumberland from ship fever taken from a patient.

DAVID HOLMAN came in 1831, practiced mostly in North Oxford until his decease, 1881.¹

SAMUEL C. PAINE came in 1831, settled at the Centre, and was long the principal practitioner, continuing until near his decease, 1888.¹

CHARLES RAWSON, Botanic, began 1846, is now, 1890, in practice.

CHARLES W. LYNN, soldier in late war, assistant at Dale Hospital, Worcester, one year; studied at Vermont University and Harvard; came to North Oxford 1867; diploma, Dartmouth; removed to Auburn and other places; returned to Oxford, 1883, and continues, 1890, in practice.

DANIEL B. PLIMPTON, Southbridge, came to North Oxford, May, 1846; removed Nov., 1847, to Putnam, Conn.; died 1874.

JONATHAN NICHOLS was in practice on the Plain from 1848 to 1 July, 1856; removed west; resides, 1890, at Atlantic, Iowa.¹

BYRON STONE, North Oxford, began practice 1877, and continues at the present time, 1890.¹

CHARLES L. CLARK, Brooklyn, N. Y., came in the spring of 1878, and removed summer of 1881 to Springfield.

WILLIAM B. CUSHMAN, born 1856 at Roxbury, son of Elkanah A.; was graduated 1878, Harvard College, Medical Department Bowdoin College 1881, Demonstrator of Anatomy there 1 July, 1881; began practice Aug., 1881, at Cumberland Mills; settled at Oxford, 1 Dec., 1881, where he (1890) continues.

JOHNSON R. WOODWARD, born 2 Sept., 1865, at Braintree, Vt., son of Charles E.; was graduated Jan., 1884, at Randolph, Vt., Normal School; studied two years in University of Vermont at Burlington in Classical Department, two and a half years in Medical Department, was graduated 18 July, 1888, and came immediately to Oxford, continuing, 1890.

EMORY F. STONE, North Oxford; entered Wisconsin University, Madison, before Sept., 1859; in catalogue June, 1862, reported “in the National army.”

First Village Improvement. About 1807, Nathan Blackman, a hatter employed by Samuel Campbell, set in motion a project for the ornamentation of our main street by setting trees, resulting in placing about 250 Lombardy poplars in lines on each side the length of the avenue. These flourished for a few years, but soon began to decay and after 25 or 30 years scarcely one remained. The principal trees now growing, excepting the large elms at the common, were set by individuals since the poplars disappeared.

Dog-tax. In March, 1848, an article “to see if the town will raise a tax on dogs” was dismissed. In December Charles D. Bowman, Alvan G. Underwood and Jasper Brown were chosen to draft a code of by-laws on the subject, who reported as follows¹:—

1st. That the selectmen be authorized to appoint a Register of dogs to account annually for fines and money received for licenses. 2d. No dogs to be allowed to go at large except such as are licensed. 3d. All licensed dogs to wear a collar with the name of the owner and “Licensed” engraved upon it. The sum to be paid to be two dollars. 4th. All dogs to be muzzled under a penalty of two dollars. 5th. The penalty of offences against the foregoing to be ten dollars and costs of prosecution. 6th. A reward of fifty cents to be paid for killing all dogs running at large contrary to these provisions.

The adoption of this report caused excitement in certain quarters resulting in a meeting in Jan., 1849, at which the 4th and 6th articles were repealed and the license fee was made one dollar instead of two, and also a vote passed that "any person poisoning or in any other way killing a licensed dog should forfeit ten dollars." In 1867 the State law superseded town action on this subject.

Stables, etc. In July, 1851, it was voted to adopt the act of the last legislature relating to the erection and use of buildings for stables and bowling alleys. This law empowered selectmen to decide as to the location of these buildings.¹

Cattle Disease. In the winter of 1870-71 a disease among cattle called the "Epizootic," or foot and mouth disease, prevailed generally in this region. In Jan., 1871, the selectmen prohibited the driving or transporting cattle to or from or within the town. This restriction was removed the following March.

Indexing. In April, 1876, the sum of $200 was raised for the purpose of copying and indexing the earlier records of births, marriages and deaths, that the originals might be preserved. This work was done in 1876.

Trotting Park. In 1867 a project was started, mainly by Webster men, under the lead of Ethan Bullard, for a race-course in the south part of Oxford, and in September a tract of land at the south end of Johnson's plain was deeded to him and his associates, who enclosed it and built a half-mile track. It was much used for several years, but for ten years past has been deserted.

Town Clock. In the spring of 1888 a committee was chosen to consider the subject of placing a clock in the tower of Memorial Hall, which reported that a proposition had been received from Messrs. Charles and Willard Harwood, merchants, of Boston, brothers and natives of Oxford, as follows: They would present to the town free of cost a good tower clock and a bell for the same, on condition that the town would raise the tower on the hall so that it would be appropriate to receive them, the structure as originally built not being suitable. The town accepted with thanks the proposal and appropriated the sum of $1,500 for the work. This change was made during the summer of 1888, and the clock and bell were in the autumn put in position, at a cost (as understood) of $1,000. The expense of raising the tower, which was a very marked improvement of the building, was a little above the appropriation.

The clock in the rear of the platform in the main hall was also the gift of Harwood Brothers at the time of the erection of the building.

Historic Relics. In an appropriate receptacle in the Free Public Library the town has a small but valuable collection of historic relics, the donations of individuals, which are worthy of notice. In the accompanying illustration are represented a few of the most interesting.

No. 1. Is a powder-horn inscribed "X JEREMIAH LEARNED X HIS HORN X LAKE GORGE X JVLY 1758 X" and carried by him in the French war; presented by the late Jeremiah Learned of Worcester.

No. 2. Silver spoon of Gen. Burgoyne, inscribed "J. A. B. 1776." This with Nos. 4 and 5 was brought from the Saratoga battle-field by Gen. Ebenezer Learned and presented by a descendant, Rufus G. Alverson.

No. 3. The sword of Reuben Lamb; presented by Misses Elizabeth and Ellen M. Tolman, North Oxford.

No. 4. Silver-plated spur of Burgoyne.

No. 5. Gold lace epaulette of Burgoyne.

No. 6. A wood rum canteen, barrel-shape, taken from a British soldier at the battle of Bunker Hill by Rev. Christopher Bullock, of Limerick, Me., chaplain of a Maine regiment; presented by Jonas Tolman, grandson of Mr. Bullock.

No. 7. The brass spoon of Collicump, the last wild Indian known to have lived in Oxford; plowed up on the site of his cabin by Joseph Brown; owned by George F. Daniels.

No. 8. Fighting hatchet or tomahawk such as were furnished to soldiers in the Revolutionary war. This was carried by George Alverson; presented by his grandson, Rufus G. Alverson.

Others are a cannon ball (24 pounds) brought from Bunker Hill by Gen. Learned, and a set of money scales and weights used by Gen. Learned; both presented by Miss Elizabeth R. Learned; a set of money scales and weights used by Reuben Lamb, presented by the Misses Tolman; a powder-horn carried in the Revolution by George Alverson, presented by Rufus G. Alverson; and a flint-lock musket carried at trainings by Ira Merriam, presented by him.

STATISTICS, Etc.

Tax Payers in 1771. This is not a tax list, but in the original is termed an "invoice," being a proportionate abridged valuation, based on the true one, from which Province, town, highway or school rates were computed, the reduced form saving labor in making calculations.

RESIDENCE OF O. F. JOSLIN.

CHAPTER XI.

CIVIL OFFICERS.

Representative to Congress.

ALEXANDER DEWITT, for the Ninth Mass. District, 1853 to 1857.

State Senators.

IRA BARTON, 1833 and 1834. ALVAN G. UNDERWOOD, 1855.

ALEXANDER DEWITT, 1842, '43, NATHANIEL EDDY, 1861.

ALLEN L. JOSLIN, 1886.

Town Agents.

This was an officer first chosen in 1801. His duties were to represent the town in suits at law, to prosecute and defend, and to manage cases in which the legal rights of the town were in any manner involved. For many years past these duties have devolved upon the selectmen.

Sylvanus Town, 1801 to 1803, Ira Barton, 1827 to '33.

Ebenezer Rich, 1837, '38, '45, '46.

Jonathan Davis, 1808, '10, '11, John Mayo, 1839.

'15, '16, '21-'23, 25.

Alexander DeWitt, 1840, '44.

Abijah Davis, 1804, '12 to '14, Emory Sanford, 1841, '49, '50.

'17, '19.

Archibald Campbell, 1818.

Charles D. Bowman, 1847, '48.

William Moore, 1820.

Jasper Brown, 1851, '52.

Richard Olney, 1824, '26, '34 to '36.

Delegates to Constitutional Conventions.

Ebenezer Learned, 1779.

Richard Olney, 1820.

Ezra Bowman, 1779.

Alexander DeWitt, 1853.

Jeremiah Learned, 1788.

Representatives.

As the sending of a representative was by the law of 1692 left optional with small towns, Oxford in its earlier years, as appears, was represented only when there were matters of interest to the town to be laid before the Court. The years given below are those both of election and service, until 1831, when the time of convening of the legislature was changed from May to January. From that date the years given are those of service, the election having been the previous November.

Richard Moore, 1721.

Benjamin Davis, 1749.

Ebenezer Learned, 1731, '51.

Duncan Campbell, 1752, '53, '54,

Samuel Davis, 1742, '43, '47.

School Committee.

The first School Committee chosen in Oxford was in 1809, prior to which date the selectmen and the ministers of the town had the oversight of the schools. The Committees chosen by the town were called "Committees of Inspection," to distinguish them from "Prudential" committees, which were chosen by each district to hire teachers and manage financial affairs.

Constables.

The Constable was formerly one of the most important of the town officials. He was sworn to carefully intend the preservation of the peace, to execute all warrants sent by lawful authority, to faithfully attend to all directions and orders of the court, to collect and levy all such fines, distresses, rates, assessments and sums of money as he should have warrants for, to serve all writs, executions and distresses faithfully, making due return thereof, "without any sinister respects of favor or displeasure."

CHAPTER XII.

OUT-LYING LANDS.

GRAND PROPRIETORS' LOTS. GRANTS IN SOUTH GORE AND VICINITY. NORTH GORE LANDS.

"Grand Proprietors' Lots." The territory of the original grant lying west of Oxford village, embracing 30,000 acres, and now constituting parts of Dudley, Charlton and Southbridge, was, as before stated, equally divided between the five original grantees, and styled "The Grand Proprietors' Lots." Of the southernmost 6,000 acres, Dudley's, the larger portion was in Dec., 1731, set off to form the town of Dudley, the western portion being now a part of Southbridge. In his will Mr. Dudley gave to his daughters, viz.: Rebecca, wife of Samuel Sewall, Jr.; Anne, wife of Adam Winthrop; Katherine, wife of Hon. William Dummer, and Mary, wife of — Wainwright, each 1,000 acres of land out of his 6,000 acres at Oxford, and to his nephew, Daniel Allen, and niece, Ann Hilton, who married Ebenezer Pierpont, each 500 acres of the same. His son Paul being residuary legatee inherited the remaining 1,000 acres. Through these children and their heirs the lands were sold to settlers.¹

The second 6,000-acre lot, Blackwell's, was sold by his heirs, Frances, his widow, and John Blackwell, merchant, both of Bethnal Green, Stepney, England, 25 April, 1720, to Peter Papillon of Boston, mariner.² Papillon had four daughters, Elizabeth, who married first John Wolcott, and second, John Higginson, both of Salem; Katharine, who married 4 July, 1734, George Gibbs, and died before 4 July, 1749; Martha, who married first, Richard Williams of Boston

A deed executed 20 Oct., 1729, was signed by William Dudley as attorney for Paul Dudley, Samuel Sewall, Jr., and Rebecca, his wife, William Dummer of Newbury, and Katherine, his wife, Mary Wainwright, widow, Josiah Willard, guardian of children of Daniel Allen, deceased, and Ebenezer Pierpont and Ann, his wife, "devisees of the will of Joseph Dudley."

² On 18 June, 1723, £100 was ordered by the State authorities to be paid to Peter Papillon, captain of the ship "Flying horse," to be distributed to seamen who enlisted under him to pursue the pirate [Low] off the coast 9 June, 1722. [Gen. Court Rec.] He returned from his cruise 28 June, not having found the foe but brought in a brigantine which had been in his possession. In 1729 Papillon was styled "merchant." Savage supposed him to have been son of Peter, a Huguenot, who came as early as 1679.

In order to correct an error in Ammildown's His. Col., II., 580, it is proper to state that, according to the records, the only land owned by him in this region was this 6,000-acre tract, with the 2,000 acres called the "little lot," originally a part of Cox's 6,000 acres, all conveyed by Blackwell's heirs.

[rem. ab. 1741 to Oxford, where he d.], and second, John Ballard of Boston; and Mary, who married William Thomas of Plymouth, in 1739 styled mariner, and later physician.

After the decease of Papillon these lands, excepting several small lots previously sold by him, were divided among these four daughters. John Wolcott was administrator of his estate, and Isaac Larned, Rev. John Campbell and Col. Ebenezer Learned were chosen to make a division. John Wolcott received the southeast 500-acre lot [with other tracts further west], which 500 acres he and Higginson, the second husband of Elizabeth, sold chiefly to John Larned and Josiah Kingsbury. Richard Williams' portion embraced, besides a tract west in Charlton, the 500-acre lot at the east end, adjoining Wolcott's on the north, being the lot formerly occupied by Gibbs, on which he had built a house, then going to ruin. Here Williams is supposed to have built a new house in which he resided until his decease. Nearly the whole of this tract was sold by Williams' executor to Ebenezer Coburn.

In 1732 Moses Marcy of Woodstock bought of Papillon the water-power and land contiguous, at what is now Southbridge centre, which he improved. The balance of the Papillon tract was sold in lots to suit purchasers by his heirs before mentioned.

The third 6,000 acres, Stoughton's, who was unmarried, was in 1704 divided among four heirs, as follows: To William Taylor one-fourth; to John Nelson and his wife Elizabeth one-fourth; to Rev. John Danforth and Elizabeth, his wife, one-fourth; and to Thomas Cooper and his wife Mehetable one-fourth.¹ On 5 Dec., 1717, John Nelson and wife Elizabeth sold one-third of 6,000 acres to Samuel Brown of Salem, and from a deed dated 29 March, 1768, Blaney to Brown, we learn that Brown purchased also on 28 June, 1718, of William Cooper another third part of the estate, making 4,000 acres which he owned. In 1734 land of Samuel Brown was sold for taxes. We find no records of conveyances from him. At the time of the Revolution William Brown owned a large portion of this tract, and being a loyalist it was confiscated to the State. Lemuel Kallock of Wrentham was appointed by the General Court to learn the extent of Brown's interests and to give deeds of division of lands. Joseph Blaney of Salem, whose wife, Abigail, may have been daughter of Samuel Brown, was also a large owner. Nathaniel Dowse of Salem in 1752 became owner of several hundred acres which descended from the Danforth share. In 1771 the heirs of William Taylor and Mather Byles and wife Rebecca sold more than 1,000 acres to Samuel Danforth of Cambridge, Elizabeth Williams of Roxbury, Elijah Dunbar of Stoughton, and Hannah, wife of Rev. John Searl, of Stoneham.

¹The persons representing the Stoughton interest who signed in 1713 the deed to Oxford village settlers were William Taylor, Peter Sargent and wife Mehetable [Cooper having died and Mehetable m. Sargent?], John Danforth and wife, and John Nelson and wife.

On 23 May, 1782, the then owners of the 6,000 acres made a division as follows: A line running east and west was drawn through the tract, Lemuel Kallock (representing the State), and Joseph Blaney received the part lying north of said line, and Samuel Danforth of Boston, physician, Elizabeth Danforth of Boston, Elijah Dunbar of Stoughton and Joseph Dowse of Salem that lying south thereof.¹

In 1784 John Fessenden, Caleb Amidown and Jonathan Warner, a committee to sell confiscated estates in Worcester County, represented to the Supreme Court that there were in Oxford and Charlton 3,000 acres of unimproved lands, of which "two-thirds belonged to William Brown of Salem, conspirator, now the property of the Commonwealth, and one-third to Joseph Blaney, all common and undivided," and asked for a division, which was granted. Dec. 4, 1784, a division was agreed upon, Blaney being then of Windham, Me. In 1785 a large part of his share was sold on execution. Thus the Brown lands, which had lain long unimproved, were brought into market. On 12 April, 1785, eight 100-acre lots, excepting 60 acres previously disposed of, were sold by the committee to Ebenezer Davis for £835. Jacob Davis was purchaser of several lots, and many deeds appear on the records of parts of "Brown Lands" sold by the State's committee. That part of the 6,000 acres lying south of the dividing line was distributed by Danforth and Dunbar to purchasers for settlement.

The fourth division, Cox's, was deeded 28 June, 1701, by Daniel Cox, physician, of London, to his son Daniel. The tract was early subdivided, the northern third having been conveyed to Thomas Freak of Hannington, Wiltshire, Eng., and the southern to John Blackwell, Cox retaining the central third. Freak deeded, 20 Feb., 1709, his 2,000 acres in trust for Mary the daughter of his son John, then a merchant of Boston. She married, 1 May, 1694, Josiah Wolcott of Salem, and 16 Dec., 1730, being then a widow, deeded the 2,000 acres to Edward Kitchen and Freke, his wife, of Salem, who sold in lots to settlers.

The southern third part was sold by Blackwell's heirs, with his large 6,000-acre lot, to Peter Papillon, and divided with that among

¹ Mr. D. T. V. Huntoon gives the following as the manner in which Dunbar came into possession of these lands: "Gov. Stoughton was unmarried. His sister Hannah married James Minot, they had a daughter Elizabeth, who married Rev. John Danforth of Dorchester; their daughter Hannah married Rev. Samuel Dunbar, and Elijah was their son. [A descendant, John Danforth Dunbar, was in 1795, and for several subsequent years, a lawyer at Charlton. In March, 1801, he was of Plymouth.]

A memorandum of several visits to Oxford and Charlton in 1779, 1782 and 1783 by Mr. Dunbar to look after his land interests, is in possession of his descendants. Other persons interested as owners were with him. Under date 10 Oct., 1782, he says: "dined at Lord's [hotel at Oxford Centre], go to Capt. Hancock's [Timothy Aldrich place, H. 58] . . . 11th set off from Manchaug corner ["Waters"—Ebenezer was surveyor, and Hancock and Levi Davis chainmen] went as far as the new village line: lodge at Hancock's.—12th, set off from a stump shown by Capt. John Larned to be ye place where ye lettered oak tree formerly stood, and run N. 2° W., touching Angutteback pond [lower pond at Howarth's] . . . find a heap of stones supposed to be the old corner of sd line. 15th, Waters, Kallock and self went and made ye S. E. corner of ye new village line [on the west side the river, now the west line of Howarth's estate]. 30th, Amidown and self walk to ye pine tree at Worcester—General Learned with us,—find by ye corner of ye line between Sutton and Oxford that it varies 2° from Gore's survey."

his heirs into four equal portions of 500 acres each. The easterly 500 acres, which extended into Oxford to the village line, was drawn by Richard Williams, and embraced the mill privilege known as John Rich's, in Charlton. In 1747 Williams sold this water-power to Jonathan, Jr., and Ephraim Ballard, who there built a saw-mill. In 1754 Ephraim sold to Jonathan, who continued to operate the mill, built a potash factory, and added to his estate, and on 11 April, 1774, sold to Ebenezer Davis and David Rich, both of Charlton, 180 acres, part in Oxford and part in Charlton. In 1777 Davis sold to Rich, who added a grist-mill and early in the present century a wool carding mill. He died there, leaving as his successor his son, John H., who lived to old age, operating the mills, and died there 9 Oct., 1883.

The remainder of the southern one-third was allotted to John Wolcott, Molly Papillon, later Mrs. William Thomas, and Katharine [Mrs. George Gibbs] 500 acres each.

The central third remained the property of Daniel Cox, Jr., who came to America and died 1737 at Trenton, N. J. His heirs, after many years, made Ezra Taylor of Southboro (later of Pownalsboro, Me.), their attorney. Numerous settlers had gone upon the premises and taken possession, and in a majority of cases, perhaps without controversy, sales were made to the occupants. Several suits, however, were brought for ejectment, and among them one became of much importance as a test case. This suit was brought by Taylor at the November term of 1771, in the Court of Common Pleas at Worcester, in the name of William Cox of Bristol, Pa., and others, against John Edwards of Charlton. Trial, June term, 1773, verdict for Cox et al. Edwards appealed to the higher court. The Revolutionary struggle coming on the case was not heard till 1780, when under the new State Constitution it came up before the Supreme Judicial Court and was prosecuted with great vigor. According to the report [printed in an appendix to Vol. 14, Mass., 491] the law of the case was argued several times by Paine [probably Robert Treat] for the demandants, and Sprague and Lincoln for the tenant, and after long consideration by the court judgment was finally entered, Oct. term, 1782, for the demandants. Two points were made for the tenant by his counsel: [1] The deed from Cox, Sen., to Cox, Jr., was not executed according to statute requirements. But the court held, nevertheless, that the execution of the deed in London had been sufficiently proved by the testimony of a resident of Philadelphia who witnessed its signature. [2] There had been no "livery of Seizin." On this point the court held, that in accordance with the common opinion of most colonial lawyers, the feudal ceremony of grantor going with grantee personally upon the premises conveyed and there giving him in hand the twig of a tree or a piece of turf from the soil as a symbolical delivery of the land was not necessary in Massachusetts. This is thought to be the first reported decision of an American court upon this subject. Of course after this decision Cox's title was not generally disputed, and Taylor was able to collect from other parties the sums due for lands. Deeds from Taylor to Charlton settlers are numerous.¹

The fifth 6,000 acres, Thompson's, descended to his four daughters, who received each 1,000 acres of the west portion, and his only son Joseph, who received 2,500 acres, the east part, there being an over-plus of 500 acres. Joseph was of Nonsuch Park, Parish of Ewell, Surrey, Eng., and his heirs living on 7 March, 1754, were Thomas Whately, Sen., and his wife Mary, who were also of Nonsuch Park, Thomas Whately, Jr., Stamp Brooksbank and wife Elizabeth. These at that date deeded to Ebenezer Learned and Edward Davis the said tract of 2,500 acres.² Davis owned the west part and settled his sons upon it. Learned received the portion bounding east on the Maanexit at North Oxford, embracing the present Texas Village. From a record, CII., 591, we learn that Thomas Whately died possessed "partly by inheritance from his ancestor Robert Thompson and partly by purchase" of two-thirds of the original 6,000 acres, he having bought the interest of the four daughters, therefore Joseph, son of said Thomas Whately, being "of said Nonsuch Park, Clerk, and Professor in Gresham College, and the only surviving heir of said Thomas," on 16 Oct., 1786, deeded to Samuel Danforth of Boston, physician, the said two-thirds or 4,000 acres of the westerly portion of the original tract. Deeds from Danforth to settlers are numerous.

South Gore and Vicinity. Hobart Grant. Prior to the year 1628 a corporation was formed in London of "Adventurers for a Plantation intended att Mattachusetts Bay in Newe England in America." An account of George Harwood, Treasurer, appears on page 1, vol. 2, of the Probate Records of Suffolk County, the heading of which is as follows:—

"IN THE NAME OF GOD, AMEN.

"LONDON, May, 1628.

"Sundrie men owe unto the general stock of the Adventurers for a plantation intended att Mattachusetts Bay in newe England in America the some of ten thousand one hundredth and sixtie pounds, and is for soe much undertaken by the particular persons mentioned hereafter by these several subscriptions to be by them adventured in this joint and general stock . . . for the plantation, whereunto the Almighty grant prosperous and happy successe that the same may redound to his glorie the . . . of the Gospell of Jesus Christ, and the particular good of the . . . adventurers that now are or hereafter shall be interested therein. The persons now to be made debt'rs to the gen'll stock [are] as followeth, vizt." [Nearly 100 names are appended.]

Into the capital stock of this company Richard Westland of Boston, England, paid £50. Subscribers were entitled to lands in proportion to their payments. From a petition of Rev. Samuel Whiting of Lynn, presented to the authorities, 28 May, 1679, we learn that Westland nearly 50 years before had made a deed of gift of his rights to the said Whiting, he being a brother-in-law. In this memorial he asks that five or six hundred acres of land might be set off to him, on which it was voted: "Granted to Mr. Whiting, Sen., and his heires six hundred acres of Land."¹ After Mr. Whiting's decease, upon application of Mrs. Elizabeth Hobart, his daughter, and sole heir, in 1717, the grant of 600 acres was set off to her at the north end of Chaubunagungamaug Pond.²

On 7 May, 1718, Elizabeth Hobart of Hartford, widow of Jeremiah Hobart, clergyman, late of Haddam, for £60, deeded this estate to Josiah Dwight, first minister of Woodstock, who on 28 May, 1726, sold the same for £550 to Josiah Kingsbury of Needham.³ In 1732 Josiah Kingsbury sold the north part of this tract to his son Theodore and in 1737 the south part to his son Josiah, who both occupied as settlers.

The original grant to Mrs. Hobart included the "Falls," the spot where, before 1728, on the stream issuing from Chaubunagungamaug, the first saw-mill was built. George Robinson in 1719 bought the land adjoining on the west and had taken possession of the water-power and built a mill. In 1728 Josiah Kingsbury, in a petition to the General Court represents the facts and asks for a grant of 23 acres of poor land near the mouth of Sucker Brook as a compensation. The matter was referred to John Chandler, who reported "that there is cut off from the Original [Hobart] Survey . . . about three acres, on the same stands a Saw Mill the conveniency for which was a great inducement to carry the bounds of the farm so far westward." He then reviews and describes the land petitioned for and gives his opinion that it was hardly an equivalent to the "Fall or mill place."

The Roxbury School Grant. On 16 Oct., 1660, the General Court passed the following: "The Court Judgeth it meete to graunte the town of Roxbury five hundred acres of land towards the maintenance of a free school." On 24 Nov., 1715, a petition was presented to the Court signed by several citizens of Roxbury stating that a grant of 500 acres for the free school had been made in 1660, but had never been laid out, asking that action might be taken in the case; on which it was voted that leave be given to have a plan made and presented. On 14 Nov., 1718, a plot was returned, and said grant confirmed. According to this plot, now in the State archives, the mouth of Sucker Brook was the first bound, the line ran thence northeasterly, thence at a right angle southeasterly, thence at a right angle southwesterly to the pond, at what was later Mr. Campbell's line, about one-third of a mile south of Brown's cove or pond, so called, thence northerly following the shore of the pond, including all the long arm stretching into it, to the first bound at Sucker Brook.

On 12 June, 1770, John Baker and Joseph Mayo of Roxbury, committee to sell the school lands, deeded to Hezekiah Bellows 279 acres of the southern portion of the tract, and 43 acres "on the neck." On 9 Feb., 1779, Bellows deeded to James Cudworth 324 acres, with a house and half a saw-mill. In June of the next year Cudworth, then living on the premises, sold the whole bought of Bellows to John Wight. On 12 June, 1781, Wight deeded back to Cudworth, who on 22 June, 1781, deeded the same, excepting half a saw-mill, reserved to Jacob Barrett, to Dr. James Gleason and Asa Robinson.

On 25 Feb., 1774, said Baker and Mayo, committee, deeded to Rev. Joseph Bowman of Oxford 247 $\frac{1}{4}$ acres, the remainder of the original grant, being the northern portion, reserving a road for Bellows, then living on the south part. In 1774 Mr. Bowman deeded 100 acres of the northwest part to Oliver Barrett of Killingly, Conn., and on 9 July, 1777, 117 acres, part of the same, to Nathan Smith of Sutton. In 1780 Smith sold 15 acres on which was a saw-mill to Jacob Barrett. 1781 Bowman sold 55 acres to Hezekiah Bellows. On 13 June, 1782, Nathan Smith and Elizabeth, his wife, of South Gore, deeded to John Boyce of Mendon, house-wright, 105 acres and buildings, being the northeast part of the Roxbury School Farm. In 1786 Boyce sold to Benoni Benson and Abraham Staples, both of Mendon, who in 1792 sold to Philip Brown, who occupied it and kept a public house. Marvin, his son, was later owner and occupant.

Thompson Grant. In May, 1683, on account of services rendered to the Province, a grant of 500 acres of land was made to Major Robert Thompson of London, which was confirmed to him Feb., 1727. It was bounded on the west by the Hobart or Kingsbury land, on the north by Oxford Village, and on the east by Dr. Douglas' land. On 26 Nov., 1803, Thomas Corbett and Elizabeth, his wife, she being heir and devisee of Robert Thompson of Elsham, County of Lincoln, England, deeded for $750 the "Thompson farm" to James Butler of Oxford. Mr. Butler brought a suit for ejectment against Benjamin Davis and obtained possession. A large portion of this land is known as Douglas Woods. Reuben Dudley is present owner of a portion, which has been improved.

Campbell Grant. Rev. John Campbell, representing that he required aid in the work of the ministry at Oxford, and asking in 1736 for a grant of land, was voted his request. A plan in the State archives is endorsed:—

"This Plan . . . describes the boundary of 310 acres of land with a pond, lying south of Oxford on the Southeast side of Roxbury School farm, east from Dudley town on the east side of Chaubunagungamaug Pond, bounded east and south with a line of marked trees on the Province land, surveyed and laid out in pursuance of the grant of the General Court of this Province in their fall session of 1736 to the Rev. Mr. John Campbell of Oxford. By Isaac Larned surveyor, and Samuel Davis and John Larned chainmen. Surveyed 18 Mar. 1737 and ratified Jan. 1738."

The north line of this grant was about one-third of a mile southerly of what is known as Brown's Pond, and it extended south more than a mile on the lake shore, and east 118 rods from the lake at the southern extremity and 210 rods at the northern. On 20 March, 1765, Edward Wigglesworth, to whom it was sold by Mr. Campbell's executors, deeded it, estimating it at 400 acres, including a pond, to Levi Wight and Dr. James Gleason, both of Thompson Parish. Dr. Green of Leicester later held a mortgage upon it, and in 1777 his heirs quitclaimed it as follows: To Levi Wight 120 acres, to Dr. James Gleason 180 acres, and to Aaron Wakefield and Amos Wakefield each one-half of 100 acres. William Wakefield is named as one of the interested parties.

Leonard Grant. On 24 Jan., 1736, Elkanah Leonard of Middleboro petitioned for a grant of land as compensation for his services in prosecuting persons from Rhode Island who committed acts of violence on the gore of land in controversy between the two governments, which was granted. A survey was made by Isaac Larned, and a plot of 100 acres confirmed to him, lying northeast of Chaubunagungamaug and northwest of the Roxbury School Farm, 1 Jan., 1739. Leonard, 5 Jan., 1739, sold to John Jones of Hopkinton, who in 1748 conveyed the same to Roger Amidown, who in 1765 sold to Abijah Kingsbury. In his deed the bounds are given as follows:—

“100 acres, beginning at the northeast corner of the Roxbury school farm, thence southwesterly by said farm to the mouth of Sucker Brook; thence northerly by Josiah Kingsbury's land 120 rods; thence easterly 200 rods; thence southerly to the first bound.”

On 3 June, 1768, Kingsbury deeded to Ichabod Chamberlain of Dudley, who, 2 Sept., 1783, deeded to Joseph Rawson of Dudley. He occupied the place for a few years and removed to the farm known as the Dexter Rawson place, which is now owned and occupied by his descendants.

Ward Grant. Eleazer Ward of Newtown, later of Oxford, about 1734 represented to the General Court that he had served many years in the Indian wars, and was in the expedition against Port Royal and was wounded, causing him much expense, that he was old and disabled by his hardships, had three sons, and no land to settle on, and asked for a grant: on which, 10 Dec., 1734, in the House of Representatives it was ordered that 150 acres be granted to him on conditions that he or his heirs or assigns settle the same within three years, build and finish a house at least 18 feet square and 7 feet stud, and break up or bring to five acres of English grass and well enclose the same. In April, 1735, a tract was laid out and confirmed to him, a plan of which is in the State archives endorsed as follows:—

“This plan contains 150 acres of Province Land which lyeth S. of Oxford, west from New Sherburn: bounded south on province land, west on a 500 acre farm called y^e 'minde farm,' laid out for N. Ingham and his company." Isaac Larned was the surveyor.¹

On 18 July, 1741, he deeded to his son Samuel one-half his homestead in Oxford, and "two pieces of remote land, being a part of the grant of Gen. Court to me," and in 1747, 90 acres near the southeast corner of Oxford, bounded, beginning at Manchaug Corner, etc. The easterly line of his original grant ran S. 15° E. 300 rods from Manchaug Corner.

The southernmost part of the Gore was occupied some years previous to 1744 by Joseph Chamberlain, his son Ebenezer, and his son-in-law Josiah Balch. In 1744 the State sold to them 320 acres, bounded on New Sherborn [now Douglas] on the east and the Connecticut line on the south. [See Chamberlain.] These several grants did not cover the whole area of the Gore lands. About 1,400 acres remained in lots of various size and form, and in 1769 passed into the possession of the "twenty proprietors of Douglas." According to McIntire's survey the Gore embraced 4,590 acres.²

North Gore Lands. In Oct., 1648, a petition, as follows, was presented to the General Court:—

"To the honored the Governor, Magistrates and Deputies of the General Court in Boston now assembled:

"The Petition of Herbert Pelham late of Cambridge in Mattachuset now for the present in England resident.

"Sheweth: That whereas there is to the said Herbert due from this Colonie of Mattachuset eight hundred acres of land for the consideration of and in reference unto a hundred pound about 17 years agoe, he the said Herbert with his father [Thomas Waldgrave] put into the common stock, it is therefore the desire of the said Herbert that you will be pleased to graunt to him the said number of akers, and what more you shall for his forbearance think convenient, in such place as not prejudicing any plantation he the said Herbert shall by his agents find out and allot upon, and that this Pr sent Court will further be pleased to answer so timeously your petitioner that upon notice given he may with all convenient speed effect his desire and make return thereof unto the Court, that whether Pr. sent or absent he may remaine ever mindful to be yours in what office of love he the said Herbert shall be able to Pleasure this Colonie.

*"Presented the 19th day of the 8 m. 1648, in the name of Herbert Pelham, Esq., in his absence, by Henry Dunster at the motion of the said Herbert by his letters dated Ferrers, Apr. 4, 1648."*³ 1648, Oct. 27. In answer to this petition, it was ordered that Mr. Pelham "should have his 400 akers of land," and also the heirs of

¹ Mr. Ward had land granted him in Township No. 2, east of Connecticut River and adjoining the same, for services at Port Royal. He sold in 1737 to George Harrington, Sen., of Watertown.

This "mine farm" was probably named from the fact that Iron ore was found there and it is supposed that "N. Ingham and his company," who were of Boston, had obtained a grant as a speculation, but abandoned the enterprise.

² A thorough study of the early land grants and conveyances in the South Gore has been made by Benjamin A. Wakefield (a resident and a descendant of one of the early settlers), to whom we are indebted for aid in preparing the foregoing.

³ Mr. Pelham was a man of high standing among the people of the "Mattachuset Colonie," second to John Winthrop on the list of assistants, from 1645 to 1649, and the first treasurer of Harvard College. The subscription "to the common stock," refers to that made in London for the aid and encouragement of the new colony then being organized for the settlement at Boston.

Thomas Waldgrave another "400 akers" in such place as "not prejudicing any plantation he the sd. Herbert shall, by his agents find out and allot upon."

On 30 June, 1703, Penelope Winslow of Marshfield represented to the court that she was the daughter of Mr. Pelham, and that the said grant had never been laid out, and asked consideration. No action appears to have been at that time taken in the matter. Later Isaac and Elizabeth Winslow, only children and heirs of Dame Penelope Winslow, petitioned that the grants to Pelham and Waldgrave might be set off to them, upon which there appears to have been some action, as on 20 Nov., 1718, Isaac Winslow and Elizabeth Burton represented that they had selected and caused to be surveyed "according to the law in this case," 400 acres, being one-half of the 800 acres due them. This plot, which was not in the vicinity of Oxford, was confirmed to them. Their rights in the second 400 acres they sold to Daniel Livermore of Weston, one of the proprietors and settlers at Leicester, who chose his 400 acres in the "Country Gore." A plan is in the State archives, on the back of which is endorsed:—

"May 28, 1719. Pursuant to a grante of the Grate and General Court of eight hundred accers of Land I have Lay'd out to Dantell Livermore four hundred accers of land being one half of the above said eight hundred Accre Grante which was formerly granted to Mr. Havard Pellom, Esq., and Leatly Granted to Mr. Edward Pellom and Coll. Isaack Winslow, Esq., and his sister said land lying between Oxford and Leissester bounded with Oxford line Every where Els with Country Land as is Signified in this plat. Surveyed pr David Hanyes."

The selection and laying out of land in the Gore seems to have awakened the interest of certain members of the General Court in the locality, and on 11 June, 1719, a committee (of which William Dudley was chairman) was appointed to take a plot of these lands, which reported a plan embracing 10,751 acres. In the House of Representatives, 11 Nov., 1719, it was—

"Ordered that the said ten thousand seven hundred and fifty-one acres be sold to the highest bidder, the Produce to be returned to the Public Treasury for the use of the Province . . . No one person to purchase above the quantity of 300 acres saving that 400 Acres may be laid out in the said tract in such convenient Place and Form as shall be approved by the said Committee, to fulfill that half of the grant of eight hundred Acres made to Herbert Pelham, Esq., which fell to Isaac Winslow and his sister."¹

On 16 June, 1721, William Dudley, Esq., informed the House that he had sold the 10,000 acres, etc., but could not give a title as it was not laid out to any County. Upon which it was resolved that the said 10,000 acres be annexed to and accounted a part of Suffolk County from this time.

and form as the committee shall approve is affirmed. The place of the grant was in the main the same, but the form, as appears from Livermore's deed, when he sold two years later, was materially changed. We find no other confirmation of Mr. Livermore's title than is contained in the above order.

It may well be supposed that a public sale of 10,000 acres of land in the vicinity of Oxford, Leicester and Worcester, must have awakened unusual interest, especially among the numerous land speculators of the day. The record of the sale does not appear, but we gather the names of most of the purchasers from the deeds, which were all dated 20 July, 1721, and recorded in the registry of Suffolk County at Boston.

John Meinziez a large owner at Leicester, Jonas Clark, William Dummer, Samuel Dummer, William Stoddard, James Alford and Edward Winslow, all of Boston; Edward Bridges, Daniel Weld, John Hely and Daniel Williams, all of Roxbury; Jonathan Stone and Uriah Angier, both of Watertown; Thomas Lyon of Dorchester, William Ward and Thomas How, both of Marlboro'; Nathaniel Hammond of Newtown and Rev. John Campbell of Oxford, bought each 300 acres. Benjamin Thompson of Roxbury bought a 500-acre lot, bounding north on Brookfield [now in Sturbridge]. Ebenezer Learned of Oxford bought a 300-acre lot and also one-half a 600-acre "gussett or gore," which was the acute angle of the plot extending east to Worcester corner, he having the east division and Mrs. Ann Stone, widow of John Stone of Framingham and the mother of Uriah Stone, the west portion, bounding north on Leicester, east on Ebenezer Learned, south on Oxford line and west partly on Daniel Livermore and partly on John Corey.¹ Mrs. Ann Stone died 25 March, 1733, at Framingham, and her son Daniel "administered on land in the Gore." [Barry.] This 300 acres came into the possession of James Stone, a son of Ann, who in 1735 sold 200 acres, that portion lying east of the river, to Gibbs. After passing through the hands of several owners it came in 1772 again into the possession of the Stone family, Uriah being the purchaser. The western portion was sold in 1745 by James Stone to his brother Uriah of Framingham, who removed and spent his remaining years here, leaving the property to his heirs.

The western and broader portion of the original Gore, to the amount of 3,000 or more acres, is now a part of Sturbridge. The large central portion was embodied in Charlton at its incorporation, and now constitutes an important part of the agricultural lands of that town, having as its main village that known as Charlton Depot. The acute angle was incorporated in the town of Ward at its founding in 1778. A tract remained between Leicester and Oxford of 738 acres (according to McIntire's survey in 1831), which in 1838 was made a part of Oxford. A plan of this by William Baldwin, dated Dec. 7, 1837, is in Plans, Mass. Archives, B. 30, p. 5, which gives the north line as 356 rods, the east, 223 rods, the south, 450 rods and the west, 335 rods.²

gives north line 351 rods, east line 226 rods, and west line 333 rods. For later history of these lands see Homesteads.

OWNERS AND CONVEYANCES.

This department is in some instances disconnected and imperfect, for the reasons, first, that descriptions in deeds were obscure, and, second, that many conveyances were never recorded.

The first name given is that of the present owner or occupant. The map referred to is that published about 1853 by Richard Clark from surveys by G. M. Hopkins, Jr.

16. [House removed.] "R. A. Davis" on map. This was a house built by David Lilley soon after he bought the Lovett farm as a dwelling for workmen in the scythe shop near by, and was occupied by several persons who afterward operated the shops. [See Bug Swamp Mills.] It was owned for many years by Col. Stephen Davis, who bought of Lilley's heirs. [See H. 17.] Samuel Slater and sons are present owners.

17. HERBERT E. and WALTER A. LOVETT. "P. and C. Lovett" on map. 6 April, 1738, Samuel Davis to his son Samuel, 189 a., of which the Lovett farm is the east part. Samuel Davis, Jr., had three sons, Samuel, Learned and Elijah; 21 Aug., 1784, the two latter quitclaimed to Samuel, 3d, this east part, 117 a. and buildings; 11 March, 1801, Samuel, 3d, to David Lilley, and he, same date, to David, his son, in consideration of support of self and w.; 20 Oct., 1825, Polly Lilley, widow, and Gibbs Lilley to Stephen Davis, their rights in 200 a. in Sutton and Oxford; 8 Dec., 1827, Stephen Davis to Phinehas Lovett and Charles Lovett, 110 a. Phinehas d. here, 1858, Charles was later sole owner and d. here in 1888, devising the farm to his nephews, Herbert E. and Walter A. Lovett.

18. WILLIAM A. ELLIS. "L. Harwood" on map. Known as "Sacarappa." July, 1792, Elijah and Learned Davis to Joshua Stockwell, nailmaker, 2 a. 10 r. N. of brook, house, blacksmith shop; Stockwell had built these previously; same date, Elisha Davis to same, one-half a. adjoining on the south, with a right of way to the same; 27 April, 1802, Joshua Stockwell to Rufus Moore; 13 March, 1815, Rufus Moore to John Kenney, Jr., the upper part; 15 April, 1816, Rufus Moore to Learned Davis; 1 April, 1818, set off on execution to Ebenezer Rich; 12 Dec., 1828, Ebenezer Rich to Reuben Waters; 18 Feb., 1833, Reuben Waters to Jonas L. Sibley, mort.; 1 March, 1833, Sibley assigned to Wor. Mut. Fire Ins. Co.; 17 March, 1845, Wor. Mut. Fire Ins. Co. to William Sigourney; 1 Oct., 1851, William Sigourney to William Dickinson, mort.; 1 Jan., 1866, William Dickinson to Ebenezer D. Rich; 5 April, 1884, Ebenezer D. Rich to Abel M. Chaffee.

19. FRANCIS SIBLEY ESTATE. "F. F. Sibley" on map. 21 Aug., 1784, the three sons of Samuel Davis, Jr., made a division of his farm among themselves. Samuel, 3d, who had the Lovett place quitclaimed to Elijah and Learned, his brothers, the west part; 8 Dec., 1793, Elijah quitclaimed the Sibley farm to Learned, who built the house now standing; 28 Dec., 1813, Learned Davis to Francis Sibley and Ebenezer Rich, sons-in-law; 7 March, 1819, Ebenezer Rich to Francis Sibley, his share; Sibley d. here, 1848; his daughter now, 1890, occupies.

20. KENDALL MARCY. "C. A. Sigourney" on map. 21 Aug., 1784, this with H. 19 was quitclaimed to Elijah and Learned Davis by Samuel, their brother. The original Samuel Davis, Jr., house stood on site of present house. Elijah, his son, spent his days and d. here; 6 March, 1840, Ezra Davis and others, heirs of Elijah, deeded to Charles A. Sigourney, who built the present house; 7 Feb., 1870, Charles A. Sigourney to Liberty Bigelow; 1878, Liberty Bigelow to Kendall Marcy.

21. "Barton Hill." House removed. This place lies a quarter of a mile east of the house of Lucian Chaffee, at the west foot of Barton Hill and is supposed to have been a part of Phinehas Dana's farm; no road passes it. For many years John Barton, son-in-law of Dana, lived here. The house was removed many years ago; the remains, cellar, garden plot, etc., may be seen; a beautiful locality. In 1760 John Barton, w. Abigail, Phinehas Dana of Dedham, John Ayres, w. Hannah of Newton, and Abner Town, w. Susanna, deeded to John Dana their rights. In 1816 heirs of John Dana to Ebenezer Dana; 17 March, 1818, Ebenezer Dana to Francis Sibley, who later sold to Israel Sibley, his brother, to whose estate it now belongs. This was the scene of the Indian affair referred to on page 43.

22. LUCIAN M. CHAFFEE. "J. Walker" on map. 14 Dec., 1730, Samuel Davis to Phinehas Dana, 90 a. east of Great Meadow, part of Bernon land; Dana d. here, and his son John succeeded as owner; 29 June, 1816, heirs of John Dana to Ebenezer Dana, son of John; 20 March, 1833, Ebenezer Dana to Jonathan Sibley, David Nichols and Delano Peirce; 1 April, 1833, these to Joseph Brown, Jr. (who owned the Gleason place adjoining), 16 a. and house; Brown sold to James Walker, who sold to Jonathan P. Dana; 2 Oct., 1855, Jonathan P. Dana to Amos P. Newton; 12 Aug., 1861, Amos P. Newton to Mary J., w. of Abel M. Chaffee; 13 Feb., 1867, Mary J. Chaffee to John Taylor; 6 July, 1869, John Taylor to Lucian M. Chaffee of Willimantic, Conn. The original Dana house stood in the fields east of the present one. John Dana built the present house, his son Jeremiah being the first child born there.

23. VERNON CHAFFEE. "J. Brown" on map. 1740, Samuel Davis to Benjamin Davis, 85 a. in east part of Oxford; 7 Dec., 1741, Benjamin Davis to James Hovey, 40 a. of same, a $1\frac{1}{2}$ -rod road through; 1752, a part of this land, and one-half a house, and a shop went by Hovey's will to his nephew, Daniel Gleason, who bought later several pieces of land near; 15 March, 1791, Daniel Gleason to his son Josiah, 97 a.; Josiah d. here, 1817; Lydia, dau. of Josiah, m. Joseph Brown, Jr., who came into possession of the farm; 1 Nov., 1865, Joseph Brown and Lydia, his w., to Collins Allen, 48 a.; 6 March, 1866, Collins Allen to Elvira, w. of Vernon Chaffee. The first house on this farm stood in the field east of the present one. Brown lived in it some years and later built the present house. The original Benjamin Davis house is believed to have stood over a cellar now visible a short distance southwest of Vernon Chaffee's house.

24. Late JOHN REYNOLDS. "A. Pratt" on map. This farm was the west part of Benjamin Davis' land, H. 23, bought in 1740. 17 May, 1751, Benjamin Davis to Joseph Pratt of Dedham, known as "Meadow Joe," 66 a.; 6 April, 1795, Joseph Pratt to Baxter, his son, one-half of 120 a.; 5 Dec., 1826, Betsey Pratt, administratrix of estate of Baxter, her husband, to Stearns Witt, 117 a.; same date, Stearns Witt and others to Levi Chilson and Amos Pratt of Bellingham; 9 April, 1831, Chilson to Pratt. The house formerly stood one-fourth of a mile north of its present location; removed by Amos Pratt. 12 Sept., 1854, Amos Pratt of Charlton to Sylvanus Robinson, who divided and sold in lots; 8 Oct., 1857, Sylvanus Robinson to William Daniels, 5 a. and house; 9 May, 1862, William Daniels to William H. Thurston; 27 July, 1870, William H. Thurston to Sally, w. of John Reynolds.

walls, and of sufficient size to form a comfortable habitation. The northern wall is about 10 feet high at the centre and slopes gradually each way. The southern wall is lower. Timbers were placed across for a roof, and walls of wood built front and back. In the northeast corner were a fireplace and chimney. Several of his children were born here.

Larned to Simon, his brother, 50 a. adjoining the house lot; same date, John Larned to his son Simon, 1 a. and house; Simon settled and d. here; in 1881, Louisa, his widow, deeded to George Hinchliff.

to decay and was removed as early as 1825. This is supposed to have been the homestead of Richard Williams.

77. BUFFUMVILLE ESTATE. John Nichols, father and son, were large land owners in the west part of Oxford and the borders of Charlton. The first purchase was from Oxford assessors of land sold for taxes, Dec., 1751, 80 a., taxed to heirs of John Danforth of Dorchester. The next was more than 100 a. in the northeast corner of the Richard Williams 500 a. lot, as follows: 28 Feb., 1752, Ebenezer Coburn to William Lamb, a lot of 60 a. and another of 40 a. Through the first lot ran the [little] river, with a "dam in it to supply ditches on both sides of said river," for irrigation of the Coburn farm. The old ditch is now to be seen on the south side of the river. 1 Feb., 1755, William Lamb to John Campbell; 6 March, 1756, John Campbell to John Nichols. This purchase included the Gates place and that next west, which was Lieut. John Nichols' homestead, the house having stood on the north side the old Sturbridge road, through Howarth's village, near the school-house now standing. House removed as early as 1800. In 1756 was purchased 25 a., and in 1768 149 a. of William Thomas, husband of Mary Papillon, b. east on Ebenezer Coburn. In 1793 Samuel Danforth and Elijah Dunbar deeded to John Nichols and his grandsons, Alexander and Jonathan, 183 a., partly in Oxford and partly in Charlton, b. south by Blackwell's line, north by the "Centre line," east on Oxford village line. This included the water privilege and land on which it appears the buyers had previously lived. On 17 April, 1795, John Nichols deeded his third of the latter tract to his son John, who in 1811 deeded to his sons Alexander and Jonathan, who thus became sole owners. 24 June, 1823, Jonathan and Alexander Nichols, Barnabas Rich, w. Lucy, John Stevens, w. Lois, deeded to Stearns Witt, 29 a. and buildings. On 1 April, 1824, Stearns Witt to his brothers, Hollis, Archibald and Alexander C., three undivided fourths. Later Stearns DeWitt¹ and Samuel Dowse became owners. On 20 Sept., 1842, Stearns DeWitt deeded three-fourths (his interest) to Elias B. Crawford. On 24 April, 1845, Dowse having deceased, his widow deeded to Crawford the other fourth. On 1 July, 1847, Crawford deeded to Charles L. Harding, who in Dec., 1852, conveyed to Moses Buffum and Edward Thayer; 1855, Edward Thayer to Moses Buffum, whose heirs are present owners. The mansion on the hill north of the village, known as "Bonnie View," was completed in 1881.

78. MOSES H. BUFFUM. This is a farm lying south of and contiguous to the manufacturing property at Buffumville, formerly owned by Hollis DeWitt. On 1 Oct., 1868, Benjamin DeWitt, son of Hollis, to Charles Lamb; 1 July, 1870, Charles Lamb to Moses Buffum.

96. GEORGE H. NICHOLS. "A. B. Taft" on map. 23 Dec., 1842, Maverick Jennison to Martin Boomer (who built the house, 1843), 88 a.; 21 March, 1848, Martin Boomer to H. G. Otis, Silas S. and Elisha C. Taft; 26 Aug., 1871, Asa B. Taft, who had occupied, to George S. Melvin and Henry J. Harlow of Springfield; 30 March, 1874, they to Robert Craig of Charlton; 5 Sept., 1879, Robert Craig to John A. Marsh; 1 April, 1889, John A. Marsh to George H. Nichols.

97. GEORGE W. DAVIS. "E. Shumway" on map. 21 Oct., 1788, Josiah Wolcott to his dau. Freke, a part of Kitchen's land, 65 a. and buildings, b. west on Elizabeth's land [H. 95]; Josiah Shumway m. Freke Wolcott, resided and d. here; his heirs are present owners. The old house was burned March, 1835, and the present one soon after built.

98. CHARLES O. WALLIS. "C. Learned" on map. 21 March, 1780, Thomas Parker, shop-joiner, to Ebenezer Redding, who d. here; 1810, Ebenezer Redding to Andrew Sigourney. Abigail, widow of Benjamin Learned, owned soon after Redding's decease, occupied many years and devised it to her daughter Abigail, who m. Nathaniel Emerson; 28 Sept., 1867, Abigail and Nathaniel Emerson to Charles O. Wallis. A new house was built after Redding died.

99. Late ALVIN FITTS. "Alvin Fittz" on map. Before Nov., 1789, the heirs of Josiah Wolcott deeded land to Abijah Lamb, who built a house and settled here; 29 April, 1806, Andrew Sigourney to William Lamson, 69 a.; Walter Fitts bought, and 22 Feb., 1812, deeded to Daniel Fitts, 38 a.; occupied by tenants. At the death of Daniel this place went into the possession of his son John; 2 May, 1838, John Fitts to Alvin and David Fitts; they removed the old house and built the present one; David sold to Alvin, who d. here, 1880. Adjutant Ebenezer Pray once lived at this place.

100. [House removed.] HOMESTEAD OF ABIJAH GALE. 3 Nov., 1787, Samuel Danforth of Boston to Abijah Gale, two lots, in all 61 a., in north part of Oxford; 10 Feb., 1801, Abijah Gale to Benjamin Fitts, 10 a. with buildings. The old house was removed many years ago. A part of the land which lay west of H. 101, near Charlton line, was owned 32 years ago by John C. Steere; a small modern house stood there which was burned 1856, and the place abandoned.

101. ANSON NICHOLAS. "B. Fitts" on map. 1794, Samuel Danforth of Boston to Thomas Clark, 97 a., b. south on Kitchen, west on Abijah Gale, east on Gen. Learned, etc.; 11 March, 1799, Thomas Clark to Benjamin Fitts, Jr., 45 a., b. north on Jesse Smith and James Trumbull, east on Asa Conant, south on Abijah Lamb; Fitts built the house, spent his days and d. here; his heirs divided the farm, the house and 20 a. went to his son David; 7 April, 1863, David Fitts to Anson Nicholas and Almon Lincoln, son-in-law.

102. Late LIBERTY LAMB. "L. Lamb" on map. 20 July, 1721, the State to Mrs. Ann Stone, 300 a. in North Gore; on her decease, 1733, this land came to her son James, who in 1745 sold the western portion to his brother Uriah of Framingham, who settled here; Samuel, Uriah's son, succeeded; Liberty Lamb m. Hannah, dau. of Samuel, and 1834 settled on this estate and d. here, 1876. His sons have been owners since.

103. MERIAM ESTATE. In 1719 Daniel Livermore received 400 a. in the "Country Gore," laid out to him on a special grant on which he built a house [see North Gore]. 30 May, 1721, Daniel Livermore to Joseph Haven and Henry Mellen, both of Framingham, the same, beginning at a tree on the west side of the river [at Oxford north line], thence N. 13° W. 200 rods, thence W. 13° S. 320 rods, thence S. 13° E. 200 rods to Oxford north line, thence on said line 320 rods to the first bound. On 14 April, 1729, Haven and Mellen deeded the same to Jonathan and Hezekiah Meriam and Ebenezer Meriam, their cousin, who on 13 Aug. following, sold to Joshua, brother of Ebenezer, one-fourth of the same. On 14 Aug. a division was made, Ebenezer and Joshua receiving the western half, and Hezekiah and Jonathan the eastern. On 17 Oct., 1733, Joshua and Ebenezer divided their share, the former receiving the north part, 112 a., and the latter the southern, 88 a.; Ebenezer settling at the David Fitts place. On 3 June, 1779, Joshua deeded his estate ["S. Merriam"] on map] to his son James; Samuel, son of James, inherited the same, spent his whole life and d. here; built the present house a few years before his decease. On 1 April, 1874, Nancy T., his widow, deeded to Charles C. Lamb, who removed part of the house to Rochdale, and 30 April, 1880, sold the farm to Charles H. DeVoe of Worcester, owner, 1888.

Of Ebenezer's 88 a., the northern part, "D. Fittz" on map, went to his son Ephraim, who d. there, and 4 July, 1781, Sampson Marvin, w. Ruth, former w. of Ephraim, then of New Salem, deeded to Jotham Meriam, brother of Ephraim; Jotham, son of Jotham, was next owner, and 15 Oct., 1845, deeded to David and Alvin Fitts; 25 Jan., 1854, Alvin to David, his half; Jotham, son of David Fitts, with his mother own and occupy, 1890.

The southern part of the 88 a. went to Ebenezer Meriam, son of Ebenezer, and from him to his son Artemas, who sold to his brother Wright S., who occupied long and d. there. His sons are present owners.

104. Late GEORGE W. HARTWELL. "G. W. Hartwell" on map. Part of the Meriam purchase [103]. Hezekiah and Jonathan Meriam both settled here. Tradition says the latter, until his sale to Hartwell, occupied a house he had built in the northeast portion, which was soon removed; the cellar is now visible. 30 May, 1734, Jonathan Meriam to Isaac Hartwell, 100 a., his share of the 400 a. purchase; Jonathan returned to Lexington. No record appears of the division between Hezekiah and Jonathan, but the separating line ran north and south, and the present road divided a large part of the way. On 29 Nov., 1734, Hezekiah Meriam deeded to Isaac Hartwell 3 a. and a house, "part of Livermore's farm." On 24 March, 1762, when past middle life, Hezekiah deeded one-half of 70 a. and buildings to his son-in-law, Jacob Pierce, and 28 March, 1765, Meriam and Pierce conveyed the same, called 65 a., to Joseph Edwards, also son-in-law of Meriam, who the following August sold the same to Isaac Hartwell, and it has since been a part of the Hartwell farm. This was the northwestern portion of the eastern moiety of the 400 a. purchase, and south of it lay the Lock farm, of 40 a., H. 105, making with it the complement of Hezekiah's share. There are to be seen two cellars on this tract. One is supposed to mark the site of Hezekiah's house, and the other that of a son-in-law. On 3 Feb., 1784, Isaac Hartwell deeded to Samuel Hartwell one-half of 248 a. and buildings. Later Samuel was owner of the whole. Isaac and Samuel both d. here, and after the decease of the latter his son George W. bought the rights of the other heirs, and owned and occupied until his death here in 1887. His heirs are present proprietors. The eastern part of the mansion is said to have been built by Livermore, and the western, bearing on its gable "1769," was added by Capt. Isaac Hartwell.

105. FRANK E. MERRIAM. "R. Eddy" on map. This was a part of the 400 a. Meriam purchase and was conveyed by Hezekiah, perhaps to Muzzy. In 1738 Ebenezer Lock bought land in the Gore of Joseph Muzzy of Lexington [no record found]; 4 June, 1738, Ebenezer Lock of Westboro' to Amos Meriam, 40 a. with mansion house; 28 May, 1744, Amos Meriam to Ebenezer Lock of the Country Gore; 19 June, 1760, Ebenezer Lock to his son-in-law, Nehemiah Stone, the whole of the land bought of Joseph Muzzy in 1738, excepting 10 a. sold Isaac Hartwell, b. north on Hezekiah Meriam, west on Ebenezer Meriam, south on Oxford line, east on Hartwell; 2 April, 1777, Nehemiah Stone to Isaac Hartwell, all the land bought of Ebenezer Lock; 1 April, 1790, executors of Isaac Hartwell to Parley Eddy; 3 March, 1831, Parley Eddy to Rufus, his son; 1 Nov., 1883, Albert A., son of Rufus, to Frank E. Merriam.

In May, 1766, this property was owned by John Jop. [See Jop, Genealogical record.] The house was small and old and was occupied many years by Abner Mellen, who d. here. It was in 1814 owned by the town, as in Nov. of that year it was voted to "let Mellen stay at present in the house owned by the town."

12 May, 1766, Jonathan Fuller to William Davis, the remaining acre and a half; 6 April, 1772, William Davis to Ephraim Russell; 1786, Ephraim Russell to Andrew Sigourney, who lived here until he built his new house, H. 194, in 1817. After the decease of Sigourney, in the division of his estate, this corner on which stands the present house and that next north (which was a store on the corner,) was set to his son Martin, who built the present house. The old mansion house, built very early, was set to Sigourney's dau. Mary, who m. Stephen Hunt. It was so out of repair as to be untenable, but was desirable as a business location, and was occupied as a shoe manufactory by Seth Daniels & Co. from about 1847. On 18 Dec., 1869, they purchased and occupied it until they relinquished business. On 30 Dec., 1870, they sold the easterly portion to Allen L. Joslin, on which was built the present factory of A. L. Joslin & Co., and on 23 April, 1877, the old mansion with lot to Orrin F. Joslin, who immediately removed the house.

193. That portion of the Sigourney estate east of the railroad, now occupied by two buildings, once shoe shops, was set off to William Sigourney, who about 1840 built "The Arcade," in which a variety of business enterprises were carried on, burned, 1850. Later the shops now standing were erected. The remaining portion, 5 a. easterly, Andrew Sigourney on 16 July, 1824, deeded to Benjamin F. Town; Sigourney's old store building had been removed from the corner to this lot and fitted for a dwelling; 15 Oct., 1827, Benjamin F. Town to Charles T. Parish, who carried on blacksmithing here; 22 May, 1833, Charles T. Parish to Leonard Laffin, blacksmith; 12 Jan., 1837, Leonard Laffin to Loring Davis; Laffin removed to H. 172; Davis d. while owner; 18 March, 1845, his heirs deeded to Erastus Davis, brother of Loring, a part; 4 May, 1848, Erastus Davis to Sylvanus Robinson, west part, 6 rods front; 8 Feb., 1849, Sylvanus Robinson to Chad B. Carey, who built a house which was burned with the "Arcade" and the present one later built by him; 4 April, 1852, Jasper Brown, deputy sheriff, on execution, to Richardson and Kendall of Boston, who 1854 deeded to Charles Yeomans, who d. here; 4 Jan., 1873, heirs of Charles Yeomans to Elisha N. Bigelow, present owner of house next the former shoe shops.

On 24 May, 1845, Erastus Davis sold to Abel F. Stow, $3\frac{3}{4}$ a., east part; Stow built the house, now Hiram K. Johnson's, and a currier's shop, now a dwelling occupied by his widow. Between Stow and the lot sold Robinson was a lot of 136 rods, owned by Mary, w. of Reuben Waters, sister of Loring Davis; 3 July, 1845, she deeded this to Cyprian Whiting, who kept here a livery stable; 20 Feb., 1847, Cyprian Whiting to Addison Bailey, 50 rods and buildings, west part; 3 April, 1849, Addison Bailey to William R. Foskett, who began to build the house now belonging to estate of Timothy Aldrich; 1 Nov., 1849, he sold it with 31 rods of land to Sylvanus Robinson, and on the remainder of the lot built the cottage next east, which he sold Feb., 1864, to William Gibson; 1881, William Gibson to Reuben Rich and Hiram K. Johnson, present owners.

On 10 Aug., 1849, Cyprian Whiting to Rufus R. Dana, the stable and lot; Dana kept a stable here; 3 March, 1857, Rufus R. Dana to Abel M. Chaffee, who continued the business; 20 Aug., 1859, Abel M. Chaffee to Samuel Davis, who rented to tenants; 30 Dec., 1865, Samuel Davis to Reuben Rich, who moved the barn to the rear and built the present house.

Charles P. and Abijah Nichols carried on cabinet making here. Robinson remodelled the house in its present form.

219. JOHN E. KIMBALL. Part of H. 220. 5 April, 1834, Loring Davis, heir of Abijah, to Daniel Davis, lot; 23 May, 1834, Daniel Davis to William Robinson, Jr., who built a small house in which his father lived three years; 23 Jan., 1837, William Robinson, Jr., to William Kimball, who same year moved back the small house and built the front part now attached to it. He d. here, and his son, John E., is owner, 1890. House remodelled as at present, 1886.

220. GEORGE W. HOLMAN. Part of the Richard Moore estate [H. 216]. This lot of 60 a. was quitclaimed by Richard Moore, Jr., to Elijah Moore at the division of their property in 1750. It included the home lot of John Chamberlain. 11 April, 1768, Elijah Moore to Samuel Moore of Worcester; 29 Jan., 1771, Samuel Moore to Elisha Davis, 48½ rods on Main street; 17 Sept., 1795, Elisha Davis to his son Abijah, who had previously lived at H. 187; Abijah built the present house about 1796, occupied and d. here, 1833. In the division of his estate the homestead went to his son Abijah, who also d. here. His adopted dau. m. George W. Holman.

221. Late BENJAMIN PAINE. 29 March, 1815, Abijah Davis to John Wetherell and Richard Moore, lot; house built the same year; 1816, Richard Moore to John Wetherell, one-half house and lot; a year or two later Wetherell built a store south of his house, where he engaged in trade; 1 April, 1834, John Wetherell to Loring Davis, who fitted up the store for a dwelling; 11 March, 1843, the heirs of Loring Davis to Benjamin Paine, the whole; 27 March, 1843, Benjamin Paine to Schuyler B. Chaffee, the south house (old store); 6 Nov., 1851, Schuyler B. Chaffee to his father, Alpheus Chaffee, who enlarged and repaired the house, occupied and d. here, and his grandson, Orrin B. Chaffee, is present owner. Mr. Paine continued at the north house and d. there. His granddaughter, the late Mrs. Watson, was owner at her decease, 1890.

222. GEORGE H. DODGE. Part of the Benjamin Chamberlain or old tavern estate, H. 235, and came with the balance of the lands down to Ezra Bowman, who in 1775 sold off the Jonathan Sibley farm, H. 225, of which, in July, 1784, William Bowen of Providence, physician, took on execution vs. Charles Dabney, 10 a. and 75 rods at the southeast corner, 25 rods in front; 16 Jan., 1794, William Bowen to Andrew Sigourney; 14 June, 1833, Andrew Sigourney to Samuel C. Paine, who built on the south part the present house, and d. here, 1888; his dau., Ellen A., deeded, 1889, to George H. Dodge.

223. Late TIMOTHY ALDRICH. Part of H. 222. 18 June, 1833, Samuel C. Paine to Samuel Dowse, 8½ a.; before 1838 William Coburn of Charlton, carpenter, built the present house, the land remaining the property of Dowse ; 15 March, 1838, Samuel Dowse to Charles R. Carlton, house and land ; 16 March, 1839, Charles R. Carlton to William Kimball and Samuel Dowse ; 1 April, 1843, Samuel Dowse to Peter C. Bacon and Cromwell Moulton, executors of the estate of Richard Olney, one-half ; 1 April, 1847, Peter C. Bacon and Cromwell Moulton, executors, to Mrs. Timothy Aldrich, one-half ; 15 March, 1848, William Kimball to same, one-half ; Timothy Aldrich and w. both d. here.

224. Late WILLIAM A. WHEELOCK. Part of H. 223. 1 May, 1841, Samuel Dowse to Ruth Phillips, the north part of lot bought of Samuel C. Paine ; house built by her son William A. Wheelock the same year ; he d. here and his heirs were owners, 1890.

225. WILLIAM B. CUSHMAN. Part of 150 a. sold 1723, by Benjamin Chamberlain to Samuel Davis, and by him, 1724, to William Davis, who occupied, and 2 April, 1760, deeded to Alexander Campbell, 85½ rods on Main street, including tavern estate ; 8 Nov., 1773, it came into the possession of Ezra Bowman.¹ See H. 235. 21 Nov., 1775, Ezra Bowman to Edward K. Wolcott, 24 a. and buildings, b. south on "Chobaug Lain" ; 28 April, 1777, Amos Putnam to Charles Dabney of Oxford, merchant, 16 a. in rear of the 24 a. and between "Quaboag road and the new County road" ; 5 Jan., 1778, Edward K. Wolcott to Charles Dabney of Providence, R. I., 24¾ a., 50½ rods on Main street ; Dabney took down the old house and began building a large new one, but had not completed it when he sold ; 12 May, 1784, Charles Dabney to Ephraim Russell, blacksmith, who occupied and had a shop near the street not far from the Col. DeWitt house ; 2 Dec., 1805, Ephraim Russell to Timothy Lamson, who occupied, b. north on "the meeting-house yard" ; 23 Feb., 1809, Timothy Lamson to Stephen Keith of Sutton ; 1 March, 1810, Stephen Keith to Josiah S. Prentice, who occupied ; 6 Oct., 1810, Josiah S. Prentice to Jonathan Sibley, who d. here, as did his widow. Mr. Sibley devised the homestead to his widow during her life, and as they had no children, to the children of Thomas Nichols and Lawson Gould at her decease. These sold to J. Edward Nichols, son of Thomas, who in 1887 sold to Mrs. William B. Cushman. The old house built by Dabney was a gambrel roof and sloped to one story in the rear. Sibley on buying raised up the back part and put on a square hip roof, and finished it throughout. This house was burned 1846, and the present one built soon afterward by the Mutual Insurance Company, Worcester.

been found. William Davis in his deed to Campbell, 1760, bounds the estate conveyed south on Quaboag lane.

226. MRS. WILLIAM NEWTON. Late Alexander DeWitt. Part of H. 225. 20 Sept., 1816, Jonathan Sibley to Richard Moore, 96 rods, adjoining the "meeting-house yard"; Moore had sold at H. 221; he soon built the present house, attaching a store at the north end in which he began trade; he d. here 1819; 1 April, 1824, Jonathan Davis to Ira Barton; 10 Oct., 1833, Ira Barton to Richard Olney; 14 June, 1837, Richard Olney to Peter C. Bacon; 31 Jan., 1840, Peter C. Bacon to Stephen Prince, Jr.; 23 April, 1849, Stephen Prince, Jr., to Alexander DeWitt; all these owners, excepting Davis, occupied; DeWitt remodelled and enlarged the house soon after purchase. He d. here 1879; his widow occupied till her decease. The estate was devised to Mrs. William Newton.

227. MRS. WILLIAM NEWTON [on Barton Street]. Part of H. 226. 4 Feb., 1829, Ira Barton to Josiah Moore and Danforth Brown, lot; 18 Feb., 1829, Danforth Brown to Justin Root, one-half; Root and Moore built for a bakery; 10 Nov., 1829, Josiah Moore to Justin Root, one-half; 17 Jan., 1835, Justin Root to David Nichols; 9 March, 1837, David Nichols to William Sigourney; 1857, William Sigourney to Dwight Foster of Worcester; 12 March, 1857, Dwight Foster to Alexander DeWitt; 23 June, 1884, executors of Alexander DeWitt to Eliza L., w. of William Newton.

Snow and Otis Learned, one-half; 1 Dec., 1853, Snow to Learned, one-fourth; 29 June, 1850, Alexander DeWitt to Emory Sanford, one-half; house burned 1854, owned by Emory Sanford and Otis Learned, who divided the lot, Sanford taking the south part on which he built the brick store. This he devised in his will to his nephews, William E. and Edward S. Pease, who, 30 Oct., 1885, deeded to E. Harris Howland of Spencer, who in 1890 sold to Fred. O. Cortis. The north part Otis Learned mort., 4 Aug., 1858, to Alexander DeWitt; 6 Feb., 1863, Alexander DeWitt sold his mort. to Elvira A., w. of Braman F. Sibley, who devised the estate to her husband; 11 June, 1877, Braman F. Sibley to Lydia J., w. of Alfred J. Kirby; 2 May, 1879, Lydia J. Kirby to Caroline A., w. of Henry J. Whiting, who in 1887 conveyed to Hollis DeW. Bacon.

On this estate were several other buildings. The first north of the tavern was a tailor's shop, two stories, built on leased land by Charles J. Stratford in 1819. In April, 1834, Alexander DeWitt sold this to Amasa Alton; April, 1837, Amasa Alton to William Robinson, Jr. who kept here the "Cash Store;" building burned 1856; 1 July, 1868, William Robinson to Town of Oxford, lot, on which was built the Town Hall.

A few rods further north was a small old house of which little can be learned, occupied early in the century by tenants. Near this was a shop; both were removed before 1830. On 1 Jan., 1765, Hezekiah Bellows sold to Thomas Fish half an acre, on which Fish built; 1 April, 1768, Thomas Fish to Samuel Denny of Leicester; 3 Dec., 1768, Samuel Denny to Jason Coller of Oxford, "with tailor's shop

Rich, father and son, of Charlton, who occupied, and Paul Rich and w. both d. here; 1872, Paul L. Rich to Alfred W. Long and Albert E. Merriam; 2 Dec.,

¹In a deed, 1796, this building was called "William Duncan's Bake shop."

1876, Albert E. Merriam to Alfred W. Long, one-half ; 8 Jan., 1878, Alfred W. Long to Sylvanus Robinson, by whom it was devised to the present owners.

240. MARY D. HYDE. Nathaniel Chamberlain's home lot.¹ 24 Sept., 1722, Nathaniel Chamberlain to Joseph Dana, 40 a. ; 28 June, 1726, Joseph Dana to Joseph Rockett ; 31 Dec., 1742, Joseph Rockett to David Holmes of Oxford, physician ; 10 Oct., 1746, David Holmes to Jonathan Pratt, Jr. ; 1748, Jonathan Pratt to Samuel Manning of Salem, gunsmith, who occupied ; 23 Feb., 1776, Samuel Manning of New Salem and Robert Manning of Oxford to Sylvanus Town ; 30 May, 1777, Sylvanus Town to Nathaniel Hamlin, who occupied ; 12 April, 1796, Nathaniel Hamlin to James Gleason, who occupied ; 9 Jan., 1830, James Gleason to Joab Maynard, who occupied ; 27 April, 1836, Joab Maynard to Stearns DeWitt, who the same year removed the old house and built the present one ; after the decease of Stearns DeWitt the estate was mort. to Alexander DeWitt, whose executors, 16 June, 1882, conveyed to Mary DeWitt, widow of Alexander ; 12 Aug., 1882, Mary DeWitt to Frederic G. Hyde.

241. ORRIN F. JOSLIN. Part of H. 240. 4 Feb., 1863, Mary DeW. Freeland, heir of Stearns DeWitt, to Emory Sanford, who in his will devised to William E. Pease ; 13 March, 1884, William E. Pease to Orrin F. Joslin ; house built 1884 and 1885.

242. ALLEN L. JOSLIN. Part of H. 240. 25 Dec., 1837, Stearns DeWitt to Horatio Bardwell, 25 a. ; Bardwell built a house in 1838 and occupied until it was burned, May, 1866 ; 2 Aug., 1866, executor of Horatio Bardwell to Allen L. Joslin, who built and occupied the present house.

243. CHARLES LAMB. Part of H. 240. 11 May, 1772, Samuel Manning to Josiah Wolcott, who built a small shop or store on the corner, where, according to tradition, he and his son John were engaged in trade. It was used later by Mr. Trow as a blacksmith shop. 8 Sept., 1798, the heirs of Josiah Wolcott to James Gleason ; 30 Nov., 1826, James Gleason to his son Richard, who in 1827 built the present house ; 9 Jan., 1827, Richard Gleason to Nathan Hall, mort. assigned, 8 April, 1833, to William Sigourney ; 29 March, 1837, William Sigourney to David Nichols ; 29 Dec., 1841, David Nichols to Elliot Marsh ; 16 July, 1846, Elliot Marsh to Tamar E. Barstow, the south half ; she built an addition ; 3 April, 1848, administrator of Elliot Marsh to Emory Sanford, north part ; 1 Oct., 1849, Emory Sanford to Perley Seaver of Worcester, north part ; 26 March, 1851, Perley Seaver to Alonzo and Rufus R. Dana, north part ;

¹The original record of Nathaniel Chamberlain's home lot does not apparently describe this estate, but that this is the 40 a. conveyed by him to Dana in 1722 is unquestionable.

THE
 INCLUDING THOSE WHOSE NAMES APPEAR ON THE TOWN RECORDS
 PRIOR TO 1850.
 WITH PERSONAL NOTES.

Some residing here previous to the above date may have been omitted. If so, it is because their names are not on the book of records of births.

There are many imperfections in the records; numerous families will be found incomplete: public and private records many times differ, and the defects in the sources of information are so many that perfect accuracy in a work of this extent is an impossibility.¹

Thomas Saunders of Gloucester, settled at Sturbridge in law practice, removed to Charlton, where he continued from 1800 to 1804. He was captain of a company at Ox. in "Adams' Army," 1799-1800. In 1804 he bought the house near the common, H. 244, to which he removed, continuing two or three years, removing to Westboro', in 1808 to Grafton, soon after to Southbridge, and about 1812 to Boston, where he d. Ammidown says he possessed a remarkable memory but convivial habits in too great a degree to do much as a business man. . . . Children: MARY ELIZA, b. 1793, m. 18 Oct., 1815, at Boston, Elkanah Cushman, second w., and had Charlotte Saunders, b. 23 July, 1816, the celebrated actress. Mary Eliza was remembered by one late of Oxford who knew her in childhood, as a lively, intelligent girl, of fair complexion, fine features and attractive manners, exceedingly fond of balls and parties, a good singer, bright scholar and a very superior reader. Of Mary Saunders, her mother, it is said she was cheery and mirthful, with wonderful powers of mimicry. Charlotte Cushman said: "I inherited my imitative faculty from my grandmother . . . I remember sitting at her feet . . . and hearing her sing a song of the period in which she delighted me by the most perfect imitation of every creature belonging to the farm-yard." FRANCIS A., b. 9 Sept., 1804, at Ox., sailor, lost at sea. Of him Miss Cushman says: "My uncle Augustus took great interest in me, offered me prizes for proficiency in studies, especially in music and writing. He first took me to the theatre on one of his return voyages, which was always a holiday time for me. . . . He had great taste for the dramatic profession." He was one of the proprietors of the old Tremont Theatre and through him the Cushman family was introduced to the fraternity of actors.

BARBOUR, REV. ISAAC R., son of James and Dorcas of Bridport, Vt., b. 14 Feb., 1794, educated at Dartmouth College and Andover Seminary, preached at New Ipswich, N. H., from Oct., 1824, to Aug., 1826, installed pastor at Byfield, 20 Dec., 1827, resigned April, 1833, later city missionary at Boston, installed 23 Nov., 1836, at Charlton, his last settlement. In the autumn of 1839 he came to Ox., bought land at north end of the Plain, built the house now Samuel C. Willis, Jr.'s, H. 188, and devoted himself to farming, fancy stock raising and silk culture, in which he was not very successful. In 1847 he removed to Worcester, and later to New York city, where he continued until the autumn of 1868. On a business tour to Illinois he was taken ill and d. at the home of his sister at Galesburg. As a minister he was able, but his tastes led him into business operations, and possessing a speculative and inquiring mind he went into new enterprises which led to more profit to others than himself. Distilling mineral oil from the rock was a project which he took up and on which he originated several valuable improvements.

Mining was a subject on which he spent much time and study, and in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Vermont mines and quarries of his opening are now in successful operation. The last few years of his life were spent in geological surveys for minerals in the Western States. He was early an anti-slavery man and an efficient worker in the temperance cause, of earnest and sincere purpose and upright life. He m. (1) Clara P. Adams, m. (2) Caroline M. Rogers, m. "HORATIO BARDWELL,"¹ a name fraught with fragrant memories, representing one honored, beloved and revered. With characteristic modesty he left no written memorial of himself, and of his life the only record is the works which follow. He was born in Belchertown, Nov. 3, 1788, the third son of Elijah and Sarah Bardwell, who were widely known as pious people. In 1803 the family removed to Goshen, a small town, offering small inducement to a farmer for gaining a livelihood. The reasons for the removal were later given by one of the daughters: "We came because there were here so many godly people and a good minister."

As a farmer's son Horatio was known as a kind, dutiful, virtuous youth, of winning manners, whom everybody loved. He was industrious and accustomed to hard labor on the farm, but this was no hindrance to the progress of the "kingdom within." The chief end of man was frequently the all-absorbing theme in the field and in the house, workmen at their nooning would exhaust the hour in religious conversation and prayer was always in season, and at times a power was felt which made the unseen the real. These early experiences he long years afterwards spoke of reverently.

In May, 1808, at the age of nineteen, he united with the church, and soon after began a course of study preparatory to the ministry. During the year previous his elder sister, Rhoda, was married to Rev. Wm. Fisher, who assumed the charge of fitting his new brother-in-law for the theological seminary. In 1811 young Bardwell went to Andover, and there he breathed an atmosphere perfumed with the same piety which had pervaded his hillside home. Adoniram Judson had graduated here the year before, leaving the impress of his spirit upon the seminary. Here was James Richards from Williams College, who for two years had labored there, promoting a spirit of missions among the students. Mills, Nott, Hall and other kindred spirits were also in the seminary, and with Newell had formed the resolution to spend their lives in Pagan lands if Providence should open the way. Mr. Bardwell soon became warmly interested and gave himself heartily to the movement. Before going to Andover his father had died, and the question arose "What would the mother say to his plans?" He expected her refusal. At his next visit home he cautiously unfolded the subject and asked her counsel; great was his surprise when she with uplifted hands said, "Horatio, that is what I have been praying for." He returned to his studies with no cloud of doubt. At the completion of his course he was licensed to preach by the Haverhill Association in 1814, and also received from Dartmouth College the degree of A.M.

A new consideration now presented itself, a helpmeet was needed. With other students he had held religious meetings in different parts of Andover, and in one of these neighborhoods had become acquainted with a young lady, an only child, who had but recently declined a proposal to accompany Mr. Newell as a missionary's wife. Being aware of this fact he had little courage to make advances. But those school-house meetings had won a place for him in the maiden's heart, and one day she surprised her mother by saying, "Mother, you was not willing I should go with Mr. Newell, but if that young Mr. Bardwell asks me you need not object, for I shall go."

On 21 June, 1815, Mr. Bardwell was ordained a missionary of the American Board. On 11 July he was married to Miss Rachel Forbush, the young lady alluded to, and in October, following, sailed for Bombay in company with Richards, his brother-in-law, Poor, Meigs and Warren. He was located at Bombay, where he labored until his health was so impaired that a council of physicians advised his removal from the climate as the only means of saving his life. He was carried on board ship in Jan., 1822, when very feeble, and the autumn following reached his native land, having been absent about six years. After a partial recovery, in 1823 he was installed pastor at Holden, as colleague with Rev. Mr. Avery, who died in less than a year. Here he labored successfully until 1832, when the Board again desired his services in Bombay, but a council of ministers decided that in view of his former experience such a measure was unadvisable. He, however, entered the service of the Board as agent for the New England States, which position he filled until 1836, when in March he received a call to Oxford, and was installed 8 June, 1836.

Dr. Sweetser in his obituary notice says: "His pastorate was eminently a successful one, marked by the numbers received into the church, as well as by the savor of a spiritual piety attending his preaching. . . . He left a precious memory and his words and his example will long continue to animate and cheer those who enjoyed his friendship and his instructions. . . . The keynote of his entire life and character is found in his consecration to the work of missions. It was then an untried experiment, and demanded singleness of purpose, firmness of faith and heroic self-denial. Honored and beloved as a missionary, he was not less honored and beloved as a pastor. He was regarded as a man singularly unselfish, free from all self-complacency, always ready to do, and always ready to yield; never shrinking from service and never obtruding himself, always courteous, affable and genial, always a man, a Christian always." In the pulpit he was easy and attractive; earnest and often eloquent, his sermons being generally of the hortative rather than the philosophical type.

He was an intimate friend of Dr. John Nelson of Leicester, and in 1827, while at Holden, was chosen a trustee of Leicester Academy, in which institution he took much interest, and for many years continued his connection therewith. In 1857 he received from Amherst College the honorary degree of D.D. He resigned his pastorate 20 July, 1862, but continued to preach as a supply for several months afterward.

Personally he was a little above the average size, of an erect and dignified bearing, with a pleasing and genial expression of countenance and a courteous manner, rarely seen, which bespoke the refinement and sincerity of his character. An accomplished lady of Boston met him on a certain occasion, and being impressed by his suavity remarked to a friend that such a bearing would grace any court in Europe. He was esteemed by all classes of the community, and for many years was chairman of the School Committee and had almost the entire supervision of the schools of the town.

In 1837 he purchased of Capt. Stearns DeWitt 25 acres of land on the west side of the main street near the church, upon which the next year he erected a dwelling in which he spent his subsequent years. On the evening of Thursday, 3 May, 1866, fire was discovered in his barn, which was connected by other out-buildings with his house. Hoping to save his favorite horse he ventured through the flames to rescue him but failed in the attempt, and returned severely burned. These injuries, with the shock which his nervous system received, resulted in his death at the house of his son Edward W. on the Saturday following, 5 May, 1866, at the age of 78 years. At a meeting of citizens of Oxford in Sanford Hall on Saturday, May 5, 1866, it was "Resolved, that we bear our cheerful testimony to those exalted personal qualities that have endeared the deceased to us all during a residence among us of over a quarter of a century; to that gentleness of nature, and benevolence of heart which made him for so many years a welcome visitor at our firesides, a sympathising friend in our afflictions and everywhere the Christian gentleman and agreeable companion." His widow survived him more than ten years and died at the same place at 90 years of age.

BARSTOW (Sumner and family wrote Bastow), SUMNER, son of Job who was b. about 1755, and was 1776 of Upton, saddler, that year bought land in southeast part of Sutton, sold 1779 [resided then at Sutton] and removed to Uxbridge, he m. Silence, dau. of Daniel Sumner of Mendon, now Milford.¹ From the inscription on the gravestone of Sumner Barstow and the fact of his father's residence in Sutton, as above given, it seems probable that Sutton was his birthplace. He spent his youth in Uxbridge, fitted for college with Rev. John Crane of Northbridge, was graduated 1802 at Brown University and in 1804 was in trade at Sutton in partnership with Amasa Braman, and in 1806 with Braman and Daniel Hovey under the name Braman, Barstow & Hovey. He studied law with Estes Howe, Esq., of Sutton and was admitted to Worcester bar March, 1811. At about this time he m. Tamar, dau. of Elder Samuel Waters of Sutton, and there opened a law office, continuing until 1823, when he removed to Oxford to take the cashiership of the Bank. He continued for a year or more law business here in partnership with Ira Barton. About 1811 he received from Gen. Jonathan Davis the appointment of Brigade Inspector with the rank of Major, and was long known under this title. In 1824 he was a candidate for representative to Congress. In his profession he was successful; in 1817 built the commodious house at Sutton, recently owned by James Phelps; but the law was not to his taste, and often when opportunity for business presented, in disregard of his own interests, he advised his clients to compromise rather than to litigate. The routine of the cashiership suited him better, and with faithfulness and care he discharged its duties until his active life closed. He had superior natural abilities, was suave and modest in manner, a lover of literature, possessed a disposition of extreme amiability, an unquestioned integrity, a sincere Christian faith and was a marked example of noble manhood. BARTHOLOMEW, NELSON. Although but a few years a resident of the town is worthy to be named as among its most honored citizens. He was b. 29 Dec., 1835, at Hardwick, son of Adolphus, the son of Samuel, formerly of Woodstock, Conn., entered Yale College in July, 1852, without conditions, and was graduated in 1856 with honors, studied law one year with Hon. Charles Brimblecom at Barre, entered the Harvard Law School in Aug., 1857, continuing until Jan., 1858, when he was admitted to practice in all the courts of the Commonwealth. He opened an office in Oxford in the summer of 1858, keeping up his interest in and study of the classics as well as practice in composition, in which he excelled. He was fond of society and was a most agreeable companion, fond of a joke, but always considerate of the feelings of others. In his profession he did not push for business, but carefully and wisely advised his clients and was contented to abide his day for professional distinction.

When the war broke out he was at once eager to go, and so informed his father, who, having a conviction that he would break down under the strain, tried, but in vain, to dissuade him. Having decided for himself he used his influence with others and did much to raise the Oxford company, and no doubt would have been elected its captain but that another older and familiar with the drill was available, whose election he urged and himself accepted the place of lieutenant. In the service he was faithful and efficient. Col. Devens had no officer in the whole line whom he loved and respected more. His regiment left camp at Worcester on 8 Aug., 1861, and about the 26th he was taken ill with malarial fever, on the march from Kalorama to Poolesville. His brother, Andrew J. Bartholomew, to whom we are indebted for the main facts of this sketch, writes: "Col. Devens sent me a dispatch requesting me to come on, I started at once, reached Washington Saturday afternoon, and Sunday morning in company with Gen. Laruder and staff started for Poolesville. That afternoon as dusk came on, our party being in want of water, we called at a house a little retired from the highway where we were kindly received, and while we were refreshing ourselves heard the boys in camp break out with 'John Brown's body,' etc. I inquired, 'Is that from the camp?' 'Yes,' was the reply. I asked 'What regiment?' The answer came, 'The Fifteenth Massachusetts.' I said, 'That is the camp I am going to, I have a very sick brother I am going to see.' 'Who is he?' said the lady. I replied, 'Lieut. Bartholomew of Company E.' 'He is sick here in this house,' was the response. 'My husband, Doctor Bruce, has charge of his case, but you cannot see him to-night, he is too ill.' Well, I saw him in the morning, and a fearfully sick man he was. He recuperated a little but did not materially improve and to save his life it was decided he must be removed. Plans were made to leave the last of October, but the twenty-first of that month brought us the defeat of Ball's Bluff and the sad details of the fight brought him down with a relapse. He was as much mortified as if he had been there, and sank back into his bed, as we thought, to die, but the surgeons revived him so that about the first of November we started northward. We reached Washington the first day, where we stopped two days and then proceeded to Philadelphia, where we stopped at the La Pierre House, one of the quietest in the city. I shall never forget the dignity and tenderness with which Col. Devens assumed the command of the little squad of physicians and attendants on board the train for my brother's care, or how his orders were obeyed when we stopped at the station, how gently he carried his head to the sick bed, and after summoning the best surgeon in Philadelphia stood anxiously over him till consciousness returned and he was able to speak again. Then with tearful eyes and a 'Good-bye my dear fellow,' he left for Massachusetts."

Medical skill and kind nursing did not avail. He continued to decline and on Thanksgiving Day, 21 Nov., 1861, he died, "and a pure and noble life, and one full of promise was closed."

The following appeared soon after his decease in a local newspaper:—

"The writer well remembers, in conversation soon after the capitulation of Sumter, how stern and decided was the language of the young lawyer in regard to that suicidal right—secession. We can all talk against treason, but my friend soon resolved to buckle on the armor of battle and fight it down. It is not my province to speak of his efforts in the organization of the Oxford company. I will say, however, that Lieut. Bartholomew was the life and soul of the company in its formation. The citizens of Oxford can bear emphatic testimony to the zeal, devotion and labor of their fellow-townsmen in rallying the men under the banner of Capt. Watson. He was a true type of the New England soldier."

9. STEPHEN, son of Edmund (8), was a physician, studied with Dr. Green of Leicester, was trader at the centre 1764 to 1766, from 1766 to 1769 landlord at the old tavern. He and his wife also were well educated, and he was a good physician; charitably inclined, and, it is said, lost much by never presenting bills to his patrons. He was patriotic, a good citizen, and one of the leading organizers of the "Social Library." He removed about 1776 to Winslow, or Vassalboro', Me., with his sons. About 1790 returned to Ox., and in March, 1794, the town granted him leave to build a shop "to be used as a mechanical shop during the town's pleasure," on the north side of the Sutton road near the school-house, a little east from the main street. He later returned to Maine, where he d. 21 Oct., 1804, and at his request was buried at the side of a large rock on the spot on which he spent the first night on going into the wilderness. This rock has been faced and now bears his monumental inscription. He m. 28 May, 1765, Dorothy, dau. of Elijah Moore,

10. STEPHEN, son of Stephen (9), enlisted at 21 in the western Indian war, marched by way of Philadelphia from Ox. to Detroit, Mich., served three years under Gen. Anthony Wayne, soon after his return chosen Capt. of militia, at his m. settled in the west part of the town near Charlton, later built a house about a mile north of "Ben Learned Hill." H. 95, and afterward resided at the Col. Ebenezer Learned house at North Ox. and d. there.

He was a man of much force of character, strong physique, a clear head, quick wit, and integrity and manly firmness which rendered him a leader among his fellow-citizens, a charitable and kindly disposition, and in politics a Democrat. He was often in town office, selectman, representative and moderator. He was a warm patriot and at the beginning of the Civil war declared his belief that Lincoln should have called for 200,000 instead of 75,000 men. He was a Royal Arch Mason and was buried with the honors of the order. He m. 22 April, 1804, Sarah, dau. of Capt. David and Sarah (Treadwell) Stone, he d. aged 87, 21 March, 1862, she d. 18 July, 1851. . . . Children: DOLLY, b. 2 Oct., 1804, a successful teacher, unm., d. 19 April, 1846; STEPHEN, b. 29 March, 1806; DAVID, b. 15 Aug., 1808; SALLY, b. 20 March, 1811, m. Being 10 years younger than her youngest sister she had few mates in her childhood. Her father amused her often by arranging imaginary battle-fields and troops of soldiers, and she once remarked, "I had no end of camp material, but no dolls—I never had one." As her older brothers and sisters were her instructors, she early imbibed a love for teaching, and when her brother Stephen took in hand the matter of improving the schools of the town she aided much in the work. He at this time was engaged in business requiring the services of a bookkeeper, which position she filled efficiently, thus early in life learning the methods of business. She taught school for several years at North Oxford, beginning when quite young, but not having had the opportunities for study in the higher branches later entered the Clinton Liberal Institute in central New York whence she went temporarily with school friends to New Jersey. Observing the state of educational affairs there she at once interested herself to devise means for their improvement. Public schools there were none worthy of the name. A portion only of the children were educated, and they in private classes, and the idea of education at public expense, in "pauper schools," as they were designated, was ridiculed by the people. In these circumstances she proposed to open a free school at Bordentown, and under the laws of the State and with the sanction of the local authorities, began with six boys, renegades from some of the private schools of the town. Other pupils soon came in, and the third week her school-room was filled and the services of an assistant were required. The enterprise proved such a success that private schools began to be discontinued and soon the borough voted to build a school-house at a cost of $4,000, which was done, and a few months later Miss Barton inaugurated the Free Public School of Bordentown with 600 pupils and eight teachers. This movement gave an impulse to the cause of education throughout the region, and its influence is felt to the present time.

Being on account of her severe labors obliged to seek a change for recuperation, she repaired to Washington, where after a few months she obtained a position under Mr. Charles Mason as clerk in the Patent Office. Continuing under many discouraging circumstances one of the first female clerks employed in government service drawing money for herself until the election of Buchanan, when being suspected of disloyalty to the prevailing sentiment her resignation was called for, and leaving she returned to Massachusetts, there spending the succeeding two or three years chiefly in study. Upon the election of Lincoln she was recalled to her old position.

April, 1861, brought the beginning of the Civil War, and when the Sixth Mass. Regt. entered Washington on the 19th, after its struggle with the mobs of Baltimore, she was at the railroad station and accompanied the wounded to the "Old Infirmary," and the next day was attending with needed provisions to the wants of the troops at the Capitol. As other soldiers came in through her efforts they were supplied with many comforts and necessities such as men leaving home in haste might feel the need of.

As the greatness of the coming contest became apparent the desire of Miss Barton increased to do all in her power in the country's behalf, and finding it impossible to carry out her wishes while retaining her clerkship she resigned, and thereafter gave herself to the service of caring for the sick and wounded of the Union army.

As soon as it was known throughout the North that she was thus acting as receiver and distributor, supplies came from all quarters in such quantities that she was obliged to ask transportation for them from the government. Through the efforts of Gen. Rucker her request was granted and the service continued through the war. Whenever a battle was looked for, or had unexpectedly occurred, by means of army wagons, boat or by train, supplies were taken, often in advance of the regular medical stores, so that the wounded and the surgeons were held in comfortable supply until regular help could reach them. The wounded on the boats in the Peninsular Campaign, at the battle of Cedar Mountain, the second Bull Run, Fairfax, Chantilly, Antietam, Falmouth, Fredericksburg, the siege of Charleston, Fort Wagner, the Wilderness and Spottsylvania and at Fredericksburg after these battles, the siege of Petersburg, the Mine, Deep Bottom, Point of Rocks, and in front of Richmond until the breaking up of the Southern prisons called her to Annapolis to meet the starving prisoners sent there. received more or less the benefits of her efforts.

Toward the close of the war a search was instituted for missing soldiers, numbering probably 80,000. At her request, made in July, 1865, and with President Lincoln's sanction, the Secretary of War sent to Andersonville an expedition under her direction to identify the graves of dead soldiers, and by means of Dorrance Atwater's "Death Record" 13,000 soldiers' graves were found, a large cemetery enclosed, laid out and adorned, graves put in order and head-boards erected, thus giving rest to many anxious ones at the North who knew not the fate of their missing friends, and enabling families to draw needed and well deserved pensions.

In compliance with a popular desire to hear details of her work she entered the lecture field, and in different parts of the North addressed large audiences until 1868, when her strength failing she went abroad for rest. She was in Switzerland in 1869 when the Franco-German war broke out, and at the invitation of the International Committee of the Red Cross of Geneva joined in the care of the wounded at the front at the battle of Woerth, and later was invited by the Grand Duchess of Baden to aid in the establishment of hospitals. She proceeded to the Court of Carlsruhe where she remained until the fall of Strasburg, when she entered that city with the German army, remaining eight months, doing relief work among its destitute and starving people, not only distributing necessities but organizing charities and specially aiding the women in providing clothing for the people.

She went thence at the fall of the Commune to the more terrible necessities of Paris, entering while the fires were yet raging and the Communists being shot down by troops. Her labors here were as arduous as at Strasburg, but not of so long duration. From Paris she went to other cities of France which had suffered from siege, doing the same service, closing her labors at Metz. In 1872 she went to London, fell ill from over-exertion and remained until the fall of 1873, when she was able to embark for her native land. Several years of infirm health followed. In 1877, having somewhat improved, in accordance with a resolution formed when in Europe she made an endeavor to obtain the influence of the United States government in favor of the Red Cross Association, and after five years of urgent effort in 1882 a unanimous vote of Congress for it was obtained, and it became a part of our national polity. The results of the treaty, in which European powers are associated, were a change in the Articles of War for the entire medical and hospital department of the army, the change of all military hospital flags to the Red Cross on a white ground, the neutralization of all non-combatants, surgeons, chaplains and hospital attendants, the wounded themselves, and all hospitals and supplies, protecting them from capture. Miss Barton was appointed President of the Association in America by President Garfield, and all correspondence on relief work in war addressed to our government passes through her hands.

In 1884 she took charge of the Red Cross Relief in the inundations of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, spending four months in boats upon those waters. The same year she represented the United States government at the Third International Conference of the Red Cross at Geneva, Switzerland.

Hers is a record of efficient philanthropic endeavor, which will abide as a part of the history of the great Civil contest of our country. Her memory is enshrined in the hearts of thousands of the veterans of the war, and the souvenirs conferred upon her by persons of high rank in Europe attest the esteem in which she is held abroad. The local newspaper at Dansville, N. Y., in giving a report of a meeting held in her honor as she was about leaving for Washington, said: "At her throat was suspended a magnificent pansy-form amethyst, presented her by the Duchess of Baden, probably the finest and largest stone of the kind in this country. At the right she wore the royal arch-mason badge which came to her from her father, and just below it the jewel of the American Red Cross. On the left was the Servian decoration of the Red Cross presented by Queen Natalie; just above it the Gold Cross of Remembrance, presented by the Duke and Duchess of Baden; and just above these two the Iron Cross of Merit, for which so many serve a life-time, the gift of the Emperor and Empress of Germany."

The tact and business abilities of Miss Barton have enabled her always to live in independence. She has for many years been the owner of a house in Washington, and has made that city her headquarters, although for sanitary reasons she for several years after her return from Europe dwelt in her own home at Dansville, N. Y., leaving there early in 1886 for a permanent residence at the Capital.

11. STEPHEN, son of Stephen (10), had many of the characteristics of his father, was industrious, energetic, active in town affairs; a strong man mentally and physically, at 17 years of age the champion gymnast of the vicinity. He was early fitted for teaching, and while young was employed in the schools at North Oxford. His business life began in partnership with his brother David at the old Learned saw-mill, where they became the leading lumbermen of the region. They later erected mills near by and began business as cloth manufacturers.

He was chosen school committee of the town and was active in remodelling and grading the schools. The cemetery at North Oxford and the new road from the village to the N. & W. R. R. station were laid out and completed largely through his influence. He inherited a love for military affairs and was captain of the militia. In 1855 he bought a tract of timber land, of about 2,000 acres, on the Chowan river, Hertford Co., North Carolina, on which was a steam saw-mill, and removed thither, taking with him men to carry on an extensive lumber manufacturing. He had entered on the new adventure with good prospect of success, when in 1861 the war broke out and the business was suddenly suspended. He at once dismissed his men and sent them to their northern homes and himself remained alone to guard his possessions. He was soon set upon by a band of desperados and ordered peremptorily to leave, but gave them to understand that he should defend his rights with his life if necessary. They were surprised at his determination, respected his courage and left him unmolested. He remained thus isolated until the fall of 1864, when a small party of Union troops from Norfolk on a raiding expedition went to his vicinity. He had at this time in a measure lost his health. These troops believing him to be a secessionist took from him several hundred dollars in money in spite of all his protests and declarations of loyalty and left for Norfolk, where they reported him as a "noted and dangerous rebel." On his arrival at Norfolk, whither he had followed these troops, he was seized and imprisoned. Two months of incarceration in his then reduced state told severely on his strength. After a time he succeeded in sending a letter to his son Samuel R., then resident at Washington, which (through the instrumentality of his sister Clara, then at the front with Gen. B. F. Butler's command) soon came to the General's hands. He at once sent for Capt. Barton, heard his story, reprimanded the men who had injured him, and sent him in his carriage at dead of night to the camp where his sister awaited him, ready to give him all the service she could command. But he was too weak for recuperation, and was soon after taken to Washington, there in the care of his son and Mrs. Vassall, another sister, lingering until the following March, when he died. His many ill fortunes only confirmed his patriotism, and among his latest words were "God bless Abraham Lincoln and his army."

JEDEDIAH, and Mary Rockett, m. 29 May, 1765.

IRA MOORE, one of the brightest names adorning the annals of the town, b. 25 Oct., 1796; in youth manly beyond his years, an apt scholar and at 18 held by his firmness control of the district school at the centre, which had defied the authority of experienced teachers. He was graduated at Brown University 1819, studied law with Mr. Bridgman of Providence, Sumner Barstow of Sutton and Hon. Levi Lincoln of Worcester, and was 18 months in the Law School at Cambridge, graduating in 1822, one of the first to receive the honors of the institution; opened an office in Ox. in 1822, was partner with Sumner Barstow in 1824, and transacted a growing business until his removal to Worcester, 1834, in 1830, '31 and '32 representative from Ox., and in 1833 and '34 State Senator. In 1834 he was appointed commissioner for the revision of the statutes, and in 1836 entered upon the Judgeship of the Probate Court for Worcester County, which he resigned eight years later and returned to law practice. In 1840 he was chosen Presidential Elector. From 1841 to his decease he was an esteemed and active member of the American Antiquarian Society. In 1849 he gave up active business but continued to give counsel until 1861. Samuel F. Haven, LL.D., in his report, Oct., 1867, to the American Antiquarian Society upon his death, says: "In every station, public or private, he was distinguished for ability, sterling integrity, and earnest devotion to the fullest performance of every duty." As a lawyer he was a careful and judicious adviser. As a politician he desired to participate in public affairs in a useful and honorable way, and in the legislature was an influential debater and faithful worker. "Entirely simple and unassuming, his opinions and his judgments were distinguished by candor and good sense; while his dignified manner and venerable aspect gave additional weight to his remarks. His death is to us, as to his family and the community, a calamity that will not soon cease to be seriously felt."

He was much interested in the cause of education, and gave able addresses before lyceums and other educational institutions. In 1827 there had been organized a "Board of Delegates" of the "American Lyceum of Science and Arts for Worcester County," of which he was the secretary. Its object seems to have been the improvement of the common schools and the making of a geological and agricultural survey of the vicinity. Branches were to be established in the towns, and committees appointed to report on different subjects, thus creating greater interest in advanced education in the county. He took much interest in the history of the town and collected considerable material for such a work, but the duties of his profession were such that he never was able to carry out his plans. A Fourth of July oration given in his young manhood at Oxford was printed, a copy of which is in the town archives. He had refined tastes, in his younger years gave attention to music and was for a time organist at the South Meeting-house.

The people of Oxford have occasion to cherish his memory with gratitude because of his generous gift to them in his last will, by means of which our Free Public Library was established.

BASSETT, CORDELIA (Canadian), d. 17 Nov., 1858.

BATCHELLER, REV. DAVID, grandson of Nehemiah, who was b. 1 June, 1716, at Wenham, and m. Experience, resided at Grafton, where was b. ELIJAH, 11 March, 1747, m. 30 Aug., 1768, Elizabeth, dau. of Nathan Munger of Brimfield, resided at Union, Conn., Sturbridge and Charlton, Revolutionary soldier from Charlton; DAVID was b. 26 April, 1781, at Charlton, one of 11 ch., it is said opened with prayer a session of the district school at 12 years of age. He early desired to be a minister, and in 1801 at the age of twenty and a half years was licensed as preacher by the Quarterly Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Ashburnham. His appointments were as follows: 1802-3, at Sandwich; 1803, Salisbury; 1804, Hawke; 1805, Marblehead; 1806, Ipswich; 1806, Portland, Me.; 1807-8, Readfield; 1808-9, Marblehead. He was successful, and at Portland and Marblehead revivals resulted from his labors. About 1810 he had a severe illness, caused by over-exertion, and was kindly received into the house of James Bowler of Marblehead. He m. 15 Oct., 1812, Elizabeth C., dau. of James Bowler, and continued for several years to reside at Marblehead. During this time he withdrew from the M. E. Church and joined the Congregational Church. Placing himself under the tutorship of Rev. Samuel Dana, D.D., he rapidly advanced in his preparation for renewing his labors, and his health having become confirmed preached as supply at several places and before coming to Ox. received invitations to settle at New Bedford, Fairhaven and Chester. He united with the Church at New Bedford, indicating a sojourn of some considerable time there. His son writes: "But he preferred Oxford and never regretted his settlement there, for nothing could exceed the respect and affection with which he was uniformly treated by that dear people, and dear to us his children for their love and appreciation of him." He was received here with entire unanimity and was installed 14 Feb., 1816. He was esteemed by all classes, and to the Church was specially endeared by his sympathetic disposition and manner. His influence gave new life and vigor to its membership and additions became frequent. The accessions for the first six years were 56. On 7 April, 1822, 11 were received, and on 7 July following, 39 were added as the fruits of a revival, making a total of 106 during his ministry. In his manner he was simple and fervent, often speaking without notes, and in prayer was earnest and devout. He had a fine voice and often led in the singing with great spirit.¹

In person he was above average size, attractive and social, and abounded in pleasantry and anecdote. In Oct., 1818, after the decease of Maj. Archibald

rors of war, and closed thus: "And when the Archangel's trump shall sound to call us to that last great review, may we all in our bright and shining uniforms appear and ground our arms at Jesus' feet, in whose name we ask and offer all. Amen."

Campbell, Mr. Batcheller was elected Town Clerk to fill the office for the year. He d. 25 Oct., 1822. His widow d. 21 March, 1858. His funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Benjamin Wood of Upton. He was buried with Masonic ceremonies. The following inscription on his gravestone was furnished by Rev. Enoch Pond, D.D., then of Ward:—

"Here rests all that was mortal of Rev. David Batcheller, late pastor of the Church in Oxford, who was born April 26, 1781, and who died in sure and certain hope of a glorious immortality Oct. 25, 1822, in the seventh year of his ministry among this people, and in the 42d year of his age—distinguished both as a peacemaker and as a faithful and successful minister of Jesus Christ.

*"In yonder sacred walls he spent his breath,
Now silent, senseless here he lies in death,
These lips again shall wake and then declare
A loud Amen! to truths they published there."*

¹ Mrs. Harriet Dana, dau. of Nahum Pratt, who lived not far from Blanchard's, was well acquainted with the family. She said: "When Thomas was about 12 years of age his father came to my father and asked him to take the boy into his employ as he could do nothing with him. He would not work, but was constantly at some project in the line of machinery. Thomas came and for a time did a little better than at home, but soon became a source of trial and vexation and did not remain long. If father sent him into the field to pick and pile up stones Tom would stammer out, 'T-t-there might b-b-be a ma-machine m-m-made to do th-th-this!' He was a habitual stammerer; his mother told me he could talk as well as any of her children till he mocked old Mrs. S—— so much he couldn't talk himself.

"One day he was sent into the fields alone to work, and two or three hours later my father on going out found him sitting by the side of a small pond whistling and mumbling to the frogs. On coming home he said Tom had by his juggling called around him all the frogs in the pond, and he didn't know what he would do next. Having been sent to the house from the field one day for a plow he induced the servant girl to shoulder and lug it for him by promising to make her a paring-machine, which he did."

He was graduated at Harvard University 1761, ordained 31 Aug., 1762, in the Old South Church, Boston, as a missionary to the Indians at Onohoque on the Susquehanna River, whither he soon went. He came home in the spring of 1763 to be married and was returning with furniture and provisions when the outbreak of Indian hostilities prevented further progress. He returned to Westboro', preached a short time and soon came to Oxford, where he was installed pastor 14 Nov., 1764. In Sept., 1765, he bought the house at the north end of the street, H. 244 (now removed a few rods to the westward), where he resided until leaving town. He was an ardent patriot in the Revolution and did much to stimulate and strengthen the people in that crisis, was especially helpful to Col. Ebenezer Learned and the chaplain of his regiment in 1775 at Roxbury. A letter, 23 Oct., 1777, to Gen. Learned, then in the army, is interesting as showing the kindly feeling between the two, but is not otherwise important. His later years in Oxford were a continual struggle for the means of subsistence, some details of which may be found under "Ecclesiastical affairs."

In March, 1784, he removed to Barnard, Vt., where on 22 Sept. of the same year he was installed. He was settled on a salary of two hundred dollars a year, and received a gift of a farm, as the first minister of the town. He was welcomed with much cordiality and respect, and was looked up to as the leading man. "He visited the schools, catechised the scholars, was attentive to the sick and distressed; rode about town on horseback with his cocked hat and flowing wig, was exacting of his salary [had not forgotten his Oxford experience], even the poor had to pay, and was much respected for uprightness, talents and learning. He taught the classics to young men who were fitting for college and greatly encouraged learning." A recent letter from an aged resident of Barnard calls him a "great and good man," and adds, "We think parson Bowman made us, and made us better than a bad man would." As a preacher he was quite noted, and unquestionably he left a most valuable impress upon that community as a citizen and a minister. In 1801 he was elected a trustee of Dartmouth College, which office he held until his death. His descendants were among the best people of Barnard, and to the third and fourth generations to-day occupy high positions in some of our western cities.

I., went in boyhood into a mill at Slatersville, began business at making hats at 18 years of age, and two or three years later became partner with Esek Pitts, at Millville, in trade and the manufacture of satinets, continuing until 1834 when his partner died and he assumed the whole business. He was prospered and enlarged his operations, going on until 1849 when his mill was burned and he lost heavily. Other reverses overtook him and most of his earlier accumulations had been swept away, when in 1852 he came to Oxford. Here, with Edward Thayer as partner, he began the manufacture of fine cassimeres. In 1855 Thayer left and Mr. Buffum continued successfully until his death in 1874. He had good business ability and tenacity of purpose, was conscientious and careful for the rights of others, early an anti-slavery man and a Free Soil voter, and was highly respected by all. At Millville he was Colonel of Militia and a prominent Freemason. During his last long and painful illness he exhibited the higher virtues which marked him as of uncommon fortitude and amiability. Abigail Eustace, and had with others JAMES, b. 4 Dec., 1713, m. 17 May, 1739, Elizabeth, dau. of Humphrey Davie, niece of Sir John of England, whose descendants reside at Creedy Park. He was a royalist in the Revolution and went with a company from Boston to Halifax, returned and spent his last days at Sutton, now Millbury. They had JAMES, b. 15 Feb., 1740, at Boston, entered the Boston Latin School 1749, hater. His occupation brought him much in contact with Maine people of whom he bought furs. When the Revolutionary war came on, at the suggestion of his wife, who was an earnest patriot, the family removed to Arrowsic Island, where they continued until 1779, and removed in Oct. (tradition) to Ox., her half-brother, Anthony Sigourney, having before settled here. In 1780 he bought the tavern estate at the North Common, continuing the hatting and fur business and keeping a country store in addition to the tavern business, having been licensed innholder from 1780 to 1805. He was a good citizen, respected and popular, a constant attendant on Sunday worship, but not a church member. A set of illustrations of the Prodigal Son hung in his house, which he declared set forth his religion.¹

In 1883 he explored the geyser world of the Yellowstone, passing over

¹ He had a vein of quiet humor, and numerous witty remarks of his were repeated in town in bygone years. He and Gen. Learned were warm friends, and when the General raised his new house (now standing) at North Oxford he gave Mr. B. a special invitation to be present, which was accepted. After the frame was up, the punch, as was the custom, was brought on, and the General called on Mr. Butler for a toast, who responded in the hearing of the large company; "The frame of this house—may it rot to the ground!" Learned was much surprised at what he considered the harsh sentiment, and exclaimed, "Mr. Butler, what do you mean by proposing such a toast?" "I mean," said he

"may the winds of heaven and the devouring fire spare this house to shelter succeeding generations till the last beam in it shall rot away." "Very good toast, Mr. Butler, very good toast," said Learned, and the good cheer went on.

When Mr. Moulton, the Congregational minister, was building his new house near the common (now Campbell's) Mr. Butler kindly offered to buy ornamental windows for the front door, and proposed one to be put over the door. Mr. Moulton, however, preferred side windows, and after their completion invited Mr. B. to see them, who expressed his approbation and then said pleasantly, "But, Ah sir, you are the minister who does not wish for light from above."

the Northern Pacific railroad to Portland, crossing to Puget Sound and thence to Victoria, Vancouver's Island. He was pastor at Wells River, Vt., from 1847 to 1850, at South Danvers, now Peabody, till 1852, and at Cincinnati, O., until 1854, professor in Norwich University from 1845 to 1847, in Wabash College, Ind., from 1854 to 1858, and in the University of Wisconsin, Madison, from 1858 to 1867. While abroad he wrote letters for several leading papers in this country, and his articles in the Bibliotheca and other periodicals are numerous. He is a man of remarkable intellectual abilities and rare and varied attainments. He m. He was then of Rutland, Vt., was in 1804 in trade at Spencer, Mass., went in 1806 to St. Louis. In a letter to a relative he says:

"After parting with you the 9th of Nov. I pursued my journey on to Hartford and my horse was almost done there, and was two days in getting there and one day to Farmington, only nine miles. There I found I must give the horse to sell the saddle and bridle, I received one gold watch and five dollars for all. The watch I sold for $30, and took the stage. In my route from Oxford I have travelled in the following States: through Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, North West Territory to this place, and I think of all the places in my travels no one equals this. It is without exception the finest country I ever heard of or saw for goodness, but the inhabitants are indolent, living from hand to mouth. Millions of acres of land in this territory as level as a floor without a tree on it, but grass as high as your head on horseback and very thick. One hundred bushels of corn to the acre, wheat good, but no good mills at present through idleness. Can keep 200 hogs, 100 cows, 50 horses here as easy as you can five hogs, seven cows and three horses. I have been to the lead mines and find there is made in this territory 3000 tons per year of lead."

In a letter dated Aug. 15, 1807, at Mine à Burton, he says:

"War has been declared and the Indians are very numerous and make a hostile appearance, and we expect to be driven off from the country."

He remained west until the War of 1812, enlisted, and 1814 was Lieut., acting Adjutant at Newport, Ky., was Aug., 1814, in command of a company at the attack on Fort Mackinaw, later returned to Ox. and resided near his father. In 1818 he was innkeeper at Charlton, removed to Dedham, where his w. d. 23 May, 1823. He soon returned to Ox., where he d. 25 Sept., 1824. He was a man of good mind, and although of ordinary size was very athletic, and said to have been a champion wrestler in the western army. Ch. Celia, b. 22 Nov., 1796, m. In young manhood he thought of settling at Utica, N. Y., then a frontier, in the fur trade, but was persuaded to remain with his aged parents. He built in 1800 the house next south of the tavern stand, H. 179, resided there until 1806, when he took the tavern and store of his father, was 14 years licensee, in 1821 rented the tavern and moved into the new brick store and house he had built on the corner opposite, where he continued trade. He was Adjutant of militia by appointment of Col. Sylvanus Learned. He had much strength of character, was highly respected by his fellow-townsmen, active in church affairs, social, sympathetic, but indifferent to promotion. He had a remarkable memory, well stored with the productions of English writers and local traditions, rare powers of conversation, and for general intelligence was much above the average. . . . Children: JAMES, b. 17 Feb., 1802, m. 7 March, 1832, Ann G. REV. JOHN CAMPBELL'S HAND-WRITING.

FROM THE CHURCH RECORDS.

CAMPBELL, REV. JOHN, b. "in the North of Scotland," the first minister of Oxford, was doubtless the most influential man in the town in its earlier years, not only in religious but in civil and social affairs. This he owed to his official position, his tact and knowledge of human nature, his firmness of character, sympathetic temperament and diversity of acquirements. He was very efficient in business matters, his name appearing often in the records, and his operations in land were considerable. He received at his settlement 40 acres as a homestead with all the rights of a proprietor to other lands, 20 acres additional on the east, and 140 acres in the northwest corner of the town, in which there appears to have been liberal measurement, as he sold in 1757 to his son Alexander 230 acres in that locality. In 1721 at the sale of North Gore lands he bought 300 acres, which he sold in 1747. In 1736, "on account of difficult circumstances in the ministry at Oxford," he received a grant nominally of 300 acres on the east shore of Chaubunagungamaug, which Mr. Wigglesworth, later owner, sold for 400 acres. He also owned several large lots in the west part of the town, and was proprietor, probably, at one time of 1,000 acres at least.

He was in numerous cases adviser in probate matters, the writer of many wills, deeds and other legal documents, and administrator of estates. When the Papillon tract of 8,000 acres was, in 1736, divided among the heirs, he was one of the three to whom the matter was entrusted. In 1749 he was administrator on the estate of James Collier, and had for nine years kept his accounts. He was the friend and adviser of the widow and orphan, and at times accepted the guardianship of minor children. As a peacemaker he was widely known. Possessing a judicial mind and the full confidence of the people he was able to adjust many cases of difference, thus avoiding the expenses and vexations of the law. He was also physician as well as minister and judge. Hints have come to us by tradition that his sway over his people smacked somewhat of autocracy, but in those days the public universally owned a fealty to religious institutions, those who for any length of time absented themselves from public worship were brought to account for their delinquency, and the minister was honored and revered in a manner very rare at the present day.

Rev. William Phips, then minister at Douglas, in his discourse at the funeral of Mr. Campbell, said:—

"Duty and gratitude call me, I conceive, to say something concerning what he was; of his extraordinary endowments, and of the extraordinary diligence and integrity with which he appeared to improve them. . . . He was esteemed one of penetrating and discerning understanding, of a peculiarly sagacious and enterprising genius, and of a very retentive memory. . . . It was thought by some that were likely to know that few gentlemen of his opportunity could excel him . . . in the management of family affairs, and secular concerns, with dispatch and prudence, so as to consist with a diligent application to his ministerial duties. Where is the man that could order and manage well so much business in so little time?

"In common conversation he was peculiarly free and pleasant. . . . He became your pastor when it was the day of small things with you, and then and ever since he manifested no small love and concern for you. When did you ever find him unwilling to serve and promote your true interests? . . . Has he not ministered to your bodies in distress, as well as to your souls? And when was the day, when was the night, what was the weather, what were the storms, or what the way which hindered him from being quickly with you in your distress? . . . Surely you will own, many of you, that he has been a father to you in civil kindness, as well as in his ecclesiastical ministry. . . . He has also been a peacemaker . . . among you . . . and moreover, abroad in the land, and has been abundantly improved and blessed as a healer of difficulties . . . in various parts of the country, for which God had given him an extraordinary talent."

A communication from Oxford, published in the Boston News Letter, soon after his decease, says:

"With great wisdom and fidelity he continued to discharge the several parts of his office for more than forty years. In his preaching he was strictly Orthodox, much improved in ecclesiastical councils, and happy in the peace and harmony of the church. The funeral was attended not only by the people of this town but by great numbers from adjoining towns. His death is a general loss; but especially so to the town, who may well be supposed to tremble when such a pillar fell."

Rev. Mr. Batcheller in his discourse at the funeral of Maj. Archibald Campbell in 1818, referring to the grandfather, said:

"A distinguished trait in his character was that of a peacemaker. In his day the people were united like a band of brothers, and were happy in each other's society."

A writer in the American Quarterly Register, X., 135, says he was "considered a man of respectable talents and well cultivated."

As a preacher he was not remarkable. He was Orthodox in theology, stood firmly by the old Scotch standard and was impatient of innovations, a thorough Bible student, and in his sermons used very frequent and copious scripture quotations.

An accomplished member of the family, a few years since, wrote thus of him: "I remember several intelligent persons, who had received his teachings, who delighted to repeat the little traditions of his sayings and doings. The most profound veneration for his memory lingered about the scene of his ministerial labors, and I was taught to look with reverent affection upon his tomb. . . . My grandmother could give little anecdotes of his gentle but firm sway over his household, and his constant affection to her as his daughter-in-law. . . . She told me he was large in person, not very tall, but portly, with a heavy brow and penetrating black eyes. His deportment was usually grave but cheerful, and the sadness, almost gloom any allusion to his early life threw over him had taught his family to avoid the remotest reference to it."

Of his ancestry and early years very little is known. It is the belief of his descendants that it was his firm purpose that they should remain a mystery. It is said on the best authority, that on a certain time his son John wished to visit Scotland to get information concerning the family but was decidedly opposed by his father, who refused to give letters when asked. "The North of Scotland" was the nearest his best friends could attain to a knowledge of the place of his birth. Doubtless he studied at the University of Edinburgh, but there is mystery even here, for the catalogue of that institution embraces no graduate of the name between 1700 and the time of his coming to America. The date of his arrival at Boston, given on his tombstone, was 1717. The generally accepted opinion among his descendants was that he was a political refugee, having espoused the failing cause of the Stuarts in the contest of 1715—that he was a relative of Lord Loudon who, when in authority in America, made an official visit to Boston and on his way from New York stopped at Worcester and with a single attendant made a friendly visit at Oxford, spending the night with Mr. Campbell and passing on the next day to Boston. It is said on good authority that Loudon on that occasion declared his kinship with Mr. Campbell.¹ Circumstances indicate that he was educated for the army, and in the French and Indian war he not only aided in filling the ranks, but personally fitted the soldiers for the service by drill.¹ His choice of the ministry as a profession is believed to have been made after his arrival at Boston.

On 24 Nov., 1737, John Hamilton, alias Hugh Henderson, was executed at Worcester for housebreaking. Mr. Campbell preached a sermon on that occasion the text of which was at 1 Peter iv. 5, "who shall give account to Him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead." This discourse was printed and fills about thirty twelvemo. pages. It closes with an address to the criminal thus:—

"I must hasten to say a few words to the distressed prisoner. Poor man, we pity you, we have frequently and fervently prayed to God for mercy to your immortal soul; and I hope that our prayers and labors have not been in vain. . . . Consider that you are in a few minutes to give an account to Him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead. Behold the judge standeth at the door. Your case is as it were called, and the sentence preparing ready to be pronounced upon you, this, 'Give an account of thy stewardship for thou shalt be no longer steward.' Consider the present state of your soul. How are you furnished to receive and entertain the righteous sentence to be pronounced upon you at the tribunal of God at the expiration of a few moments? Most earnestly we beseech the Almighty Creator of all persons and things, which made waters flow out of the rock, to smite thy flinty heart and to take thy stony heart out of thy body, to open thy heart as he did Lydia's, to put a new spirit within thy bowels, to anoint thine eyes with eye salve, that so thou mayest see and feel thine own wretchedness, and mayest freely acknowledge with Paul that in thy flesh dwelleth no good thing.

"What are your supports? Where do you find comfort? . . . Can you with humility and most sincere affection take your good deeds and your bad deeds and lay them all at the feet of a Glorious Christ and say in the warmth and ardor of your soul, 'Blessed Jesus, in thee alone I find rest, comfort and support.' So then you highly honor the purity of God's nature when you charge yourself with folly, acknowledge yourself to be unclean and accept of that righteousness which alone gives a full contentment to God's infinite purity even the righteousness of Jesus Christ, in whom all the promises of God are yea, and in him, amen to the glory of God by us. . . ."

As showing his ability to deal with secular affairs, we quote his memorial to the authorities in the matter of his executorship of the will of Richard Williams. John Ballard of Boston married Martha (Papillon) the widow of Williams, and was the guardian of the minor children. He objected in the Probate Court to Mr. Campbell's account, the judge having allowed him £40 for his services, and he appealed to the State executive in Boston.

"Whereas his Excellency William Shirley, Governor, and the Honorable His Majesty's Council upon the 27 of February, 1755, were pleased to accept the report of the Committee of this honorable board upon the appeal of John Ballard from the decree of the Judge of Probate of Worcester County, expressing their opinion upon the several reasons of said appeal; and, whereas, the honorable Committee have candidly and justly considered and pronounced the groundlessness of the first, second, third, fourth and fifth of the said reasons, I thankfully acquiesce therein; but inasmuch as the committee in my humble comprehension have not so determinately and particularly expressed themselves on the last reason of the said appeal as I would wish, and expected, viz., the article of allowance for trouble, toil and expenses in settling the estate of said Williams which occasions this address. Wherefore, I beseech the honorable the Lieut.-Governor and this honorable board in your great clemency to hear me in a few words, shewing wherein my grievance lies.

¹ He was an accomplished swordsman. It is related that on a time a teacher of the art of fencing was in town, and meeting Mr. Campbell the latter proposed a little practice for diversion, and soon astonished the professional by dexterously plucking his sword from his hand.

"And may it please your honors to observe, 1. that my original account amounted to £791. 3s. 1d., also an additional account of £33. 6s. 8d. which I sold the real estate for more than the appraisement. These two sums amount to £824. 9s. 9d. lawful money as appears by my account settled by the judge of probate. 2. That there was not one farthing of cash that I could find belonging to the said estate and but one bond containing about nine pounds beside Madam Mary Wolcott's land [bond?] conditioned for 140 acres of rough and uncultivated land in Killingly, in Connecticut, which could not procure a title to said land, both which appears by the inventory and that part of my apology formally forwarded to his Excellency the Governor and your Honors relative to them; that therefore this large sum must be made of the real estate and a few moveables; accordingly the effects were sold, the several considerations secured, the money in a great measure collected, the debts paid to the creditors, dispersed almost all over the province and part of Connecticut, receipts and other vouchers obtained in order to settle with the judge of probate, and all at large expense of time and money, and the risk of the whole estate to be borne by me from the beginning of my administration until all is paid and the time of my servitude expired. The deliberate and just consideration of the premised reasons induced the judge of probate to make me the allowance of 40 Pounds, as may be seen in the settlement. Add to these that I was obliged in the months of February and March last to travel to Boston, first, to answer the reasons of said appeal, and next to answer two writs served on me by Messrs. John Ballard and his Attorney, at the great expense of my health, which was then much impaired, and my purse which was not very heavy; but nevertheless I must bear all charges in this affair. Now may it please the Lieut.-Governor and your Honors to permit me to persuade myself that after so clear a representation made of facts and so well supported, you will be pleased to explain that part of the honorable Committee's report which relates to the article of allowances to the better understanding of yourselves and your most humble memorialist.

"Surely your honors will not think that a loose receipt dated Sept. 26, 1743, containing £4. 6d. old tenor with depreciation and interest can be satisfaction proportionable to such extensive and expensive services and sufferings as I have been obliged to undergo in discharging my trust. But if, after all I have most humbly offered, your Honors should remain of the opinion that the loose receipt as above delineated is sufficient satisfaction for the trouble and expense I have been and am still exposed to in the administration of said Williams' estate; and as it is said in the report of the Honorable Committee that the saving has been to my pupil Mr. Josiah Wolcott and that therefore the greater part of the allowance should lie upon him, I beseech your Honors that said Wolcott be expressly subjected to the payment thereof, since he utterly refuseth to pay or allow any part thereof on my account with him, although he received in cash what saving there was some time before the appeal. Doubtless, your Honors will easily see how much I stand in need of your relief in this dilemma.

"In fine, I most humbly beg your Honors favorable consideration and direction respecting the payment of two dividends of the residue of my Testator's estate that it be deferred to some distant period, since the debts and legacies are already discharged — for these reasons: 1. Because it is the express will of the Testator that the two said dividends be kept on interest till his only son arrives at a lawful age. 2. Because it is almost impossible for your memorialist to collect so large a sum in so short a time as Mr. John Ballard, Guardian, has set him; considering that several debtors to the estate have been and some are yet in his Majesty's service, who owe at least to the amount of 1,000 pounds old tenor. 3. Because the present almost universal distress of New England makes it very difficult for most men to make speedy payment of a large sum in silver and gold, and Mr. Ballard seems unwilling to take anything else of me.

"Your Honor's resolution and determination upon the premises (as in your great wisdom and goodness you think reasonable) is earnestly solicited by your most humble memorialist, which will oblige him as in duty bound ever to pray.

[This petition was dismissed on the ground that the case was out of the jurisdiction of the Lieut.-Governor and Council.]

Many incidents of his life have been narrated in the past. The story of his having been plunged into the river while being taken across a foot-bridge one evening on the back of Ebenezer Coburn, against whom, in favor of William Hudson, he had that day decided a case, comes through Mr. Peter Butler on the authority of Abial Lamb, an eye-witness. His wife was long an invalid and somewhat hypochondriacal. On a certain spring morning, she being unable to walk, was carried in her chair to the sunny side of the house to be refreshed by the air. After sitting for a time she called for help to be taken indoors. No one responded. She called again and again, without avail, her patience failed, and in a passion she rose and walked into the house. Mr. Archibald Campbell, on whose authority we have the story, remarked, this was a plan of Mr. Campbell's to convince his wife she was not as ill as she thought. It is related on the same authority that at the time of the Indian hostilities they came around his house, on which he began making noisy demonstrations, running up and down stairs, slamming doors, upsetting furniture, calling out to John, Henry, James, to "hurry down and bring those guns," and opening a window fired a blank cartridge, all which so alarmed the marauders that they left at once.

His will bears date 1 Aug., 1760. He gives to his wife Esther one moiety of all his household movables and furniture, excepting bonds, notes, accounts, clothing, library and gun, also his spoons and gold rings: to be used and improved by her during her life and afterward to go to Mary Twiss and Isabella Wolcott, his daughters; also a comfortable home in his house with full provision for her support, with what wool and flax she may need, and eight pounds annually of money for incidental expenses.

To his son Duncan he gives 40 shillings, as he had received at setting out in trade his share of the estate.

To his son Alexander he gives a lot in the Cedar Swamp which, with a farm formerly given and his expenses of education as a physician, is his portion of the estate.

To his son William he gives a deed of one-half his home farm, with other out lands, bearing the same date as his will, and in his will gives him the other half, with his farming tools, stock, etc., and also his negro, "Will," to be kindly used and improved and supported by him during his life.

To his son Archibald he gives £133. 6s. 8d. lawful money, to be kept on interest until he settles in some business in the world, also his apparel, library, watch, gold wrist buttons, knee and shoe buckles, and a young horse, and provision for payment of all his bills at college "till after the next commencement."

To his daughter Mary Twiss he gives 40 pounds to be kept at interest for her benefit and a house and lot near the north end of the Plain, one cow and five sheep.

To his daughter Isabella Wolcott he gives one cow and five sheep; also 60 pounds to be kept at interest for her benefit, . . . "which with what I gave to her at her marriage and some articles since, with a considerable sum of money I paid for Mr. Josiah Wolcott her husband in consequence of the decree of the Governor and council in my favor against him, which he hath neglected and refused to pay makes up her full portion of my estate."

To his granddaughter Esther Town and his grandsons John and William Town he makes small bequests.

To his grandson John (son of John, Jr., who had then gone from town) he gives 10 pounds, and to his grandsons, John, son of Duncan, and Edward R., son of Alexander, he gives his land in the South Gore, "provided that the said farm may be sold . . . for their education." To his grandson John, son of Josiah Wolcott, he gives the gun which was his great-grandfather Wolcott's, and "which I purchased out of the estate of Capt. Richard Williams."

He appoints his sons Alexander and William his executors.

On 26 May, 1761, the town voted £10 to pay the expenses of his funeral.

The following is inscribed upon his tombstone:

"Intoom'd here lieth y^e body of y^e Rev'd Mr. John Campbell who died May, 25, 1761, in y^e 71 yr. of his Age. he was born in y^e north of Scotland. Before 1754 he began building the mansion at the South Common, which he sold unfinished that year to his brother-in-law, Josiah Wolcott. He appears to have been unsettled in his business relations, removed often, was prominent in public affairs, justice of the peace, collector under the excise law, and many years licensed retailer of liquors. He lived in Dudley from 1766 to 1770 and removed thence to the north part of Oxford, now Auburn, and was 1785-1787 in Worcester, where he kept a tavern, and later at Putney, Vt., where he was a farmer. He spent his later days in Oxford. On 13 June, 1795, as he was crossing from the centre tavern to his residence on the opposite corner he was taken suddenly ill, fell in the street and soon died. 7. JAMES BUTLER, son of Archibald (4), one of the noblest sons of the town, fitted for college at Nichols Academy (Dudley), completed 1826 a course of study at Brown University, went to Edisto Island, S. C., taught four years, in the meantime reading law, and began study in 1830 with Hon. Hugh S. Legare at Charleston, in 1832 established himself in practice in that city, and for many years stood in the front rank in the State in his profession. As a lawyer "he had no peer in breadth and subtlety of intelligence, and his dialectic skill was conspicuous on all occasions. . . . A man of power, of energy, of tenacity, he enjoyed the controversies in which quarter is neither asked nor given." He was a debater of great eloquence, sarcasm and ingenuity. His practice became extensive, and the most important causes were committed to his management.¹

On the occasion of his death Col. C. H. Simonton, a colleague at the Charleston Bar, said :—

“ Having been a member of this Bar for many years it has been my fortune to be thrown into conflict or conference with some of the best intellects of this region, I must say here that never in my time have I met a man superior to Mr. Campbell in the great qualities that constitute an excellent lawyer. When he was roused in any prosecution or defence where his feelings were enlisted—and at times I have seen him engaged in behalf of the poorest and most humble—then his intellect rose with giant strength, and the blows he struck in the court room were those of a Titan, and all within his reach felt the force of a mind of extraordinary power.”

In the Nullification contest of 1830 to 1834 he took an active part on the Union side, and by his efforts the vote of Edisto Island was given for the Union candidate for Congress. He was made the confidential agent and correspondent of the Union State Committee at Washington and while there resided for a time at the White House, where he was often in conference with President Jackson, Livingston, Louis McLane, Cass, and other eminent men among whom was Daniel Webster, with whom he renewed an acquaintance begun in previous years, which ripened into a friendship which continued while Webster lived.

In 1850-52 political excitement again ran high in South Carolina, and he being in the legislature fought the disunion sentiment and was largely instrumental in carrying measures which resulted in the defeat of the discontents. When the secession movement culminated in that State, he stood entirely aloof and declined all office, and while he was at heart a sympathizer with his southern brethren and believed their cause was just, he still opposed most strenuously the arbitration of war, deplored the attack on Sumter and predicted defeat when hostilities began. The Charleston News and Courier in an obituary notice of him—to which we are indebted for many of the facts of this sketch—said : “ In a word, Mr. Campbell was a Union man from first to last. His sympathy with the South was ardent, but none loved the Union more sincerely than he.” In December, 1866, under the Provisional government he was chosen United States Senator, his views of public affairs being of course well known. His election to this high position, under the circumstances, was considered in the greatest degree complimentary. But in common with other southern members at that period he was refused his seat. In 1877 he was unanimously nominated for State Senator from Charleston district by a Democratic Convention and elected without opposition. In 1878 the name of another was substituted for his, upon which he announced himself as an independent candidate, but was defeated, having been, as he claimed, defrauded of his election by the use of tissue ballots. This condition of affairs confirmed him in his opposition to the prevailing southern sentiment and his disapproval of dishonorable methods in politics, and resulted in his withdrawal from political life.

He invested his means largely in the Charleston and Savannah railroad of which he was for a time the manager, and lost heavily in that enterprise.

Personally he was of a fine aspect, with a ruddy countenance in which could be plainly traced his Scotch descent, of strongly marked character, a steadfast friend to those he loved or trusted, and decided in his bearing toward his enemies. There was no middle ground in his likes and dislikes. In serving a friend he stopped at nothing. His heart was tender and he was generous and kind. Of course such a man had many friends who adhered to him through all his varied fortunes. Socially he moved in the highest circles of Charleston, and was brilliant, genial and attractive. He was many years president of the

New England Society in that city, which in 1881 celebrated in an impressive manner the fiftieth anniversary of his membership. Of that meeting, in Feb., 1884, Dr. Vedder, then president, said: "Presiding over the festivities of that occasion was one whose inimitable grace and dignity had lent a peculiar charm to like occasions for many years, but whom we were never again to see in the chair which will be inseparably associated with his name." A portrait of Mr. Campbell, executed at the order of the society, adorns its rooms.

Mr. Campbell's health had become enfeebled several years before his decease. In the autumn of 1883 he came north to visit old friends and old scenes, and returned as far as Washington. Here he grew worse, declined rapidly and died on the eighth day of November. He m. 19 Jan., 1837, Anna Margaret, dau. of Ex-Governor Bennett of Charleston, she d. 12 Dec., 1850; they had MARY BENNETT, residence, 1889, at Charleston; CELIA, d. unm., at Charleston.

Walter Pollard, resided and d. at Stockbridge.

A sketch of his peculiar and sad experiences is given by Rev. W. L. Chaffin, in his history of Easton. He began life with bright prospects, but they were soon overclouded and his later years were spent in penury and seclusion. He was graduated at Harvard 1761, studied theology and was ordained pastor at Easton 17 Aug., 1763. Matters progressed quietly until toward the close of 1782, when some dissatisfaction arose resulting in his dismissal. "He was forced in his later years to reflect upon the mystery of that Providence which ordains that years of anguish and trouble should follow a youthful folly." Dissatisfaction increased and in April, 1779, he made a public confession and was forgiven. Other troubles existed, the precise nature of which are unknown, but which are believed to have grown out of the fact that his wife was entirely out of sympathy with him in his life work, and a serious hindrance to his success. All efforts to harmonize affairs in the Church failed and on 26 May he left the pulpit, and 4th of July asked a dismissal, which was consummated by a council on 31 July "on account of disaffection and alienation." Mr. Chaffin says "it is evident that no objections of a serious character had been sustained. . . . He left the town with a good record." He removed from Easton to Charlton, where he was installed 8 Jan., 1783. Here, says our author, "his life was in some respects a repetition of his experience at Easton."

There appear, however, no indications of dissatisfaction until the excitement arose concerning the notorious Stephen Burroughs, in which he unwisely took a part as an apologist if not an active partisan for him, and thus brought upon himself the censure of many of his people as well as the public reproof of the Court before which Burroughs was arraigned. As the years passed his children grew up, not to be a source of comfort but to bring dishonor upon the family, and his Charlton ministry proved "one of ten unhappy years." Resigning his pastorate in April, 1793, "too heart-broken and discouraged to seek another parish," he removed to N. H., preached for a time at Cornish and at Putney, Vt., and later found a home at Stockbridge, Vt. Here the town being new there was no Congregational Church, but he preached occasionally as a matter of courtesy, and his ministrations are said to have been very acceptable.

Rev. T. S. Hubbard writes:—

"He was esteemed, but the inhabitants were poor and money scarce and it is presumable that he had little enough to live on. As he became blind his wants were supplied by his friends, or he was thus helped. . . . I have made many inquiries respecting him and believe he was a good man and strove to live a respectable life."

Concerning his character Mr. Chaffin says: "After the most diligent and patient search, with one exception, I have found no stain upon his record."

He was of full average mental endowments, and of a temperament which no doubt keenly felt the sadness of his fortune. Upon the back of one of his sermons were found a few lines of poetry from his pen, which Mr. Chaffin prints, from which we give a short extract. They doubtless give us his honest estimate of life as viewed from his own stand-point.

"THE VALE OF TEARS.

"A path it is of joys and griefs,
Of many hopes and fears;
Gladdened at times by sunny smiles,
But often dimmed by tears.

"Green leaves there are—they quickly fade,
Bright flowers—but soon they die,
Its banks are laved by pleasant streams,
But soon their bed is dry.

"Fancy is but a phantom found,
And Hope a dream appears;
And more and more our hearts confess
This life's a vale of tears."

ABEL M., his brother, aged 57, d. 22 Jan., 1888.

CHAMBERLAIN, RICHARD, of Braintree 1642, removed to Roxbury, where he had baptized 4 June, 1665, with others, BENJAMIN and JOSEPH, who both settled at Sudbury. Richard, the father, d. 1673, will proved 15 April. Benjamin and Joseph came to Oxford with the other settlers in 1713, the first being then about 70 years of age, and Joseph a little younger. In 1696 Benjamin sold 80 acres of land on the east side of the Sudbury River, now in Wayland, adjoining land of Joseph, and in 1712 (deed acknowledged 28 March, 1713), Joseph, wife Hannah, sold 60 acres, a dwelling-house, orchard, etc., with "all his rights of land or commonages in the town of Sudbury." DANIEL and JOHN, sons of Benjamin, are all of his children known to have been here, they removed about 1720 to Colchester, Conn., where they had relatives. From the Woodstock Church records we learn that in 1734 John Chamberlain of Hebron, Conn., had children Sarah and Ruth baptized at W. on his wife Ruth's account, "as member of the Oxford Church now cohabiting with us."

The home lot of Benjamin was on the west side of the main street and included the old tavern property. This he sold in 1723 and we lose trace of him. He may have removed to Conn. with his sons. He was one of the most venerable and honored of the first proprietors and stood with John Town as foremost in influence. In Nov., 1713, he was chosen one of a committee to lay out a minister's lot and a burying-ground, was the chairman of a committee to confirm to the settlers their home lots when surveyed, selectman in 1714, and in 1720 at the organization of the Church was the second on the list, John Town being first. John, his son, was not named with the original settlers, but was voted in on the rights of Edmund Taylor, which included the lot next south of his father's on Main street. In 1716 he was of Woodstock. Daniel as appears owned no estate here.

2. DANIEL, son of Benjamin (1), m. 15 April, 1718, Elizabeth Brown of Mendon, and had ELIZABETH, b. 18 March, 1720; he was constable in 1720 and soon removed to Colchester, where were b. EASTER, b. 18 Oct., 1722; MEHETABLE, b. 9 April, 1725; DANIEL, b. 2 Nov., 1727; RICHARD, b. 5 July, 1730; WILLIAM, b. 10 March, 1733.

3. JOSEPH, brother of Benjamin (1), chose his home lot on Bondet Hill, including the "great house," H. 38, had with him at least eight ch., of whom NATHANIEL, EBENEZER and JOSEPH, JR., were of age and took up house lots with the first proprietors. He was a member of the first board of selectmen, soldier in the Narragansett war. He d. 8 Aug., 1721, his w. had d. previously. On 22 Feb., 1731, Ebenezer Chamberlain, Joseph Rockett with wife Hannah, Benjamin Chamberlain and Simon Chamberlain conveyed to their brother Joseph of Keekamoochaug, all their rights in their father's lots laid out or to be laid out to "y^e soldiers which were in y^e Fight commonly called y^e Narragansett or Swamp Fight." His will, dated 4 March, 1721, names his sons Benjamin and Simon as executors. Valuation £304, 19s. 6d. No record of his family has been found. NATHANIEL and JOSEPH are supposed to have been among the eldest ch., EBENEZER, HANNAH m. Joseph Rockett, BENJAMIN, SIMON, REBECCA m. Nathan Kannie.

4. NATHANIEL, son of Joseph (3), m. 31 March, 1714, Elizabeth, sister of Thomas Hunkins, baptized 24 Feb., 1706, at Boxford, being then adult. He took up his house lot adjoining his uncle Benjamin on the north, H. 240, which he sold in 1722 and probably left town. He was a constituent member of the Church. . . . Children: RICHARD, b. 9 July, 1714; MOSES, b. 30 March, 1716; NATHANIEL, b. 3 Jan., 1718; ELIZABETH, b. 30 Aug., 1719; SARAH, b. 31 May, 1721.

5. JOSEPH, son of Joseph (3), m. Patience, took up his home lot adjoining on the west that of his father on Bondet Hill, H. 39, sold in 1717 to Philip Amidown and later was of Keekamoochaug. In 1731 his brother Benjamin had also bought land there, and ten years later we find Joseph settled on Province land in Oxford South Gore, then a wilderness.¹ He had chosen a spot of great natural beauty near the Connecticut line, overlooking the lake, and his son Ebenezer and also Josiah Balch, who m. his dau. Patience, were with him, Ebenezer having settled about a half mile northerly from him, and

Balch living with him. On 14 Dec., 1744, a committee of the General Court deeded to Josiah Balch, housewright, and Ebenezer Chamberlain, "living on Province land near a place called New Sherborne" [Douglas], 320 acres of land, "including all the land that hath been improved by the said Balch and Chamberlain, or their father, Joseph Chamberlain, in regular form encompassed with four lines only . . . bounded on every side by Province land." Of this tract Balch had the southern half, on which he and Joseph Chamberlain lived, and which Chamberlain quitclaimed to him. Here Chamberlain spent his later years. In 1762, being in want, he petitioned the Court of Sessions for relief, "living between the Government and Douglas District, 80 years old, and wife 64, dependant on charity," on which 60 shillings were granted, to be paid to Edward Davis, Esq., for them. He probably d. before 19 Aug., 1766, as at that date widow Patience was warned against settlement at Ox. The order for appraisal of his estate was 4 Dec., 1783, Sarah Chamberlain, administratrix. His estate was valued, real, 80 acres, £50, all other effects £8, 8s. 9d.

Only ch. recorded at Ox.: PATIENCE, b. 28 Dec., 1720, m. Josiah Balch; EBENEZER, m. 14 March, 1749, Abigail Marsh of Thompson, Conn., and d. before June, 1759 [see deed, Josiah Balch to his son Wor. Rec., 42, 105]; Elizabeth, their dau., d. aged 16, said to have been very beautiful. Her grave is on a knoll overlooking the lake, about a fourth of a mile southwest from the site of her father's house, but nothing marks the spot. HANNAH, m. Jonathan Marsh, received land from Josiah Balch for services.

6. BENJAMIN, son of Joseph (3), m. 8 July, 1728, Mary, dau. of Philip Amidown, removed about 1732 to Keekamoochaug, where he had bought 21 Oct., 1731, of William Dudley of Roxbury 255 acres of land, a part of which he sold to Clement Corbin and his own brothers, Joseph and Simon. He died there in 1746. . . . Children, b. at Ox.: JOSEPH, b. 11 Dec., 1728, who 2 Sept., 1746, after the death of his father, chose Joseph Allen of Hardwick as his guardian. Paige in History of Hardwick gives "Joseph Chamberlain of Hardwick m. 1753 Sarah Cook of Douglas." There is a tradition that he d. in the Revolutionary war, she d. 1813; they had Molly, 1756, John, 1757, Sarah, 1759, Asahel, 1762, Phebe, Calvin, Luther, Reuben; ITHAMAR, another son, b. about 1740, was among the pioneers at Chesterfield, N. H. in 1770, where he m. that year Hepsibah Farr, and had Samuel, 1773, and Benjamin;¹ ICHABOD, probably son of Benjamin, m. 19 March, 1767, Sarah Gale, bought in 1768 the farm in South Gore, lying between Kingsbury's estate and the Roxbury School grant, known as the Leonard grant, 100 acres, sold in 1783; they had Abigail, b. 29 Jan., 1768; Sally, b. 11 Dec., 1770; Henry, b. 6 Oct., 1772; Sabra, b. 10 Sept., 1774; Ichabod, b. 16 April, 1784; Polly, b. 13 May, 1786; Clarissa, b. 3 May, 1788; others b. between 1774 and 1784 perhaps not recorded.

7. SIMON, son of Joseph (3), m. 27 Dec., 1735, Abigail Taylor of Sutton, resided near his brothers Joseph and Benjamin at Keekamoochaug. On 14 Dec., 1744, the State's committee deeded to him 160 acres near New Sherborne with all the improvements, lying at the southwest corner of the lot laid out to the first minister of the town.² He d. 1747 in Dudley, order for appraisal of estate 25 Feb. Joseph Chamberlain [his brother?] was administrator. We find no record of his family.

² This farm on which Simon lived was in residence in the South Gore.

8. EBENEZER, son of Joseph (3), of him little is known. He was one of the 30 original proprietors, his home lot being at the northern extremity of Johnson's Plain, adjoining Isaac Larned on the north, and probably including the Johnson house and meadow in the rear. He sold soon. Richard Moore later owned his home lot. He d. 1746 at Ox. Joseph Chamberlain [his brother?] administrator. No record of family.

There is reason to believe he m. Sibyl, dau. of Richard Moore. We give extracts from a letter which are of interest in this connection :—

“SIBBEL CHAMBERLAIN OF OXFORD TO JOSEPH STARR OF

COLLER, COLLIER, OLIVER, sold to Benoni Twichell his rights granted to soldiers in the Narragansett war, was probably in that expedition. We first find him in Ox. between 1707 and 1713 as tenant of Gabriel Bernon. When the English settlement began he took up his house lot on the north-east corner of the main and Sutton roads, H. 192, sold in less than three years to Joseph Dana, who was voted in on Collier's rights. We next find him in Mendon, where he was warned 1724 against a settlement. In 1736 he had settled on country land, in no town, near Manchaug Pond, adjoining Ox. line. He m. Lydia —, and had WILLIAM, b. 17 Sept., 1715, at Ox. In 1736 Oliver, Isaac and Lydia Collier were before the Court of Sessions at Worcester for absenting themselves from public worship, pleaded poverty and living in no town, and promising reform were dismissed. About 1736 Oliver and wife removed to Newport Co., R. I. In April, 1736, he sold to William, his son, his rights in "a lot of country's land adjoining Manchaug pond and all my labor which I have done thereon." In 1739 Isaac Collier, living thereon, deeded the improvements on said land to Thomas McKnight of Stow. [See McKnight.]

THOMAS, perhaps son of Oliver, had a case in court Aug., 1739.

JAMES, probably son of John, of Framingham in 1696, nominally one of the 30 settlers in Ox. The records indicate that he did not live here until several years after the settlement. He was at Framingham in 1718 the time of the sale of his Ox. estate. The first known of him here was in 1735, when he bought the Mayo farm, H. 38. He is seldom named in the records. He m. "I feel proud of my ancestors. My grandfather raised, by one mother, 19 children to be men and women, and only one ever saw the inner walls of a poor-house, and not one filled a drunkard's grave. I have visited him a great many times on old Oxford Plains and eaten at his table, and I don't believe there was ever a day passed over his head (only when he was away) when he did not have fresh boiled potatoes and fried salt pork for breakfast. My father, when he was within 60 days of being 21 years of age, gave him twenty dollars for his time and packed his shoemaker's kit and started and landed in Boston [50 miles] at sunset the first day.

"If they are all dead they are not forgotten."

COMINS, CUMINS, CUMMINGS, JOHN, of Charlestown Village (Woburn), wife Mary; Jan., 1709, bought 150 acres at Mashamuckituck, now Pomfret, Conn., and in 1713 was one of the twenty-three first townsmen; Jan., 1717, bought land at Thompson Parish, and later at Chestnut Hill, in 1719 came to Ox., having purchased the "old mill" at the south end of the Plain. He is believed to have improved this property and to have raised or rebuilt the dam, as by an agreement 29 Dec., 1719, Richard Moore, Thomas Hunkins and Ebenezer Humphrey, owners of the meadows above, bound themselves to allow him to raise the water over their land for the use of the mill each year from 1 Sept. to 1 May, so long as he saw fit. [Recorded at Worcester in 1794, proving it to have been valid 75 years afterward]. In 1723 he deeded land on Prospect Hill to his son Jacob, and in 1724 to his son Stephen another lot adjoining. He was a man of character and intelligence, a constituent member of the Church, active in public affairs, chairman of selectmen and also town clerk in 1721, 1723 and 1724. On 20 Oct., 1724 or 1725, his w. Mary d., and in 1726 he sold his mill and returned to Thompson, Conn. There in 1728 he was improved to be the master workman in hewing and framing the first Meeting-house [Miss Larned]. He was styled John, Senior in 1719. He d. April, 1751, aged 83. His son Stephen appears to have been with him at the mill, and returned with him to Killingly, Conn. John and Stephen Comins were witnesses of the will of Joseph Chamberlain in March, 1721. . . . Children of John and Mary. [Woburn Rec.]: JOHN, b. 1692, d. 1693; MARY, b. 31 July, 1694; JOHN, b. 12 July, 1696; CATHARINE, b. 31 Aug., 1698; JACOB and JOSIAH, b. 14 July, 1700; STEPHEN, b. 12 Jan., 1702; JAMES, b. 7 May, 1705.

In 1733, John Comins, supposed to have been son of John, resided at Sturbridge and there built the first Meeting-house. In 1734 he had a case in court at Worcester which was appealed by Jacob Comins. He was a loser in his building and in May, 1740, the proprietary voted him a gratuity of land on that account. On 7 April, 1742, he having deceased, a committee was instructed to sell this land and to give the proceeds to his heirs according to their discretion. Some of the children were then under age. [Sturbridge Rec.]. John Comins, Jr., probably the same, d. 9 Nov., 1741, at Ox. There is no record of his family at Sturbridge. On 6 Aug., 1732, Keziah, Patience, Dinah, Sibyl, and John, children of John Cummins, Jr., were baptized at Thompson, Conn., by Rev. — Cabot.

His ministry was eminently successful, he being an able man and an indefatigable worker, lacking the showy qualities, being devoid of ambition for notoriety, but by his great and constant service to his fellows deeply impressing all with whom he came in contact. He was chaplain of the 1st Mass. Reg. from May, 1861, to May, 1864, and greatly beloved by the soldiers. "Rough men in the army and elsewhere who were accustomed to discredit or deny the Christian religion would assent to it and accept it as it found in him an exponent. Reckless soldiers would often permit him to coax money from their pockets on pay-day to be sent home to their families or for savings, which else had gone to the gambling table or the liquor-seller," and a very large amount in the aggregate was thus saved through his influence. He was a good man, with a large and sympathetic heart. DALEY, JULIA A., m. n. Jaha (Indian), aged 84, d. 11 Feb., 1883.

DALRYMPLE, JOHN, b. about 1723, m. intentions 9 June, 1758, Elizabeth Young of Blandford, trader at Westfield; in 1758 bought the estate, H. 195, near the mill stream south side Sutton road, constable 1764, sold in 1766 and removed to Dudley where he d. 21 Nov., 1784, aged 61, he was dismissed and recommended to Church in Dudley 19 Nov., 1769; she m. (2) 30 Aug., 1790, Samuel Bacon of Woodstock, Conn. . . . Children: ELIZABETH, b. 15 June, 1759; DOLLY, b. 14 Dec., 1760, m. 22 Nov., 1781, Thomas McClanathan (?) of Rutland; JOHN, b. 23 Sept., 1762, d. 1774; PAUL, b. 14 Aug., 1764; and b. at Dudley, THOMAS, b. 6 June, 1768; GEORGE, b. 15 June, 1772; BARBARA, b. 14 Oct., 1774; JOHN, b. 12 Aug., 1776, m. 4 April, 1799, Betsey, dau. of Edward Davis; SARAH, b. 20 Dec., 1779, m. 29 May, 1800, Joseph Goulding of Ward; ANDREW, b. 14 June, 1783.

DANA, RICHARD, settled 1640 at Cambridge, supposed to have been the progenitor of all of the name in the country; he m. probably in 1648, Ann Bullard of Cambridge, and had 11 children, one, JOSEPH, b. 21 March, 1656, m. Mary, dau. of Thomas Gobell, and lived at or near Concord; they had JOSEPH, b. 22 Sept., 1685, and MARY, b. 1691. No record of the m. of Joseph, Jr., has been found. Judge Bell says he infers that Joseph of Concord moved to Killingly, Conn., in 1716—Savage says he went to Connecticut. He was of Killingly in 1715, having bought land there, 16 March, 1714. He bought land in Oxford in April, 1716, and was voted in as a proprietor, and is named in the deed as of Oxford. He resided here till 1720, and returned to Killingly. In 1722, 1724, 1725, 1726, he was of Oxford and in 1732 of Sutton [Court Rec.], after which his name does not appear in the records excepting in the settlement of the Gobell estate. "It is thus evident that for several years he was frequently removing from place to place and it is not strange that the records of the births of his children are missing." [Dana Gen.]. He bought within five years, in Oxford, three settler's lots with all their rights estimated at 300 acres each. His cousin, Joseph Dana, b. 1700, father of Rev. Joseph, D.D., of Ipswich, b. 1742, was living in 1732 at Pomfret, where he was an innholder; removed to Worcester.

Judge Bell supposes Phinehas of Oxford to have been the son of Joseph. In the account of Hannah, widow of Phinehas, as administratrix, we find charged "two journeys to Roxbury to put out the children," from which we may infer they had relatives there, perhaps on the mother's side. There was a tradition that Phinehas was from Roxbury, but Judge Bell thought it not well founded.

2. PHINEHAS, perhaps son of Joseph (1), m. 8 March, 1731, Hannah Twichell. [Ox. Enoch Pond, with whom he fitted for college, taught successfully a select school at Ward, was graduated 1830 at Brown University, began study at Andover 1833 in middle class, soon left on account of ill health. In 1834 studied at Princeton, later at Bangor where he was graduated 1836; taught almost constantly while in college and seminary, left teaching at Bangor to enter the ministry; preached at North Falmouth 1837, called soon to South Church, Amherst, where he was ordained and March 21, 1841, installed pastor. His next field was Third Church, West Springfield, now Holyoke, remaining two or three years. In 1844 removed to Ohio, and at Cincinnati was agent for the American Tract Society, travelling in Kentucky. In Nov., 1845, he became pastor at Harmar, O., continuing until 1850, then left and became chaplain and agent of American Seamen's Friend Society, at Toledo. At Harmar he had charge of public schools and some of the earliest graded schools in the State were there under him established. Later he was pastor at Delaware, O., for one year; removed to Western Reserve and from 1852 to 1856 was settled at Strongsville. From 1856 to 1859 he was District Secretary of American and Foreign Christian Union of New York, resigned to take pastorate at Bucyrus, and remained two or three years. Ill health kept him from active service until 1864 when he took the pastorate at Wauseon continuing until 1867. His last work was at Weymouth, O., beginning 1 Jan., 1872. In May, 1872, casually at Oberlin, he was taken suddenly ill and d. on the 9th. Thus ended an arduous and useful career. He m. (1) 23 Oct., 1838, Julia A. Childs of Barre, she d. 4 Nov., 1840; m. WILLIAM, supposed son of William of Mennemore, Ireland, was of Woburn 1728, of Ox. 1741, m. 17 April, 1744, Abigail Rich of Sutton, bought 1741 51 acres of wild land on the road from Ox. to Douglas, not far from Manchaug Pond, in 1745 lived on Province land and then bought 160 acres more of the same, with his improvements, "near the corner of New Sherborn." His children owned after him. [See p. 54. From a deed 1748, Worcester Records, XXVI., 259, it appears that Samuel, Elisha and Israel Rich of Sutton, Hannah, w. of Richard Kidder of Dudley, Abigail, w. of William Davidson of Douglas, Mary Rich Taylor of Sutton, and Nathaniel Rich of Sutton, then deceased, were heirs of Samuel Rich, the settler, who with Richard Waters bought Stoughton's 1,000-acre farm.]

Wife of Simeon, aged 24, d. 25 Aug., 1843.

DAVIS, SAMUEL, was son of John of Roxbury, who was b. 1 Oct., 1643, the son of William of Roxbury, who was b. 1617 in Wales, according to tradition, and came to America about 1635. J. C. J. Brown, member of the Heraldry Committee of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, who has investigated the subject, says, that in the past several designs have been promulgated as the coat of arms of the Davis family which are clearly spurious. The will of Ichabod of Roxbury, son of William the emigrant, (whose will is not to be found), is sealed with a finely cut signet, made undoubtedly in Europe and believed to have been brought over by the emigrant. The design is—Gules, a Griffin Segreant Or, and so far as known has been used by no other family. This coat of arms was in use in the Davis family of Caermarthen, South Wales, before the emigration as the records testify, and a William of this family resided in 1623 at that place. The fact that in 1642 a William appears at Roxbury, reputed to have come from Wales, whose son used the said seal on his will, is strong incidental evidence of the identity of the Caermarthen and Roxbury families. SAMUEL was b. 23 June, 1681, m. (1) 23 June, 1709, Mary, dau. of Jacob Chamberlain, settled at Roxbury, removed 1729 to Ox., where she d. 11 Feb., 1731, m. In 1720 he bought of Gabriel Bernon, in partnership with Thomas Mayo and Joseph Weld, brother of his wife, the grant of 2,500 acres of land in the east part of the town, but did not occupy it until eight or nine years later. On coming to town he took a high position as a citizen and for many years was in important public offices, selectman, representative, deacon 25 years until his death. He settled at the Nathaniel Davis place, H. 29, upon the hill east of the Plain, and gave to each of his six sons a large farm from his original estate. . . . Children by first m. b. at Roxbury: SAMUEL, b. 13 Feb., 1711; THOMAS, b. 1712, d. 1713; EDWARD, b. 23 Jan., 1714; THOMAS, b. 4 Nov., 1715; MARY, b. 8 July, 1717, m. 21 Dec., 1737, Elisha Rich of Sutton, who was b. about 1717 at Bellingham; they had Thomas, b. 1738, m. she d. 29 April, 1850, he d. 7 Oct., 1856, at Ox., dry goods merchant; NELSON H., b. 20 Sept., 1821, unm., studied at Leicester Academy, appointed upon nomination of Levi Lincoln (then representative to Congress from 5th Mass. district) as cadet at West Point, where he entered 1 July, 1841, was graduated 1846, went the same year into the Mexican war under Gen. Taylor at Monterey, joined at Tampico the forces of Gen. Scott, under whom he served through the war; was in the siege of Vera Cruz, the battle of Cerro Gordo, the storming of Contreras, the taking of Cherubusco, and in later engagements in the valley of Mexico and the taking of the capital. He left Mexico with the army in June, 1848, and in Nov. of that year sailed from New York with troops around Cape Horn, arriving in April, at Monterey, Cal. There he served until Dec., 1853, first as Commissary and later with his company at remote stations in the Indian country, where subsistence was difficult, and with the Clear Lake and the Russian River Indians had two notable and successful engagements under the brave Captain, later General, Nathaniel Lyon. This was said to have been one of the most brilliant Indian campaigns in the army service.

His health having been impaired by exposure he obtained leave of absence, and in 1853 visited China and the Sandwich Islands. In Jan., 1854, he returned to New York and for a year was on recruiting duty at Boston. In the fall of 1855 he went into frontier service at Forts Leavenworth, Randall, Ridgely, Ripley and on field duty in the Indian country, continuing until the spring of 1861, when he was ordered east to engage in the late Civil war. At the first battle of Bull Run he was acting Major of the "Regular Battalion," and on 4 Sept., 1861, was by Gov. Andrew commissioned as Colonel of the 7th Regt. Mass. Vols., which office he held until 12 Nov., when he was appointed Asst. Inspector-General of the army, ordered to other duties and resigned his Colonel's commission.

As Asst. Inspector-General he served in the field, in the "Army of the Potomac," at the headquarters of Sumner, McClellan, Hooker and Meade, and was in all the battles in which these commanders were engaged while he served under their commands, and was specially efficient at the Battle of Gettysburg. Later he was ordered to the Department of New Mexico as General Inspecting Officer. The duties in this field required almost constant travelling through a vast extent of wild country infested with hostile Indians, the climate, embracing extremes of heat and cold, rendering the service severe. Many movements were made at night to avoid the enemy. "On one of these campaigns, after repeated night marches in which several Indian Rancherias were captured, . . . a forced march was made at night over a high range of mountains to the reported camp of the Indians. . . . Near the summit the escort was divided into two detachments, a third having been left behind in a cañon to guard the pack-train. These detachments, which were about five miles apart, attacked simultaneously, at dawn, two camps of the Apaches, who were completely surprised." A short and sharp contest ensued resulting in large loss to the Indians. This was the first severe chastisement they had received for many years, and in recognition of his services in this affair the Legislature of Arizona passed Davis a vote of thanks, and the U. S. government conferred on him the rank of Colonel in the army.

Later he was for several years Inspecting Officer of the Department of the Missouri, to which the District of New Mexico was then attached. From this service he was assigned to special duty under the War Department with station at New York city, for three years, his duties covering inspections in the Western States and Territories to Alaska. He was next Inspector-General of the "Division of the Atlantic," under Gen. Hancock, until 1 July, 1881, when he was assigned to the same duty in the "Division of the Missouri" under Gen. Sheridan with station at Chicago. On the death of Gen. D. B. Sacket, Chief Inspector-General of the army, Gen. Davis, in March, 1885, was promoted as his successor, assuming the duties of that office at Washington.

On 20 Sept., 1885, by the operation of the law he was retired from active service as Brigadier-General. Later he resided in New York city, and was several years president of the Colorado Smelting Co. with an office in New York. He died suddenly of apoplexy at Governor's Island, N. Y., 15 May, 1890.

Gen. Davis held every grade of rank in the army from Second Lieut. to Brig.-Gen. and Head of the Inspector-General's Department, was brevetted for services in the Mexican War, the war of the Rebellion and Indian fights, and travelled on duty in each and every State and Territory of the Union. His services in the Civil War were of the highest importance, and as Acting Inspector he undoubtedly had a more complete knowledge of the condition of the "Army of the Potomac" in its details than any other official in the country. 2. STEARNS, son of Benjamin (1), m. 24 Dec., 1815, Hannah, dau. of Anthony Butler; saddler, left the occupation 1815 and engaged in trade in which he prospered, continuing until 1826, when he entered upon and built up at Auguttaback Village, the most brilliant business enterprise in the history of the town. [See Ox. Woolen Mfg. Co.] He continued as agent and manager, until he sold his interest in 1836, and was later agent at the North Oxford Woolen Mill, Texas Village. He filled well his position as a member of the Church and society to which he belonged and as a private citizen, was public spirited and influential, but did not aspire to public office, was widely known as Capt. De Witt. In person he was short and thick-set, with dark complexion, a pleasing address, entirely devoid of ostentation; was fond of a good horse and drove about town in a sulky in the management of the affairs of the manufacturing company. He built the house, now Mary D. Hyde's, H. 240, where he d. after a long illness, 29 Nov., 1848; she d. 19 Nov., 1867, at Sutton; Children: MARY B., b. 4 July, 1817, m. 5 March, 1862, Freeman Freeland of Sutton, where they settled, he d. 22 Feb., 1875; ELIZABETH K., b. 22 May, 1820, d. 27 Sept., 1856, unm.

3. HOLLIS, son of Benjamin (1), was early in trade with his brother Stearns in the north part of the old tavern building, later was a thread manufacturer for a short time and a farmer. He built in 1834-5 the house on the west street, now Wellington's, H. 234. In May, 1836, he fell in his barn and was so injured he never walked afterward, but was a great sufferer through life. He m. (1) Sarah, dau. of Asa Harris, she d. 9 June, 1840; m. (2) 10 March, 1842, Mary Howes of Dennis. He d. 30 July, 1853. . . . Children: CAROLINE, b. 13 Nov., 1820, m. Charles Fuller; BENJAMIN A., b. 13 Nov., 1822, m. 3 Feb., 1848, Lurana J., dau. of Lyman Wetherell, no ch., farmer, settled in Ox., removed 1875 to Sutton, where he d. 10 Oct., 1881; WILLIAM M. 4. ALEXANDER, son of Benjamin (1), was, says Ammidown in his Historical Collections, "emphatically what is termed a self-made man. . . . Self-reliance was his motto; and from this resource he arose to whatever position he sustained in either public or private life." His opportunities for education were small. He went at 15 years of age into the store of the Merino Manufacturing Co. of Dudley, remaining four years, travelling a part of the time to sell goods, and thence in 1818 to Franklin into cotton thread manufacture in partnership with Dr. Miller, and the next year leased and operated a mill at Foxboro', and also opened a country store, himself selling his thread from a wagon on the road. After his marriage he manufactured thread at Franklin with his father-in-law till 1823, and in 1824 in partnership with his three brothers, Stearns, Hollis and Archibald, began the same business at the present Buffum Village in Ox. He continued here but a few years, and as his means increased became interested in manufacturing cotton and woolen goods in other places, continuing his residence in Oxford during his life with the exception of three years, from 1837 to 1840, when he was a partner in a commission house in Boston and resided there, and about one year, 1848 to 1849, when he resided at Worcester. He was pecuniarily interested in various railroads, banks and insurance companies, and held offices in several prominent corporations, 26 years director in the Worcester Merchants' and Farmers' Insurance Co., 27 years in the State Mutual Life Assurance Co., 20 years with the Mechanics Savings Bank as president and trustee, 21 years with the Mechanics National Bank, nine years as president, five years president of the Oxford Bank, three years president of the Worcester and Nashua Railroad, 17 years director of the Providence and Worcester and 25 years director of the Norwich and Worcester Railroads. He was often moderator in town meetings, was representative to the General Court for five years, in 1842, 1844, 1850 and 1851 State Senator, in 1853 member of the convention for amending the State constitution. In Dec., 1852, he was elected over the Whig and Democratic nominees as representative to Congress from the ninth Mass. district on the Free Soil ticket, was reëlected, serving two terms, from 1853 to 1857. He accumulated a handsome estate, gave freely of his means to charitable objects, and was many years the largest contributor in the town to religious institutions. In person he was large, of a florid countenance, attractive, and in manner social, free and jovial. Both himself and widow left legacies to the Congregational Church, noted under "Ecclesiastical affairs."

[An incident of his boyhood gives a hint as to his qualities. He had a contest on a certain occasion with a school-fellow as to the occupation of a favorite seat in the school-house. The teacher on being appealed to decided that the one being first at school the next day should have it. Alexander went home, told his mother of the case, got his supper and returning to the school-house established himself in the coveted seat and there spent the night. Very early in the morning his competitor arrived but only to find himself outwitted.]

Elias was graduated, 1788, at Dartmouth College, studied theology with Dr. Emmons, ordained to his first and only pastorate, at Oxford, 13 April, 1791. He is represented as a man of excellent character and a faithful and efficient preacher, much interested in the education and moral culture of youth, receiving pupils at his own house who later spoke of him with much interest and commendation. He was of a melancholic temperament, subject to great depression of spirits, and constantly depreciated his own efforts. It is related of him that late in his ministry he would prepare for the Sabbath and, as the hour of service approached, would become so depressed that he felt obliged to send word to his waiting hearers that he could not appear before them. The esteem in which he was held by his people is shown by the fact that only after repeated requests from him and by the advice of physicians, would they consent to a council to consider the subject of his dismissal. To a committee of conference on the question of his leaving, he wrote in Jan., 1799, "my health is yet extremely low, and my state I think precarious. From the nature of my complaints, being very much upon my lungs, I must freely own I see no probability of being able to preach." He removed in 1799 to Newburyport, where he engaged in business and took short voyages to Labrador for his health. From Newburyport he removed about 1805 to Prospect, Me., where he d. 25 Jan., 1808, aged 47. EMMONS, REV. AMZI B., b. 9 Nov., 1846, at Chester, N. J., son of Jeremiah S., early left an orphan, gained an education by his own efforts, was graduated 1870 at Amherst College and in 1873 at Union Theological Seminary, New York, ordained 28 Oct., 1873, served several months as City Missionary in New York, preached one year as supply at Stratton, Vt., whence he removed to Jamaica, Vt., where he was settled three years, and in 1877 came to Ox., supplied one year and was installed 16 Oct., 1878. "From the beginning of his pastorate he gave himself unsparingly to his work and in his anxiety to fulfil his mission exceeded his strength. He preached for the last time on the closing Sabbath of 1881. The weary brain yielded, he left his work and sought rest and medical aid in his native State, but it was too late.

"He was a thorough student, an earnest preacher, a faithful and sympathetic pastor, and was esteemed by all classes as a devoted, self-denying man of God, and was especially beloved by the poor."

He left home for Morristown, N. J., in the early days of January, 1882, continued comfortable for about ten days when congestion of the lungs set in and he sank rapidly, and died on the 18th. At a Church meeting it was "Resolved, that we recognize and emulate his wonderful exemplification of the spirit of his Master, his faithful and untiring labors, his cheerful spirit of self-sacrifice, his unflinching devotion to principle and his loyalty to duty."

A memorial service was held on 2 February, attended by a large delegation of clergymen of the vicinage and a full congregation of the town's people. The exercises were in part the singing of several hymns of his composition. A single stanza illustrates his later experience:—

"Yes, we struggle evermore—
But the struggle will be over at the last;
We are striving o'er and o'er
But the bitter, painful strife will soon be past;
For our victory draweth nearer
And the sky is growing clearer
Day by day—Watch and pray!"

Thomas Fish was a man with a history. He came, when 11 years of age, from Woburn to Oxford with his father, and like him was by trade a shoemaker. He had small opportunity for education yet came up to fill important and responsible positions. He had good sense and enterprise, and after enduring the hardships of a soldier's lot for several years and also the privations of frontier life in the woods of Maine, met a tragic fate there before he had completed his two-score years. The first record we find of him in Oxford is in 1765, when, at 22 years of age, he purchased a building lot from the tavern property on the Plain. Here, as is supposed, he erected buildings and followed his vocation for about three years and then sold. Later he was owner of several lots of land in the northerly part of the town, and in Jan., 1773, sold one-half of 16 acres lying west of the north cemetery near the river, embracing a brickyard and clay pits. On 11 Jan., 1771, a grant of land lying eastward of the Saco River, then in Massachusetts, at what is now Livermore, Me., was made by the General Court to certain soldiers, for services in the French and Indian war. Among these grantees was Capt. Ebenezer Learned, whose wife was Fish's aunt. A leading man in the enterprise was Lieut. Elijah Livermore of Waltham, for whom the town was named. Fish became interested in this project, and in the summer of 1772 went thither as assistant to Ebenezer Waters of Sutton on a surveying expedition. In November of that year he received a proprietary right in the village and in 1773 was chosen with Learned and Livermore on a committee to lay out and clear roads into the town. He was also appointed to prosecute trespassers. He entered this service with energy, and as we learn from his journal, spent nearly the whole of the summer of that year in the discharge of his duties, and in the spring of 1774 renewed his labors. This journal is an entertaining document, and is printed in the history of Livermore, embracing 14 pages. We copy its most important portions:—

Entries in the journal indicate that he was again surveying at Livermore in the spring of 1774. Left Oxford 18 April, from which date a diary was kept until 7 May when he says "went up the River and found all things well at my chest and Deacon Livermore well at his camp." This second journal is less circumstantial than the first, and has mainly reference to his surveys.

In 1775 a great change in public affairs occurred and Mr. Fish laid aside his compass and took the sword in hand instead. On the Lexington alarm he went as second lieutenant of the Oxford company, entering upon a term of over four years service in the war. Of the details of his career we have little knowledge, but that it was an honorable one his repeated promotions attest.¹ In June, 1779, while encamped at Providence, R. I., a dispute arose between Captains Fish and Webb, both of Col. Shepard's Regiment, as to precedence in rank. Fish felt himself much aggrieved inasmuch as he had applied for a board of referees to sit upon the case and had been refused. The result was his resignation, which he gave in on the 15th. On the 17th, by order of Gen. Gates, it was accepted, and he left the service.

The following document accompanies the resignation and its acceptance in the State Archives:

"To whom it may concern: This may certify that Capt. Thomas Fish has served in the Continental Army of the United States of America four years and two months, and has sustained an unspotted character as an officer and soldier, both in action, in the field and in quarters, and has universally had the good will of officers and soldiers both in Regiment and Brigade to which he belongs, and resigned June 17, 1779, by his own desire.

On a pay-roll acted upon in the Massachusetts Council 30 March, 1780, appears Capt. Thomas Fish, in Nathan Tyler's Regiment, service in Rhode Island from Dec. 1, one month, four days, from which we infer that he may have entered the service for a short time subsequently to his resignation. The history of Livermore says he was a Major in the United States Army. Possibly he may have received a brevet commission as Major, as did others at the close of the war, but in his note of resignation he signed himself Captain.

His subsequent history is short. Dea. Livermore had in 1779 taken possession of his homestead in Maine, and on his return from the war Fish, whose wife had then deceased, naturally turned toward his old friend, who with characteristic generosity kindly received him at his home. The proprietary also recognized its early servant and 12 Sept., 1781, appointed him as colleague with Mr. Livermore to fix upon a proper location for mills for the town. In his journey to Livermore, Fish in passing through Winthrop made the acquaintance of Miss Betsey Marrow of that town. Says the history of

Livermore: "It was the first or second winter (probably the second, for he had made his 'pitch,' and built him a log cabin near the upper end of the great meadow which still retains the name 'Fish Meadow') that Major Fish took his shoemaker's tools and went to Winthrop to work a few weeks, but more particularly to do up a small job of courting the Marrow girl. . . . After tarrying at Mr. Marrow's a few weeks he left for Livermore. Unfortunately a cold northeast snow storm commenced the same day, making it a hard day's work to travel on foot to Dea. Livermore's in one day, and he did not get across the river till after dark. When about half a mile short of the deacon's . . . by mistake he turned out of the road . . . [into] the deep snow [and] apparently became exhausted. He hung his pack on the dead limb or knot of a spruce tree . . . laid himself down beside a pine tree turned up by the roots, and died. He was found three days afterwards . . . His remains were taken to Winthrop and buried with military honors." The date of his death is not given, but it was in Jan., 1782. A quantity of leather in addition to his tools made up his burden which had through the day been an impediment to his progress.

A poem of 240 lines on the death of Major Fish was written by Mrs. Elizabeth Akers Allen of Portland, for the history of Livermore, a few lines from which follow:—

"But all too soon did the shadows fall
And the chill gray twilight leave the skies,
And night let down, like a solid wall,
Its thick black curtain before his eyes.

Utterly wearied out, at length,
He paused by the roots of a fallen pine,
Yet strove with his last remaining strength
To leave some record, or trace, or sign.

Powerless longer to strive or shout,
He dropped on his desolate death bed there;
The final flicker of hope went out

Sweetly a strange delirium stole
The sense of anguish and pain away;
For a merciful moment across his soul
A wondrous vision of Summer lay:
The sunshine warm on the sweet pine woods,
The murmur of wide green solitudes,
The glancing leaves by the breezes stirred,
The gurgle of brook and the song of bird;
Softly the fluttering pulse grew still,
As spent waves die on a pleasant shore;
The wrathful tempest had wrought its will
And the cold and darkness vexed no more.

And with prayer and sermon and quaint old hymns,
Their fitting and simple burial rite,
They buried him in his sweetheart's sight;
With tender reverence they laid him down
Near her dwelling in Winthrop town.
His grave was nameless, and none may know
So many the changing years have been,
Where the kind earth opened, so long ago,
Her warm, brown bosom, and took him in."

There are indications in the records that his family affairs and his estate were in an unsettled condition. He had mortgaged his farm and was assisted in redeeming it by his son-in-law Jonathan Kenney, who took possession, and in Dec., 1744, bound himself to support Mr. Gale and wife during their natural lives. This arrangement did not continue. On 28 April, 1746, Kenney assigned and made over to Mr. Gale the farm, which he immediately sold and enlisted in the army. On 10 Sept., 1746, Kenney executed the following: "I hereby give my mother-in-law, Elizabeth Gale, free liberty of living in the east room of my house in Oxford during the absence of my father-in-law in the expedition against Canada in which he is now enlisted, and on his return he also to have the same liberty till he can have a reasonable time to build himself a house." He deeded Sept., 1746, to Ebenezer Gale 16 acres at the north end of Long Hill, bought of Joseph Pratt; on this estate it is supposed Gale built a house after his return from the war, and in 1755 deeded it, with the house, to his son Ebenezer of Sutton, H. 148. GRIFFIN, CAPT. JAMES ("Lieut. in Gen. Shipley's Reg."), came to Ox. 1756, at 45 years of age, having bought the Josiah Russell place, H. 185, w. Prudence; no children are mentioned. He appears to have been a man of leisure, of a social turn. It is related that a gentleman who was often at his house was one day giving his son advice as to manners, etc., when the son suddenly closed the talk by saying he did not think a man who spent his Sunday noons with Capt. Griffin could with grace give others advice as to manners. His inventory does not show a style of living above the ordinary, excepting that there were embraced in it "nine pictures framed" which at that day was not common. A few books were also appraised. There is a tradition that he was a sea captain from Boston, which seems probable from his will, in which the heirs of William Fairfield of Boston are mentioned. He also gave his large Bible to Samuel, son of Samuel Doghed of Boston, to Dennis Heffron of Oakham, £10 and his wearing apparel. He also mentioned his nephew William McKinstry of Taunton, physician, Joseph, son of Rev. Joseph Bowman, and Caleb, son of Rev. Caleb Curtis of Charlton, and Sarah, dau. of William Campbell, to whom he gave each five pounds. He d. 17 Nov., 1769, aged 58. He seems to have been friendly with the Rev. John Campbell family and was made in the will of Mrs. Campbell her executor, but did not live to fulfil the trust.

HAGBURN, SAMUEL, an aged and yet active man in the very early history of the town, and one of whom we would be glad to know more than is possible; b. 20 Jan., 1638, son of Samuel of Roxbury, a wealthy and honored man, who d. 24 Jan., 1643, his widow m. (2) Gov. Thomas Dudley, she m. (3) Nov., 1653, Rev. John Allin of Dedham. At his father's decease Samuel received a handsome estate, and in 1660, soon after his coming of age, we find him in trade at New London, Conn. Savage says he filled in 1664 an office of trust and remained there until 1668 at least. Miss Caulkins in the History of New London says, "Another person who was at this time [1661-2] a resident trader . . . was Samuel Hackburn or Hagborn from the Bay Colony." He was received as an inhabitant, but meeting with reverses soon left the town. The records give no facts as to his family. We find him in 1709 at Oxford, four years before the permanent settlement, looking after the interests of his half-brother, Gov. Joseph Dudley. It seems probable from his relation to Dudley that he had much to do with the planning of the new settlement, the arrangements for beginning its corporate existence, the soliciting of settlers, laying out of public ways, etc. He was the first in the list of the grantees and selected one of the best lots in the village on the east side of the main street, extending to and embracing the meadows on Mill Brook, and quite a quantity of the lands improved by the Huguenots, with two houses at least, one of which he no doubt kept up and occupied as a dwelling. But his stay was short after the settlement by the English. In Aug., 1714, he sold and removed. We find him living in Taunton in 1722, and in the latter part of 1725 he d. there. His will and inventory indicate that his means had become reduced, the total footing being but £220. [See page 52.]

² She was a person of considerable property, but remiss in business matters. The following is a copy of a note sent to her which explains itself: "Reading, Oct. ye 20, 1743. Mrs. Hartwell, with my service to you & yours, these are to mind you that you have not paid me for your husband and children's graves, though 'tis long since I dig'd them as also 3 days works that I did for you. I am in want of the money & pray you not to fail of sending it by the bearer hereof, as you would prevent further trouble to yourself & me. The inclosed account will inform you what the whole comes to. Your humble servant,

JOHN BAT."

Capt. Isaac Hartwell was a man of original ideas in some directions as shown by his orthography in his account book, where he charges some of his neighbors for "hogues" and "pigues," and credits a friend with a "cague of 6 gals. of Rhum." His first "Nues paper" was taken of Josiah Town, June, 1774.

(2) Naomi ———, named in his will, which also mentions his sister, Prudence Clark of Boston; settled as pastor of a Church formed the same day at Road Town, now Shutesbury, 27 Oct., 1742, was a royalist in the Revolutionary war, which caused a quarrel in his Church. He became alienated from the majority of the people with whom he contended bitterly, sued for his salary and won his suit. After this he did not preach for two years and on 27 Feb., 1778, was dismissed. He became an active tory, assuming authority and using all endeavors to defeat the measures for public safety, until the people in their wrath impounded him, and threw smoked herrings to him for food, but allowed him to return to his home at night. By a vote of the town he was forbidden to leave his house and authority was given to any person who saw him out to shoot him. In Jan., 1780, he changed his place of abode to the northerly part of Ox., purchasing for £10,000 the Gen. Ebenezer Learned house, H. 126, which he sold in 1787 to his son Aaron, who in his turn sold in 1790. He preached occasionally after residing here, in Mr. Bowman's absence, and presented a bill to the town for the same, 1782, which the town refused to pay. DANIEL, of Sutton, b. about 1717, son of Luke and Susanna (Pillsbury) of Boxford. [Luke Hovey of Boxford sold land on Prospect Hill to Thomas Gleason 25 Feb., 1734.] He m. 31 March, 1742, Ruth, dau. of John and Anne (Messenger) Tyler of Boxford, baptized 30 June, 1728, settled in Sutton in 1754, bought the farm in the northwest part of that town, now in Ox., H. 160. They had MOSES, b. 28 Oct., 1748, and BENJAMIN, b. 12 March, 1758, who both owned estates and resided in Ox. Benjamin was Revolutionary soldier, bought first the farm now or late of George W. Gibson, H. 148, and later the Dr. Learned place at North Ox., H. 131, which he sold in 1785. He was from 1788 to 1787 deputy sheriff for Worcester County. A little before 1790 both removed to central New York, among the pioneers in Otsego and Chenango Counties, Moses going to Unadilla, Otsego, and Benjamin to Oxford, Chenango. A well attested tradition has it that Moses while living in Ox. became involved in debt, and imprisonment awaited him unless he made his escape. He, therefore, one night deposited his clothing on the bank of Town's Pond to give the impression he had drowned himself and left town. Travelling westward he came after a few days to a large place, perhaps Hudson, N. Y., where there was going on a public sale of wild lands in New York State. Although he had not five dollars in his pocket he ventured to make a bid on a large tract when to his surprise it was struck off to him. He obtained a few hours grace for payment and put up at a neighboring tavern (Foster's). In the night he was awakened by two men clamoring outside and demanding admittance. He was alarmed and thinking some of his creditors were in hot pursuit, dressed in haste and was on the point of making his escape when the landlord met him and informed him that two men had arrived who intended to have been at the sale but were detained, and they wished to see him to know if he would sell his land. He replied that he might be induced to sell, but would want a good bonus for his bargain. The business was closed in the morning, he sold for hundreds of dollars above the price he paid and reserved for himself, as the story goes, a good farm at Unadilla, on which he settled and spent his subsequent life. He m. 1777, Phebe Tenney, he d. 29 Oct., 1813, she d. 25 April, 1813.

Benjamin's history is remarkable. Samuel M. Hopkins, Esq., once an eminent lawyer of Oxford, N. Y., wrote as follows: "One hundred and ten miles west from Catskill . . . brought me to the village of Oxford, and to the house of Benjamin Hovey the founder of it, who eighteen months before had cut the first tree to clear the ground where the village stood. Here I took up my residence. Hovey was a man of very strong natural sense and vigor of action, but of limited education. He started for New York, laid open the plans for the settlement to the proprietors, built Oxford on his own lands, and became the leading man of a very growing country."

A recent letter from Oxford, N. Y., says: "Gen. Hovey, who gave our village its name, was admirably fitted for the task of settlement, by early habits, and was blessed with rare personal qualities for the arduous labors and hardships of pioneer life. In the year 1790 he came and built a log house on the site of Fort Hill, named thus from an old Indian fort which overlooked the river. To this house he removed his family the following year."

A granddaughter, recently living at Syracuse, N. Y., wrote: "they chose with taste, as the Chenango river passes through the town. Grandfather's log hut was directly on its banks. There they fought the Indians, went forty miles to mill in a canoe and to Onondaga County for salt, and had a pioneer life, but men were men in those days, true to their time and need."

The first frame building erected in the village was the academy, an institution very early organized, with Hovey's name at the head of the list of trustees, which position he occupied during his residence in the town, a period of about ten years only. This institution held a festival on 2 Aug., 1854, at which an address was delivered by W. H. Hyde, Esq., from which we quote: "The shades of evening are gathering; what a sea of gorgeousness on the Autumn forest! We hear the light dip of paddles in the river and a canoe darts toward the landing on the shore. What strange beings are these? They seem regardless of the ruin that is gradually gathering over their race. Can it be that they do not think of the oncoming destruction that awaits them, while they see the little academy on the Common, the occasional dwelling, and hear the woodman's axe whose strokes for them 'Like muffled drums are beating funeral marches to the grave?' That tall man with whom they are talking, bartering with at the log house, is Benjamin Hovey, the senior trustee of the academy. . . .

"Few men have passed a more eventful life. Having seen the fruition of his labors, and the harvest of his early toil and suffering, in the flourishing village around him, rapidly increasing in population and wealth, he looked for new projects with an ambition fed by its own innate energy and a spirit of enterprise faltering at no point beyond which were seen new fields open for its gratification. We next find him among the active co-workers with Burr and Wilkinson in a project for canalling the Ohio near Louisville. The wild and restless ambition of Aaron Burr, however, led him to seek new objects on the lower Mississippi and amid the untold wealth and romance of Mexico, and the project in which Hovey had embarked with such ardor was suffered to dwindle in neglect." He having expended much of his private fortune in the enterprise "retired at last in disgust . . . to find a grave on the shores of Lake Erie remote from the village he had founded and the friends of his manhood. A life of more romantic reality seldom occurs in the history of man."

3. EBENEZER, son of Ebenezer (1).

The following from the pen of Judge Barton appeared in the Worcester Spy soon after his death:—

"He was born, lived and died upon the 40 acre lot originally assigned to his father, who was one of the 30 English settlers. . . . At the commencement of the Revolution Capt. Humphrey was in the vigor of his manhood and early participated in the privations and perils of the war. He was out as First Lieut. at New York in 1776, at the taking of Burgoyne in 1777, and afterwards commanded a company stationed near Rhode Island to guard the shores. But during the war his services at home were little less valuable than in the field. It is a singular fact but it must be an acknowledged one that the war of the Revolution originated in the spirit of our towns, and was prosecuted by their means. . . . Capt. Humphrey shared largely in the administration of these municipal affairs, and notwithstanding his means were limited he contributed what would be equivalent to one-third of the support of one soldier during the war. Under the pension law of 1832 he received a partial return for the great sacrifice he had made in the service of his country. He always spoke with much feeling of the distresses of the people after the war, growing out of a depreciated currency, coupled with enormous taxation. It finally led to Shays' Rebellion. But although Oxford was a Shays town Capt. Humphrey stood firmly on the side of the government and the laws; and when he found great numbers of his friends embodied and about to rush into civil war he coolly advised them that they 'had better go home.' He was a patriot in the true and best sense of the term. His patriotism was based on a sense of civil and religious duty and not on a miserable selfishness that seeks nothing but popular favor. He was long one of the deacons of the Congregational Church in Oxford. His character was not less remarkable for his piety than his patriotism: and he will long be remembered as a sample of those men of another age who not only had the valor to achieve, but the virtue to perpetuate our national independence."

He was in 1777 chosen selectman and later from 1785 to 1802 was every year re-elected and from 1795 was chairman. From 1796 onward for six years he was each year moderator of the annual town meeting. He was a man of more than ordinary physical strength, and was of a commanding aspect; in temperament genial and inclined to humor, by trade a mason, industrious and exemplary. He m. HYDE, FREDERIC G., son of Col. Augustus and Fidelia W., of Norwich, Conn., b. 11 May, 1847; entered in his boyhood the U. S. Naval School at Newport, R. I., whence he went to Annapolis, Md., where he was graduated 10 June, 1867. He immediately sailed on the Minnesota and afterward on the Dacotah, serving on the latter from Jan., 1868, to May, 1870, and was in command of the vessel several months in 1869 at Mare Island, Cal., Navy Yard. In March, 1871, he was commissioned Lieutenant. In Feb., 1874, having been in service on the Kansas, he was detached on sick leave, but in the latter part of 1875 was again in service and was ordered to the West Indies station on the Ossipee and later to Brazil on the frigate Hartford, going out of commission in her Dec., 1879. Soon after he was appointed instructor at Annapolis, and in 1882 commanded the Mayflower in a cruise with cadets. He next served at Portsmouth Navy Yard, Norfolk, Va., and thence sent his resignation to the government to take effect 24 June, 1883.

His family came to Oxford in 1873, and after his resignation he continued to reside here until his removal 1888 to Woodstock, Conn. He was naturally of a retiring disposition, never self asserting, but always ready to meet any reasonable demand upon his time and attention, and was punctilious in the performance of every task he undertook, whether of a public or private nature. He was of a genial temperament, much beloved by his associates of the G. A. R. and was a generous benefactor to that organization. Having inherited from his uncle, Hon. Lafayette S. Foster of Norwich, a considerable fortune he was able to give substantial aid to the needy, and his frequent quiet and unostentatious acts of this nature will cause him to be long and tenderly remembered by many in Oxford. Here as well as in Woodstock he was in full sympathy with Church work, and took upon himself freely his share of its responsibilities, however much of time or money might be involved. In Woodstock especially he won a large circle of friends, and the expressions of esteem in the large gathering at his funeral (which was under the supervision of the Oxford G. A. R. Post) were profound and general.

SAMUEL, two of this name, both men of some note, have resided at Ox., descended from ROBERT of Watertown. The line was ROBERT, SAMUEL, SAMUEL, WILLIAM, b. 1707, at Watertown, was graduated 1724 at Harvard, College, settled at Salem 1728, dismissed 1736, preached as supply, and was teacher at Westboro', and later at Worcester and Holden, returned to Watertown, d. 1 April, 1750. His son SAMUEL, of Ox., b. 1733, was in the French and Indian war, and Lieut. 18 Feb., 1756. About 1765 he was merchant at New London, Conn., and made voyages to the West Indies, removed to Douglas, m. (1) Naomi Everden, was in 1774 a prominent member of an assembly at Worcester to discuss public policy, member of the Provincial Congress 1774 from Douglas, made an effort to change the name of the town to his own, refused 11 Feb., 1771. [Douglas History.] In 1785 had come into reduced circumstances, removed not far from 1784 to Ox., where he had the confidence of the people and was a useful citizen. [The following is from Bentley MSS., American Antiquarian Society: "1790, Jan. 2, letters are received from a Samuel Jennison of Oxford . . . begging charitable relief. He was a son of Rev. ——— Jennison, formerly of this parish."]

The following document from his pen is in the town archives and needs no explanation. It was written at a time of discouragement and perplexity as to the means of supporting religious institutions in Oxford:—

"Whereas the Glory of the Supreme Being, the Honour of the Christian Religion and the best Interest of Societies is greatly promoted by the Establishment of an Orthodox ministry and as the Town of Oxford is Destitute by the Removall of the Revd. Mr. Bowman and as it appears to be the desire of a number that the Town should as soon as may be unite in the Call and Settlement of some Gentleman whose Erudition and sentiment in Religious Matters should Recommend him to their Affection and Esteem. But as the Town is under some Embarassment Occasioned by their Proportion of the Charges arrising on the prosecution of the late war; and other Incumbrances —They are not determined what method it would be most proper to persue for Effecting the same. But as we understand that a number of Towns in this and a Neighboring State have Devised Ways and means for Establishing a perpetual Fund for the Support of the Gospell with them without having Recourse to Taxation or the more uncertain dependence on a Free Contribution for that purpose.

It is Therefore moved that a Committe be Chosen . . . whose business it shall be to go to some of the Towns before referred to and Enquire what mode they Respectively persued and how they Effectted their plans, and make Report to the Town at some future meeting and also that the same Committee be desired in the mean time to provide preaching as they shall Judge proper Considering the present Inclement Season and the Difficulty that attends a considerable number's waiting on Divine Service on account thereof.

Endorsed "Mr. Jennison's Draught."

He probably returned to Leicester. In 1794, being then of Winchester, Litchfield Co., Conn., he brought a suit in court at Worcester for services rendered at Leicester. [Court Record. There is no record of his purchase or sale of land. The next known owner of the before named estate was Abner Mellen, from whom it passed by mortgage to Andrew Sigourney. There appears no record of Mellen's purchase. There is a tradition that a man of eccentric habits lived at this place, who left town putting the estate into Mellen's possession to be cared for until his return. He never appeared and Mellen thus became the presumed owner. The fact that there are no records of purchase or sale would give strength to the assertion.]

KENDALL, REV. THOMAS, Chapman in "Sketches of Dartmouth College Alumni," says, was from Framingham and d. at New Lebanon, N. Y., Dec., 1836, aged 91. Barry gives "Thomas, son of Thomas and Mary of Hopkinton, b. 1745." His mother was Mary Curtis. He was graduated at Dartmouth 1774, studied with Rev. Daniel Emerson at Hollis in 1775, went on a mission with others to the Caghnawaga Indians, settled at Foxborough 25 May, 1786, dismissed 5 Feb., 1800, installed at Kingston, R. I., 29 Sept., 1802, dismissed 3 Nov., 1818, his last settlement; 29 Aug., 1800, bought the John Kidder farm, in the southwest corner of Millbury adjoining Ox., where his family resided while he preached at Kingston. He was chaplain in the war of 1812, and was granted land at Sharon, Vt., went there to possess it, found his title defective and got nothing. He went with his son to New Lebanon, N. Y., in 1820, where he spent his last years. He m. Ruth, dau. of Richard Waters of Sutton.

THOMAS, son of Thomas (1), b. 3 Aug., 1786, at Foxborough, m. (1) 7 April, 1808, Olive Crane of Ox., who d. 30 June, 1818; m. (2) Martha, dau. of Timothy Sparhawk of Ox. He d. 10 Dec., 1831. He was a well-read man and had remarkable inventive genius the widest known production of which is the ordinary thermometer, which from its cheapness and excellence for many years superseded largely other instruments of the kind in the country. He first learned the trade of blacksmith and later that of a machinist. He was also a millwright and at the erection of the Merino factory at Dudley planned and helped to construct the first water wheel, and set up and put in operation the machinery, and when the Ox. Central Manufacturing Company was organized, in which he was a proprietor, he there did the same. The failure of this company brought him loss and discouragement, and he went in precarious health to the farm on the hill for recuperation. While here his fertile mind conceived the idea of making a cheap thermometer. The thought seemed completely to possess him and no hindrances changed his purpose. A visit to an English maker in Boston gave him no encouragement, but with full faith in his final success he obtained a quantity of glass tubing which he took home and experimented upon until he had obtained his purpose, and was able to make an instrument of good quality at a low cost. The imperfection of all thermometers, not severally tested, arose from an unavoidable variation in the size of the tubes, and to meet this difficulty Mr. Kendall invented a machine which graduated the scale of each instrument exactly to match its calibre, and thus secured a uniformity which it was impossible to obtain in the old method. By actual tests the best of English instruments hung beside them were found inferior. At the time of his decease foreign manufactures were almost entirely out of the market. This graduating machine was kept unpatented but secretly until his son David exposed it at Rochester. An inventor at Champaign, Ill., made slight improvements upon it, and it is now in use by all the makers in the country.

There is reason to believe that Thomas Blanchard was indebted to Mr. Kendall for some of the most valuable parts of his machine for turning irregular forms. Unquestionable authority asserts that Asa Kenney of Sutton, now Millbury, clock maker, who had a government contract for stocking muskets was the first man to project a machine of this kind, and that Blanchard adopting his ideas constructed another which failed, as did Kenney's. He then consulted Kendall, told him he thought a machine for turning irregular forms might be made, and asked if one constructed so and so (describing his own), would not do it; to which Kendall after some thought, replied, no. After further consideration he gave his ideas of what would make the machines a success, upon which Blanchard made a model, tested it and had it patented.

Mr. Kendall transacted a large business at New Lebanon, N. Y., until his decease, when his sons, who were all employed at the trade, succeeded him. John, who was for several years in business in the West, was, 1888, owner and operator of the factory at New Lebanon, and making more instruments than ever before. . . . Children by first m.: RUTH W., b. 9 March, 1809, m. 1 Oct., 1834, George W. 8. JOHN, son of Isaac (1), m. (1) 13 Sept., 1737, Hephzibah Smith, she d. 18 July, 1747; m. (2) 31 Jan., 1751, Miriam Smith, she d. 2 Feb., 1803; he d. 8 April, 1796. He bought land and settled west of the river opposite his father's farm, and lived near the river, southeast from the house now owned by Orlin Allard, H. 71. His first house was burned 1786; Jacob, his son, rebuilt on the same spot, and there the father died. He was captain of an Oxford company in the French and Indian war. His commission as lieutenant in John Foy's Company, 1st Regt. Worcester Co. Militia, was dated 24 Sept., 1756, in 1757 he was promoted to captain, in 1751, was constable and collector of the State tax. A descendant relates an incident of Capt. John's experience, showing the strifes in early times as to land titles. He bargained for a lot of land, which included H. 69, near his own, but before the purchase was completed learned that there was another claimant to the premises. The seller informed him that the pretended owner would perhaps try to get possession and desired he would prevent it if possible. As was predicted the claimant appeared and cut down and hauled together a quantity of logs for a house. As soon as he left, Larned sent his son John to the spot with orders to split every log into fence rails, which was done after a very hard day's work. Soon thereafter, the claimant, who was in fact the owner, came upon the ground with two teams, one loaded with materials for a shanty, and the other with household goods; the shanty was erected, the goods set up and full possession of the property established. Larned thought he had run a narrow chance of losing his money, but as it was Continental currency his saving in that case did not avail him much. . . . Children: SARAH, b. 14 April, 1738, m. LEARNED, EBENEZER, brother of Isaac, one of the 30 proprietors, settled at "upper falls," then the extreme north part, H. 130. In choosing this isolated locality he showed an independence characteristic of him. His discerning eye saw in the water-power a desirable acquisition, and building a house with a palisade about it for protection and a saw-mill at the falls he lived and died here. His dwelling, considerably enlarged since first built, is still standing and is among the oldest houses in the town. Of his military history we have no record, he was, however, an officer in the militia from 1718 to 1750, and was known in all the region in his later life as "Colonel Learned." He was active in public affairs, a constituent member of the Church, and on the completion of the second Meeting-house at the north common 17 Nov., 1752, perhaps as donor of the building spot, had the first choice of the pews. He and his son-in-law, Edward Davis, were owners of large tracts of land in the northerly part of Oxford and Charlton. He also owned land in the North Gore and on Prospect Hill. Between 1717 [then aged 27] and 1756 he was 32 years selectman, many years the chairman, and between 1726 and 1762, 15 years moderator at the annual meeting; in 1718 Ensign, in 1726 Captain, in 1744 Major, and in 1747 Colonel; in 1731 and 1751 he was representative; justice of the peace. In 1749 a controversy arose in Brookfield involving the location of a Meeting-house. The matter was referred to three "uninterested worthy gentlemen;" of this committee Col. Learned was chairman. In his will he bequeathed more than 1000 acres of land to his sons Ebenezer and Jeremiah, and the homestead, which was a very large tract, to Jeremiah, on condition that he maintain his mother and the black servant Mingo, he

2. EBENEZER, son of Ebenezer (1), inherited military tastes and became in those matters by far the most noted man of the town. He was early in the Oxford

Company under Capt. Edward Davis, and when the French and Indian war came on was very influential in enlisting men, and at 28 years of age took command of a company raised for the service. Of his early life little is known, but there is evidence that he gave very little attention to study. On 27 Nov., 1750, his father deeded to him 200 acres of land on Prospect Hill, where he soon built the house now standing, H. 126.

While preparations for the northern expedition were in progress Col. Chandler wrote to the authorities at Boston as follows:—

"WORCESTER, Apr. 22, 1756.

"The bearer, Capt. Ebenezer Learned, is to have command of a company of men in Col. Ruggles' Regiment, and as guns and stores will be wanted for his company he will engage to bring them up if you please. . . . "What Learned engages to do will be faithfully done." [Mass. Archives, LXXV., 536.]

During the summer of 1756 he enlisted, equipped and drilled his company, with the valuable aid, as tradition informs us, of Rev. John Campbell, who was skilled in military tactics, and on the ninth of September we find him at the head of 51 men, at Lake George, whither he had marched from Oxford. Of the details of his services here we have very little. Mr. Jennison in his papers, now in the archives of the American Antiquarian Society of Worcester, says he served from 1756 to 1763, and was at Fort Edward when Fort William Henry was beleaguered and marched without orders to its relief. There is reason, however, to believe that he returned home as early as 1758 as he was elected selectman in that year and each year following to 1764.

In Mass. Archives, B. LXXVIII., p. 242, appears a petition to the authorities setting forth that when he was in his Majesty's service in 1757, he "was taken bad with the small pox," and was put into the hospital at Fort Edward and continued there 28 days at a large expense to himself, asking remuneration, which was voted.

From the northern campaigns he returned to his farm where he for five years kept a public house, and as a town officer entered considerably into public business. The troubles with the mother country began soon, and in the excitement which followed he took a decided stand with the patriots and officially was active in influencing the doings of the town in that period of doubt and perplexity. In 1773 he was appointed agent of the town to sue for and collect the stock of ammunition yet outstanding, which service he did. When hostilities began he entered heartily into the contest, doing efficient service, of which some account may be found under Revolutionary History.

His patriotism has never been questioned. He was unwavering in his devotion to his country, standing almost alone in his family and among the people of his neighborhood in his loyalty, and at the time of the Shays rebellion was almost the only man in his section of the town who adhered to the government. He was a marked man in this controversy and, as related, the Shays men decided on a certain night to pay him a visit. Having heard of their plan he took down a favorite gun, which he had carried in his Revolutionary campaigns, and procuring a musket for his son-in-law, Adjutant Pray, put them in order and loaded them with powder and ball, making no secret of what he had done. The visit was indefinitely postponed.

Gen. Learned was prominent in civil affairs, 25 years between 1758 and 1794 selectman, moderator several years, 1772 one of a committee of three to make answer to the petition of the inhabitants of the northeasterly part of the town, who, with parts of Worcester, Leicester and Sutton, asked to be set off as an independent corporation, later Ward; in 1778 he was chosen one of the first board of assessors, the selectmen having previously acted in that capacity, in 1779 delegate to the convention at Cambridge for forming a State government, and in 1783 representative. In Aug., 1776, the Court of Sessions at Worcester appointed him one of a committee to superintend the inoculating hospitals in Worcester County. He was a justice of the peace and officially present at the terms of court at Worcester for 1776, 1778, 1780 and 1783, and every year from 1787 to 1795.

He was one of the original proprietors of the town of Livermore, Me., which was granted to soldiers in the French war, and aided in dividing the lands to the settlers. A pension was granted to him for disability "commencing from 1793 and continuing until his death, 1801."

He received from his father the land on which the village known as "Texas" stands. Selling his farm on the hill he removed soon after his return from the war to a house, now taken away, which stood on a small rise of ground near the river a short distance north of the present Texas Village, and lived there until he had built the mansion known as the "Learned House," now standing, H. 117. In person he is said to have been above the average in size, erect, and in manner sedate and dignified. He was esteemed as a townsman and as a neighbor, was an efficient member of the Church, a constant attendant on public worship and for many years active in ecclesiastical affairs. The late George W. Hartwell, speaking of him said: "My father" (Samuel Hartwell, Esq., a man of ability and intelligence, and intimately acquainted with the General), "uniformly spoke of him with the greatest respect, and as I know held him in the highest esteem." He also remarked that Samuel Stone, Commissary under Learned, had a like regard for the old soldier. General Learned possessed the prerequisites of a great soldier, and so far as he had opportunity developed those qualities, and although hampered by a lack of early educational advantages, and in later years by ill health which cut short his service, he was able to establish for himself a worthy military reputation. Whatever his faults may have been no hint of them appears in the records. We may point with pride to the achievements of those two autumnal days in 1777 and say that in those terrible conflicts, when as it were the fate of our country was trembling in the balance, he did in his sphere invaluable service, and there earned for himself the gratitude and honorable remembrance of succeeding generations.

McINTIRE. A memorandum at the N. E. Historic-Genealogical Society Rooms, Boston, copied from the Bible of Dea. Jeremiah McIntire, Sept., 1848, says the family was Scotch, that prisoners of the name under Cromwell were banished to New England, and came and made a home at York, North Parish, Me., about 1649 or 1650. They there built a garrison house thirty feet square, two stories, the second projecting over the first. Six generations had then been born in the house, and it was still occupied, and had always been a place of free resort to the numerous descendants. The family became wealthy and large landholders.

From childhood he had a great love of knowledge and read much. He in youth committed to memory a large amount of poetry and was the life and soul of a club of lads which he led in meetings for declamation, etc. He studied at Leicester and Warren Academies, was several years apprentice in the Spy printing office, Worcester, in 1849 in the Cambridge Chronicle office, in 1850 with the National Intelligencer, Washington, and thereafter in various printing offices in Boston, Philadelphia, New York and other places, teaching school in each winter until the winter of 1855-6 when he became shorthand amanuensis for C. Edwards Lester of New York. In Oct., 1856, he engaged with O. S. Fowler, went West on a lecture tour with him, and thereafter relinquished printing and continued in Fowler's publishing department, and as his business agent on his tours, writing for the eastern press as opportunity offered. In 1860 he joined the staff of the New York Tribune as shorthand and general news reporter, doing a large amount of service for several years. Not far from 1860 he was appointed Stenographer for the Police Department, New York, at the same time serving in the same capacity the Board of Health, and in the meantime keeping up his writing for the press, and receiving private pupils in Stenography.

During the first years of the Rebellion he furnished such accurate reports of events and speeches in the city and vicinity that some of them have become acknowledged authority in historical works. As he was known as an accomplished reporter the publishers of Appleton's Cyclopaedia employed him to write an article on the subject for the edition which they began to publish about 1861. Later he was invited to write a similar article for a revised edition, but was obliged to decline on account of other engagements. In 1872 he furnished leading political articles for the New York Times.

His brother to whom we are indebted for the principal facts of this sketch, writes "I cannot fix the time when he lost his position as Stenographer to the Police Department. His singular capacity and faithfulness in long service were not questioned. His offence was a most emphatic, determined and effective opposition to Tammany Republicanism. It was essential that Tammany for their greatest success should own men and their influence, provided with the fattest offices receiving large additional pay on account of their official connection with certain city boards, men who were ostensibly Republicans but working in the interests of Tammany. The political trickery of certain Republicans thus playing into the hands of Tammany was the cause of his dismissal from his office."

Very shortly after the action of the Police Commissioners in removing him he was made appointment clerk in the U. S. Collector's Office at New York with a salary of $1,800. In May following he resigned the office to take the appointment of Assistant Appraiser with a salary of $3,000. This office he resigned 1 March, 1873.

His nomination to represent the 9th New York District in the 39th Congress was in the fall of 1872. At the time of his dismissal from the service in the Police Department he held the appointment of Chief Supervisor of Elections for the assembly district. In the discharge of the duties of this office he gained a reputation for honesty and efficiency among those outside his own party. One of the main rallying points of his supporters for Congress was "Honest elections." His efforts and those of his friends in the conduct of this canvass were amazing. Printed documents, personal appeals and large public gatherings were the means used, and an enthusiastic support was accorded him. Many Democrats voted for him because they liked the man. The result was his election. He ought now to have allowed himself rest. But believing that the question of finance would become prominent in national legislation he gave himself zealously to its study and consideration. He took his seat in March, 1873, and being accustomed to thoroughness in all his duties, applied himself to his labors on the several committees to which he belonged with his habitual ardor. Soon it became study and writing day and night, and the strain was beyond mortal endurance. The last of his speaking in Congress showed that the balance of his mind was lost. Acute mania set in and he was taken from his residence to the government hospital for the insane 12 May, 1874, and died 11 days later.

Thus passed away at 43 years of age one of the most remarkable young men Oxford has produced. Soon after his death his widow was appointed to a clerkship which she held until near her decease in 1880.

REV. JOSIAH, brother of James (1), fourth pastor at Ox., b. 27 Dec., 1773, at Hopkinton, apprenticed to learn the trade of a cooper, continued only a short time, early began the study of the languages, keeping his books on his work-bench, and thus fitting himself for college, where he paid his expenses by manual labor and teaching, was graduated at Dartmouth in 1802, studied theology, resided at Upton, whence he came to Ox., 26 March, 1805. Although circumstances were somewhat discouraging there was a revival during his ministry and a considerable accession to the Church. He was dismissed 6 April, 1813, removing to Hamilton, N. Y., preaching until 1819, when on account of ill health he went to Union, Broome Co., and later to Wilkesbarre, Pa., hoping to continue in his profession, but failed. He then removed to Whitesboro', near Utica, N. Y., remaining there until 1825, when he bought of the Holland Purchase Co. a large tract of land at Ashford, which he occupied, clearing about 50 acres which he cultivated until near his death. He was a devoted Christian man, of fair ability, somewhat moderate in manner. In his feebleness he often called together his neighbors in his log cabin on Sunday to speak on gospel themes, and at times was induced to hold meetings in school-houses distant from his home, and was much beloved by the people among whom he lived. At Ox. he began the building of the large house by the north common, now J. B. Campbell's, H. 180, finishing only a part which he occupied. 2. JOHN, son of John (1), m. 15 May, 1755, Jerusha, dau. of Cöllins Moore, settled in west part of Ox., was a large land owner and innkeeper. His sons had farms from his estate as follows: Alexander and Jonathan in common his homestead, being the Barnabas Rich farm and Capt. Thomas

Nichols farm in Charlton and Ox.; John, the Enoch Gale farm in Charlton; David, the mill and the land about it, now Howarth's; and Jeremiah, the Reuben Morton farm in the border of Charlton. He was Captain in the Revolutionary war; joined the army near New York in 1777, but his term of service was short. When he left home his son Jonathan, then thirteen years of age, in company with David Lamb, a soldier, drove the transportation wagon with four horses to New Haven, and with the team returned alone. In 1779 he bought Augutteback Mill property and removed thither, leaving his twin sons upon the farm. They continued to cultivate it, married and managed affairs after the manner of Dickens' "Cheerful Brothers." In 1805, several years after his marriage, Jonathan built the house now standing in Ox. near Charlton line, and soon after Alexander removed the old house and built, modelled after Jonathan's, the present house at the homestead, late Jonathan A. Rich's. They continued to cultivate the farm in common until 1822, and they were 58 years of age when they agreed to separate. Gen. Salem Towne of Charlton, Nathan Hall and James Farwell of Ox., were chosen as referees and the property, excepting the mills and water-power, was divided. Alexander remained upon the western portion and Jonathan took the east. After the death of Alexander in 1823, the mill property was sold to Stearns Witt. The farm of Alexander remained in possession of his heirs, the children of Barnabas Rich, till 1888. Capt. Thomas Nichols owned and lived for many years upon that of Jonathan. Capt. OLNEY, RICHARD, b. in 1770, at Smithfield, R. I., descended from Thomas, who came from St. Albans, Hertfordshire, Eng., in 1635, settled at Salem, and was in June, 1637, of Providence, contemporary with Roger Williams, having been excommunicated from the Salem Church for espousing his cause, and was in 1638 one of 13 corporate members of the town, and aided in founding the first Baptist Church in America. Richard was in young manhood a thriving merchant at Providence, in the West India trade, and an owner in a packet vessel, the Huntress, which plied between Providence, New York and Savannah, carrying passengers and freight, mainly cotton, and which was lost at sea. He was among the pioneers in the cotton manufacture of this region, which interest in 1810 centered in and near Providence. Samuel Slater was successfully prosecuting the business at Pawtucket and casting about in this vicinity for an opportunity to enlarge his operations by establishing mills for spinning, where facilities for weaving were found in the farmers' families. Almost simultaneously Mr. Olney with two associates, merchants of Providence, engaged in a like project, and on 5 Nov., 1811, previous to the purchase of Mr. Slater at Webster, received from Ezekiel Preston, a deed of three-fourths of a tract of land on the Mumford river, at East Douglas, with water-power and rights for mills, machine shop and other buildings. A company was organized, buildings erected and a successful business was established under the style of Richard Olney & Co., later the Douglas Cotton Manufacturing Company. In 1817 Mr. Olney removed to Douglas, where he appears to have continued the business with partners until his coming to Oxford in the spring of 1819. He retained his interest at Douglas until 1822, when he sold $\frac{5}{7}$ of the property to Ziba Angell, and $\frac{2}{7}$ to Jonathan Adams and Adams Foster, both of Providence, having been, as thus appears, about two-thirds owner.

In April, 1819, he bought the Campbell tavern property at Oxford Centre, and was there innkeeper and trader until the spring of 1823, when he removed to the house then standing on the site of the Episcopal Church. In 1826 he bought the farm west of the river, H. 74, at present Woodbury's, where he resided until 1833, when he bought the estate on the Plain, H. 226, and removed thither. This place he sold in 1837, and later lived at the house then standing on the site of the Methodist Church, whence he removed after two or three years to Burrillville, which was his home at his decease. He held from the first a large interest in the Oxford Woolen Company, and in 1836 became chief proprietor. He was in precarious health several years before his decease, and in the autumn of 1841 went to Saratoga for recuperation.

Finding little benefit he returned as far as Oxford, stopped with his old friend Alexander C. Thurston, near Town's Pond, H. 141, continued to decline and d. there 22 Oct., 1841, aged 71. [Headstone.] He had native force of character, sagacity and business ability; was an original proprietor in Oxford Bank, the second on its first board of directors, and from 1833 to 1836 its president, member of Constitutional Convention in 1820, town agent five years between 1824 and 1836, in 1821 and 1828 selectman and in 1826 and 1829 representative, an officer in the Restorationist Church under Rev. Seth Chandler, and afterward a supporter of the Methodist Society. He m. 3 April, 1795, at Cumberland, R. On 10 July, 1765, he retired to Ox., north part, now Auburn, bought land there April, 1768. In Nov. with w. Rachel joined Ox. Church. In Dec., 1775, with others was dismissed to form a new Church at Ward. He was an active patriot in the Revolution and stood fearlessly for freedom of conscience and opinion, was influential, a leader in the formation of the Church at Ward and a magistrate. In May, 1778, at first town meeting, chosen as one of a committee of correspondence, inspection and safety, acted as moderator of county conventions, "wrote thrilling addresses which did much to arouse and guide the spirit of resistance which achieved our independence." [Morse Genealogy.] He trained pupils for college, in which he was aided by his dau. who inherited his linguistic talent. In 1788 he removed to Ox., resided at H. 176, adjoining the north common, bought 1794 the Russell place, H. 185, and soon after removed to the house west in the fields, H. 183, resided there till his death, which occurred suddenly in the store of James Butler. PRATT, THOMAS, of Watertown, 1647; removed to Framingham, had ten sons and one daughter. The sons all married and had children. One of the youngest was JONATHAN, m. Sarah Gale of Watertown, and came to Ox., of whose family we do not find a record, but among his children were JONATHAN, b. 21 Aug., 1701; JOSEPH, b. about 1712; MICAH; JONAS; SARAH, m. Oliver Shumway; SUSANNAH, m. Jonas Collier; LYDIA, m. Jedediah Barton. Jonathan's will was approved 25 Feb., 1760. His heirs who signed receipt to Jonas, his son, who was executor, were Jonathan, Micah, Joseph, Susannah [w. of Jonas Collier], Sarah [w. of Oliver Shumway], Lydia [w. of Jedediah Barton]. His will also names Beulah and Abigail. Jonathan's first purchase in Ox. was in the north part of the town, description in the deed obscure. It is believed to have been the farm later occupied by his son Jonathan, H. 153, near North Ox. railroad station. He deeded in 1723, 60 acres in that locality to his son Jonathan. He next bought in 1727 land and house north of and near Town's Pond, H. 139, and later added to this estate. This was for nearly 60 years a Pratt homestead. In 1733, he sold to his son Micah one-half, which Micah soon sold to his brother Jonas. Micah seems to have remained in the vicinity as he owned land westward of the homestead near the "Little Cedar Swamp," and the remains of a dwelling now to be seen on an old road running north from the old Charlton road perhaps marks his homestead site. Jonas was a blacksmith and long had a shop near the pond, which with the old dwelling was standing early in the present century, but no mark of them now remains. In 1777, Jonas sold one-half the estate to Thomas, probably his son, and in 1786 the whole was sold to Sylvanus Town, Esq.

S. Jane Dyke of Chelsea, Vt., no ch. He spent his boyhood upon his father's farm, and on the removal of the family to the Plain, found employment, as did most of the boys of that day, in a shoe manufactory. When the war broke out he enlisted among the first members in Company E, and became one of the best men in that body. At Ball's Bluff, in the peninsular campaign, at Antietam, Fredericksburg, the second Bull Run, the Wilderness, and later battles the regiment to which he belonged was assigned positions of honor and of danger, and he bore his full share of its hardships and disasters. As he was unassuming promotion came only as his sterling qualities were developed in the service. In Feb., 1862, he was made Lieut.; on 18 Sept., the day after Antietam battle, first Lieut.; and on 14 Nov. following, Captain, and was assigned to Co. G. On the resignation of Capt. Watson 21 Jan., 1863, he was put in command of Co. E, much to the satisfaction of its members, and continued with credit until the final discharge 28 July, 1864. Gen. Devens is reported to have said of him, "he was of the finest type of the American soldier." Another said in substance—he was a soldier of the solid and trustworthy type, resolute, faithful and stanch, one to be trusted to go anywhere in the face of danger and stay until relieved. At Gettysburg especially his courage and tenacity were put to the severest test and he endured the trial nobly. He stopped far more than his share of the enemy's bullets, having received seven wounds before he left the field. The last disabled both arms, but with grim determination he picked up his sword from the ground with his teeth and so carried it as he was borne to the rear. When on a visit home in Feb., 1864, his friends in Oxford honored him in the presentation of a sword, sash, belt and pistol. His later residence was at Worcester, where he carried for years the effects of his army life in impaired health, and died highly respected 2 March, 1881. ROBERTS, JAMES, dau. Harriet; blacksmith in Ox. 1805 to 1809.

ROBERTSON, SAMUEL, of Sutton, and Hannah Shumway, m. 25 Nov., 1771.

ROBINSON, GEORGE, tradition says of Welsh descent, b. about 1685 at Needham, son of George, bought in 1719 of William Dudley 500 acres lying on the west side of Chaubunagungamaug Lake, which with later purchases from Josiah Kingsbury and others included most of the present East Village at Webster. He had four sons, Paul, Silas, Samuel and Ebenezer. The latter, it is thought, had no family. The first settled at Thompson, Conn., Silas in Dudley, on a part of said 500 acres, and Samuel at the north end of the same, his homestead standing on the line of Dudley and Ox., near which he and his son Asa, who was an innholder, had mills, the saw-mill having been built before 1728, and later a grist-mill. Samuel was a doctor, astrologer and innholder. He m. 25 Aug., 1748, Hannah Larned of Ox., and the same year George, the father, sold him 250 acres, part in Ox. and part in Dudley, "being the lands where I now dwell and my house and mills stand," reserving to himself half the profits of the same. In 1782 Asa succeeded his father Samuel as owner and was styled innholder, m. intentions 26 Dec., 1777, Mary Davis.

RODMAN, JOSHUA, aged 57, d. 28 Aug., 1875.

Richard Rogers;

ROGERS, RICHARD, first schoolmaster of Oxford of whom there is record, of whose history we would like to know more than is now possible. Much inquiry has failed to ascertain his parent-age. A tradition gives his birthplace as Wenham. We have little by which to judge of his character or attainments. Some specimens of his handiwork, however, are extant which show him to have been a man of taste, and an expert in the line of ornamental penmanship. We first hear of him at Worcester where 14 Aug., 1732, he was appointed a schoolmaster; continued several years and removed to Ox., where he officiated (we infer from his remaining here) to the satisfaction of the people until his enlistment in the French war, 1760. In March, 1759, the town voted to accept of him as the schoolmaster. In deeds he was styled "scrivener." He m. Martha, dau. of Jeremiah Buckman of Sutton. He died early in 1761, inventory dated 3 March. It is inferred that he taught after his return from the war, as there was money due him for wages at his decease. His widow m. 28 April, 1761, Jonathan Town; she m. (3) 27 Dec., 1775, Isaac Dodge of Sutton, where she died.

When Mr. Rogers left for the scene of war he stopped at Worcester, and there made his will. From Fort Edward on 14 Aug., 1760, he writes to his wife:—

"I left my Will with Judge Chandler, who I gott to Write it and he told me he will not let you be impos'd on by any if I should do otherwise than well.

"My Kind respects to all inquiring Friends—I am in perfect health and strength, and not in any way Discouraged on any account—nor would not turn back till I have Seen more of this part of the World During the time for anything."

This letter is in the possession of Benjamin J. Dodge, of Worcester.

2. LARNED, son of Larned (1), ingenious mechanic, comb-maker by trade, bought 5 Dec., 1820, land near Nipmuck Pond, in South Gore, adjoining Ox. Sold 7 April, 1838, removed to Brockport, N. Y., thence 1855 to Wellsboro', Pa., became insane on perpetual motion, d. 1864, at the asylum at Dansville, N. Y. He m. 18 March, 1821, Hannah F., dau. of Joseph Rockwood, she d. 14 March, 1880, at Wellsboro'. . . . Children, except last two, b. near Ox.: GEORGE W., b. 2 Dec., 1821, m. Aug., 1857, Mariette Butler, had one son, two daughters, residence, Wellsboro'. Descended on the mother's side from one of the original settlers of the town, Oxford may claim him as her son although born in South Gore, a few rods outside her limits. He has been designated as "picturesque," and was one of the most notable men the region has produced. He early formed the habits of a recluse, and spent at least one-fourth of his adult life in solitude in the woods. He was of a consumptive tendency which, as he expressed it, drove him to the wilderness. A remnant of the Nipmuck tribe of Indians lived in the vicinity of his birthplace, and between "Injun Levi," or Nessmuk, and himself there grew in his childhood a warm attachment the influence of which never left him. Of his early experiences he thus wrote:—

"He was wont to steal me away from home before I was five years old, and carry me around Nipmuck Pond and Junkamaug [Chaubunagungamaug] Lake [both near his residence] day after day until I imbibed much of his woodcraft, all his love for forest life, and, alas, much of his good-natured shiftlessness. I ran away from school and books of a dry sort to study the great book of nature. Did I lose by it? I cannot tell even now. As the world goes, perhaps yes. No man can transcend his possibilities; . . . I sometimes ask myself did the strong, healthy, magnetic nature of that Indian pass into my boyish life as I rode on his powerful shoulders or slept in his strong arms beneath the soft whispering pines of Douglas woods? . . . This will partly explain how it came about that, ignoring the weary, devious roads by which men attain wealth and position I became a devotee of nature . . . a hunter, trapper, angler and canoeist, an uneducated man withal, save the education that comes of long communion with nature, and a perusal of the best English authors."

His educational advantages were very few and he early learned the trade of a shoemaker, and with his father and brother was employed by the Oxford manufacturers. But his restless temperament did not allow him long to continue and he sought the seaboard whence came his ancestors, some of whom were mariners, and shipped on a whaling voyage. But he could not endure the hardships of a sea life and within a few weeks he was landed at the Azore Islands, whence after a long and severe illness he returned home.¹

In 1838 he removed with the family to western New York, later drifted to Addison where he worked at his trade, and in 1848 removed to Wellsboro', then surrounded by a wilderness, the haunt of the wild game he so loved to pursue. There he married and made a home, working at his trade, but spending the warmer portion of each year in the forests. In the fifties he wrote accounts of his adventures for Porter's Spirit of the Times, and later for Forest and Stream, and his productions appeared in Harper's and the Atlantic Monthly. When the war broke out he joined the "Bucktail" Regiment, but being disabled by an accident was discharged after a few months. In 1867 and again three years later he went to Brazil, spending several months at each visit. There he invented valuable helps to the manufacture of rubber from the forests. In the summer of 1880 he cruised hundreds of miles in the inland waters of the Adirondack region in his canoe "Nessmuk," and in 1884 again attempted a similar trip which was materially shortened by falling health. He spent the winter of 1886 in Florida and returned thither in 1887 when he contracted malaria, which in addition to his lung difficulty brought him down so that he was not able afterward to leave home for his wonted outings, and slowly declined until his decease 1 May, 1890. His home was in the suburbs of Wellsboro', and in accordance with his request he was buried on a knoll in front of his house, beneath a clump of his favorite hemlocks. Forest and Stream and the local newspapers published extended obituary notices from which we have gathered many facts of his history.

While dwelling much in solitude there was nothing of the spirit of the recluse in him. He was in touch with his fellow-man and a student of human nature. He was gifted with a superior intellect which did not stagnate in the woods. Uneducated in schools he was yet self-taught and well taught, knew the best authors and commanded the respect of intellectual men. A distinguished clergyman after spending a fortnight in his company once said, "Of all the men I have ever met, Sears is the best worth knowing." He wrote much of woods life for the press and took his rightful place among the most popular contributors.

"His abundant experience, rich store of information, familiarity with the ways of wild creatures and sympathy with wood-folk, a never-failing fund of anecdote and compactness and quaintness of style combined to win for him an interested and devoted following. Whether in the hackneyed Adirondacks, the wilds of Michigan, the forests of Pennsylvania or the swamps of Florida, each was invested with a new interest and made fascinating by the charm wrought of his personality. His little volume, 'Woodcraft,' published in 1884, is as refreshing as to inhale the perfumed air of the old woods after a June shower.

¹It is related of him that in boyhood he ran away from home with another lad and coming to a bridge where there was one cent toll to pay, they found they had but one penny between them. Here was a dilemma. But George soon plucked up courage and asked if there was any charge for luggage. On the keeper replying no, he took his chum upon his back and passed on.

"The woods-dweller in his solitude, amid the pines and the hemlocks, found time to ponder and study the great questions of human life, and in his verse he speaks to many a responsive soul, especially to those in humble walks who know the joy, love, toil and bereavements of human life. His poem 'John O'the Smithy,' published in the Atlantic, gave him a world-wide reputation. This volume of verse ["Forest Runes", 1887] savors of hemlock browse, of sparkling spring water, of the camp and woods, and shows ability of no mean order."

The name of his childhood friend, "Nessmuk," which he adopted as his nom de plume, is attached to all his works. His "Forest Runes" he dedicated to his brother Charles. The opening stanza follows:—

"Not that the gift of poesy is mine,
Nor that I claim the poet's meed of praise,
But in remembrance of the golden days
Of youth, have I inscribed these simple lays
To thee, my brother, and to Auld Lang Syne."

"A SUMMER CAMP.

"I leave the town with its hundred noises,
Its clatter and whirl of wheel and steam,
For woodland quiet and silvery voices,
With a camp of bark by a crystal stream.
The feathery arms of firs and spruces
Bend over the water that sleeps beneath,
Where marsh flowers by the quiet sluices
Infold their sweets in a golden sheath.
And a small canoe of airy lightness
Floats silently on the limpid stream,
Where the norland birch in snowy whiteness
O'erhangs the ripples that glance and gleam.
Oh, peaceful and sweet are forest slumbers
On a fragrant couch with the stars above,
As the free soul marches to dulcet numbers
Through dreamland valleys of light and love."

His name is pleasantly linked with that of an honored townsman, John Mayo, in one of his pieces, which closes thus:—

"Eighty summers their blossoms had shed,
Eighty winters had whitened his head.
He waited his summons day by day;
'Life is a feverish dream,' he said,
'It does not pay.'"

"A FRAGMENT.

"Ah! Isabel Nye, the winds go by;
The beard of the thistle sails out to sea,
And the loves of old that were tried like gold
Have gone like the thistle-down, far a-lee."

SHUMWAY, PETER, of Topsfield, 1678; Peter of Oxford, b. 1735, is authority for the assertion that the family originated in France; the name was probably Chamois or Charmois. In the records of Essex County the name is often spelled "Shamway."¹ Dr. Baird says, "a Protestant family named Chamois is mentioned in a list of fugitives from the neighborhood of St. Maixent in the old Province of Poitou, France, at the time of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes." Peter came to America among the emigrants who landed before the founding of the Oxford Colony, as will be seen by the following, in the handwriting of Rev. John Campbell:—

"TO THE HONORABLE SPENCER PHIPS ESQ LIEUT GOVERNOR AND COMMANDER IN CHIEF IN AND OVER HIS MAJESTIE'S PROVINCE OF THE MASSACHUSETTS BAY IN NEW ENGLAND: THE HONORABLE COUNCIL AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES IN GENERAL COURT ASSEMBLED:

"The Memorial of Peter Shumway of Oxford most humbly sheweth that whereas your humble memorialist did many years ago prefer a petition to the Honorable General Court of this Province praying that as he is the legal heir and representative of Peter Shumway of Topsfield who was a long time in the service of this Country and particularly in the Narragansett war, and taking the Indian fort there which he in said petition proved by living testimonies and which he believes the Honorable John Chandler and others worthy members of this Honorable Court do yet remember,

"And whereas your aged, decrepid and poor memorialist hath never yet received any gratuity, or reward in land or otherwise for his father's services and sufferings as many others have done, your most humble memorialist again most humbly prayeth this Honorable Court in their wonted goodness and compassion would make him a grant of some piece of Country land for said services, or otherwise as in their great wisdom they [see] fit: which will oblige your most humble memorialist—as in duty bound will ever pray.

"(Signed)

PETER SHUMWAY.

"March 23, 1749–50."

We find no record of action on this memorial.

Peter of Topsfield was progenitor of all of the name in the country, so far as known. His son PETER, b. 6 June, 1678, at Topsfield, m. (1) 11 Feb., 1701, Mariah Smith of Boxford; was not an original proprietor at Oxford, but voted in on the rights of Joshua Chandler 13 Sept., 1713. The home lot embraced the Josiah Russell place, H. 185. Mariah d. 17 Jan., 1739; he m. ¹ It is well known that in several other instances in Ox. names, the French termination ois has been changed to way. A letter of William H. Shumway, Esq., lawyer at Syracuse, N. Y., May, 1871, says: "I understand from an attaché of Joseph Bonaparte that our name Shumway is a corruption of 'Chamois,' a person bearing it was Comte De Chamois, a member of the court of Louis XIV."

SKINNER, ABRAHAM, one of the 30 English proprietors, supposed to have been of the Malden family, but there having been several of the name it is difficult to fix his parentage. [P. Corey, Esq., the historian of Malden, writes "That our Malden Abraham went to Colchester, I am very sure, whether he stopped at Oxford on the way I do not know, I should think from your letters that he did."] He was a blacksmith, grandson of Benjamin Chamberlain, took up his 40-acre lot at Augutteback Falls, sold in 1722 and removed to Colchester, Conn. On 3 March, 1721, Benjamin Chamberlain "for love and affection" to his grandson Abraham Skinner deeded to him a 60-acre lot on Prospect Hill, which Abraham Skinner of Colchester deeded 20 May, 1724, to Samuel Eddy of Watertown. [The names Skinner and Chamberlain were prominent in the early history of Colchester. In Oct., 1745, Abraham Skinner with others, resident on the borders of Colchester and Hebron, petitioned to be set off as a parish.] His signature upon the Ox. proprietors' book is in good style and indicates an uncommon degree of culture for those times. He was evidently a man of influence, and was a constituent member of the Church, selectman five years and one year constable. He m. 6. STEPHEN, baptized 4 Sept., 1698, son of Samuel of Framingham, was of that place 1725, and of Douglas in 1731. On 14 Dec., 1744, a State's committee deeded to him 160 acres of Province land on which he was then living, "near adjoining to a place called New Sherborne," including all his improvements. This tract lay nearly two miles west of Douglas centre. The cellar of the old house is now to be seen near the road to Webster. He m. Katharine ———. . . . 7. STEPHEN, son of Stephen (6), resided on the homestead, controversialist in theological matters, a Baptist, next a Restorationist and last a Universalist. In the Revolutionary war refused to take up arms, claiming to be a Quaker, was imprisoned at Worcester and sent by the authorities to Nova Scotia, remained a few months, at his urgent desire his sons sold a yoke of oxen and managed with the proceeds to get him home. He had 11 ch. at least; order of birth unknown. STEPHEN, JAMES, JACOB, JOHN, SAMUEL, ASA, KATHARINE, m. Craft Davis; HANNAH, m. Benjamin Davis; MARY, m. James Hovey Davis; ABIGAIL, m. ——— Harwood, removed to Athol; ELIZABETH, m. ——— Curtis, resided at Sutton. [Ox. 8. ZEBULON, son of Stephen (6), b. about 1737. soldier in the French war, 1758, m. 16 July, 1760, Tabitha, dau. of Daniel Hovey, Baptist and later Universalist preacher, several years president of the Annual Convention, "an amiable and excellent man," d. 1808, at Surrey, N. H.

9. ADAMS, son of Stephen (6), b. 31 Dec., 1735, well known to all familiar with the beginnings of Universalism in Ox. and the country. In 1758 he was of Charlton, and it is not improbable as there were many Baptists there who held meetings in private houses, that he began his life work as a preacher among them. Ten years later we find him married and living in the South Gore. Before Nov., 1775, he had removed to Douglas. In 1780 he was a party in a land conveyance there, and styled "elder." His change from the Baptist to the Universalist faith occurred probably about 1777, when he preached the new doctrine in Ox. and vicinage, extending his tours to Milford and Providence, R. I., and in 1781 removed to Milford where he continued until the winter or spring of 1785-6, when he returned to Ox. During these years his labors seem to have been chiefly in Providence, Milford and Ox., alternately. Early in Sept., 1786, he died. Col. Andrews of Providence writing to Rev. E. Winchester says: "At present we are rather in a state of mourning from being deprived by death of the visits of friend Streeter. He, on the road coming to visit us on Saturday before the fourth Sunday of August, fell sick of a bilious disorder at the house of Stephen Whipple in Smithfield and died the Saturday evening following." The Milford Society records contain the following: "Sept. 22, 1786. Then departed this life our Beloved Elder and Brother Adams Streeter, to the great lamentation of all his hearers." Samuel Davis of Ox. was executor of his will, valuation £42. He owned no estate in Ox. Descendants now reside in the vicinity of Orange, and a grandson, Adams Boyden, was living recently in Charlton. TOWN, TOWNE, WILLIAM. Upon the east coast of England, 120 miles northeast from London is the old town of Yarmouth. Among its venerable buildings is St. Nicholas Church (founded A. D. 1123), in which on 25 March, 1620, William Town and Joanna Blessing were m. They were the grandparents of John, the leading man in the English settlement at Ox. Twenty years after this m. six of their ch. had been baptized in that Church and the family had joined the emigrants to America. They resided first at "North fields," Salem, removed 1652 to Topsfield, where they settled. JACOB, a son, was baptized at Yarmouth, 11 March, 1632, resided with his father at Salem 12 years, m. 26 June, 1657, Catherine, dau. of John Symonds, and d. aged about 73 years. His sisters, REBECCA and MARY, were victims of the witchcraft delusion, and SARAH barely escaped with her life. JOHN, son of Jacob, b. 2 April, 1658, at Topsfield, m. 2 Feb., 1680, Mary Smith, was active in public affairs at Topsfield and administrator of his father's estate 1704, removed to Framingham where at the first town meeting, 5 Aug., 1700, he was chosen selectman. In 1708 he resided at Charlestown, came in 1713 at 55 years of age among the 30 settlers from Framingham to Ox., and at the first town meeting was chosen town clerk and selectman, and continued to occupy prominent public positions and to have the confidence of the community during his life. He was a leader in the formation of the Church, one of four who met at his house for this purpose, and was its first deacon. His abilities, character and experience fitted him to be what he in fact was, the Nestor of the new settlement. His house lot, H. 176, which adjoined the North Common he sold nearly ten years before his decease to his son Jonathan. He d. aged 82, 1740, at Topsfield.¹ . . . Children: MARY, b. 23 June, 1681; JOHN, b. 25 Nov., 1682, d. young; ISRAEL, b. 18 Nov., 1684; ESTHER, b. 13 Dec., 1686, m. 23 April, 1711, Simon Mellen of Framingham; EPHRAIM, b. 1688; JONATHAN, b. 11 March, 1691; DAVID, b. 1693; SAMUEL, b. 25 Jan., 1696; EDMUND, b. 7 May, 1699; JOHN, b. 31 May, 1702. Benoni came from Medfield among the 30 proprietors, settled on the west side of 8-rod way between the two commons, sold 1728 100 acres, bounded east on the 8-rod way, south on a 4-rod way [road over Camp Hill], north on John Wiley and Peter Shumway. In 1733-4 we find him on "Manchaug farm near Oxford," tradition says at H. 10, then Dudley's. In 1736, '39 and '40 he was of Ox. In 1732 he was one of the grantees of land at Pequig, Athol, probably in consideration of services of his father and grandfather in the Indian war. In June, 1734, he drew 10 lots there. In 1745 he deeded a portion to his son Jeremiah, he then residing at Thompson, Conn., and was preparing for the expedition against Cape Breton, in which he went, it is said, as commissary. He deeded also the same year ("since by divine providence I am engaged in the present expedition against Cape Britton") to his son Seth of Thompson, to his dau. Hannah, w. of Phinehas Dana of Ox., and Abigail Buship [Bishop], w. of John of Attleboro', in case he should not return, as follows: to Seth his husbandry tools, household goods, and notes and accounts, and to his daughters all his lands in Ox. equally. He returned from the expedition and in 1749 was here in the full confidence of the public, having been employed by the proprietors in the final allotment of all the lands then remaining undivided in the town. On 18 Sept., 1749, the town voted £6 to Capt. Elijah Moore, innkeeper, for "dyeting him" while in this service. He is supposed to have d. at Killingly, Conn., the owner of large tracts of land. He was early in the town's history, much in public life, in 1713-14 selectman, in 1714 town clerk, later constable, and to 1725 repeatedly moderator and selectman. He was a constituent member of the Church, "evidently a man of character and enterprise, and engaged somewhat in land speculation." He m. 18 April, 1705, Hannah Allen. . . . Children [several b. before coming to Ox., some d. young]: HANNAH, b. 1713, at Medfield, m. 8 March, 1731, Phinehas Dana; SETH, b. 9 Nov., 1711, at Medfield, m. Dorothy Bishop, resided in Ox., in 1744 was of Thompson Parish, in 1757 of Sturbridge, at which date he sold land in Pequig. In 1765 he had removed thither, and there spent his remaining days. [Athol records give the following, who, it seems probable, were nearly all the ch. of Seth and Dorothy and b. at Thompson: Jeremiah, d. 6 Oct., 1810, aged 68; Benoni, d. 29 Aug., 1819, aged 74; Enos, d. 25 July, 1812, aged 62; John, d. 1 March, 1802, aged 48; Abner, d. 15 Feb., 1825, aged 71. We conjecture from the land records that Seth had a son Abner, and there is positive proof that he had a son Jeremiah.] In 1777 he sold to Abner Twitchell and Seth Twitchell, Jr., land in Athol laid out to said Seth, Senior, on the rights of Benoni, the father. Of the ch. of Seth, two were recorded in Ox.: Jerusha, b. 11 Aug., 1736; Josiah, b. 15 May, 1738. They had probably ch. b. at Thompson; but we find no record of them. On 14 Nov., 1746, Joseph Wiley deeded to his son John 50 acres on the west side of Prospect Hill. They probably lived together on this estate. In Sept., 1763, James Jackson, trader, of Boston, sold on execution land belonging to John, Jr., and in Nov., 1763, he was sued by other parties. He was a trader and a rough man. Alexander Nichols, brother-in-law, was indebted to him and meeting on 25 Aug., 1763, at the old tavern on the Plain, they had a quarrel in which Wiley assaulted Nichols, injuring him so that he had medical treatment and was confined to his house for a time, for which Nichols sued him. The case was sent to referees, viz., Ebenezer Learned, Hezekiah Stone and Thomas Town, who awarded Nichols ten dollars damages. Wiley refused to pay, and sued Nichols for debt. This case was also submitted to referees, viz., Josiah Brewer, Edward Davis and Josiah Wolcott, who heard the whole matter and reported that there was due from Wiley to Nichols a balance of £2, 19s. 1d., but that Nichols should pay costs of both suits, which amounted to £7, 11s. 6d. John, Sen., removed to Dudley, and died there. Susanna, his widow, was administratrix of his estate. In its settlement are named JOHN, SETH, ALDRICH, JOSEPH, BENJAMIN, MARY HOLTEN, SUSANNA KEITH, SARAH TAFT. In Dec., 1771, Susanna of Uxbridge, widow of John, late of Dudley, had a case in Worcester Court. In 1783, the town of Northbridge made a demand on Ox. for the support of "Widow Wiley," later sued—trial March, 1785,—and obtained judgment for £12. On 31 July, 1783, the town of Ox. voted to sue Maj. John Wiley for the charge brought by the town of Northbridge. In June, 1785, John Wiley, then of Dalton, was sued by the Executors of Edward Davis, Esq., for dues to his estate to be paid in rum or molasses. Dec., 1790, John Wiley, late of Sunderland, trader, had a case in Court at Worcester.

Missionary among French in Ohio, 1866–68. Pastor of S. Church, Chicago, 1868–70. Missionary among French in New England." Since 1873 he has continued in this field, headquarters at Boston; ABIGAIL, b. 1777, d. 14 Jan., 1860, unm.; ALBIGENCE, b. 1780, was impressed and put on board of an English man-of-war. He tells his own story in a letter which follows:

"BOMBAY, March 22, 1810.

"Dear and honored Parents: I sit with my heart full of sorrow and disappointment for fear that I shall never reach my own Country, for I am in despair and forlorn, for my enemies are innumerable for being an American, I have met with a sad misfortune in getting one of my feet jammed with a cable, by which I have lost one of my toes and the foot very much damaged.

I have a great deal of money due from the English, but whether I ever get it or not God knows. My life is a misery, and if my father is alive I wish him to apply to government for my relief, for among these tyrants I cant long live.

"I am still by the name of Thomas Pheasanton, I am . . . from Baltimore by Robert Provians in March 4th. 1804.—So Adieu.

"N. B. I have nothing to wish for but my freedom, which is very easily gained for searching for, but there is no justice to be had in India. So I wish for some lover of freedom to interfere in the behalf of not only me, but hundreds that are now on board of British men-of-war in the East Indies. So no more.

"I am your dutiful son,

" ALBIGENCE WILLIAMS.

[The signatures to the above present a somewhat interesting study. Of the twenty, many are not named in the body of the deed, and as many named therein did not sign. Two wrote their names in full; several signed by the first two or three letters of their names, several by a conventional figure as a circle, cross or other rude design, one by the form of a bird, but the majority made only a meaningless scrawl. Of the four who sign the supplementary writing, which contained originally ten or twelve names, JAMES PRINTER als. WOWAUS is remarkable in his handwriting, and his is by far the best Indian signature on the deed. James Achochick and Meeocoman were two other signers of this latter instrument].

This appended writing follows:—

"Wee Seanjasco, Wabequalan, Madaquamin, Cook Robin [others, names illegible] inhabitants of the Nipmug Country and partners with the grantees in the Land above conveyed and sold, being absent at the time of the above s^d treaty and bargain and therefore not inserted in the Deed Do nevertheless fully consent thereto, and having received our several proportions of the price therein Specified do Signify our consent to the same and release all our right title claim and interest in and unto the Lands therein granted and every part and parcel thereof do hereunto Set our hands and Seales in the presence of the witnesses above named. Consented unto also by James Printer als. Wowaus."

[Signed by four.]

On the back is endorsed:—

"Memorand That on the twentieth day of May 1685 full and peaceable possession and Seizin of the Lands within mentioned to be granted with the appurtenances was given by Benjamin the brother of Black James & Simon Wolomp son of the sayd Black James by delivery of a turffe of the Land called Mayanexit upon a small twigg, in the name of the whole unto the within named William Stoughton and Joseph Dudley, which was so done under a tree growing on the said Mayanexit Land and then marked S. D. in the presence of us whose names are underwritten

[Suffolk Rec. XII., 297.]

The introduction of the name of James the Printer as above in a special clause may be considered an indication of his high standing in the tribe. This Indian was one of the most interesting characters mentioned in the accounts of early times. When a child he was taken into the Indian School at Cambridge and later was apprenticed for 16 years to learn printing, but ran away before the expiration of that time. He was Eliot's most valuable assistant in producing the Indian Bible, and when in 1683 this man contemplated a revised edition of his work he wrote thus: "I desire to see it done before I die . . . we have but one man, viz., the Indian printer that is able to compose the sheets and correct the press with understanding."

James was a teacher at Hassanamisco, the place of his nativity, and also at Chaubunagungamaug. With all his good qualities he was true to his native instincts, and when Philip's war began joined the foray, leading, it is said, in some of the murderous assaults. A memento of him (it is believed no other Indian of the time could have produced the document) remains in the form of a written notification which was posted on the bridge over Charles river at Medfield on the retreat after the attack on that settlement, 21 Feb., 1676; "Know by this paper that the Indians that thou hast provoked to wrath and anger will war these twenty-one years, if you will. There are many Indians yett. We come three hundred at this time. You must consider that the Indians loose nothing but their lives, but you must loose your fair houses and cattle."

A few months later the war was closed. James returned to his allegiance to the colonists, was pardoned and for many years afterward was a competent assistant to Mr. Green, the leading printer of the day, at Boston, printing in 1709 the Indian Psalter.

Bernon's Plan of Oxford. PAGE 7. This plan now among the Bernon papers, is given as a curiosity and also as in a manner illustrating the divisions of the Oxford lands. It is far from correct in detail, especially in the streams and in the direction of the lines running east and west, which, starting at the east ran more to the southward than here represented. A few numerals have been added to mark points of special interest: 1 represents the site of the Huguenot Fort; 2, a cluster of French houses near the old mill; 3, the south branch of Millbrook coming from Mendon Meadow; 4, the north branch of the same coming from Bug Swamp; 5, the Maanexit; 6, Little River; 7, the Quinebaug. This plan has no date attached but must have been made after the deed of division, 1688, and before the English settlement, as at that date the "common way" here represented had been abolished. The second "common way," here shown, we find no allusion to in the records and probably it had existence only on paper. An interesting point which has not been identified (perhaps some abundant spring), is that in the extreme east of Cox's division near the Maanexit on the west, designated as "Coxes Well." The Grand proprietors' lots, it will be observed are numbered. The significance of this can only be conjectured. They are marked at the extreme west by the first five letters of the alphabet.

A Huguenot Magistrate and Representative. Isaac Bertrand Du Tuffeau was commissioned "a Justice of the Peace within the town of New Oxford the french plantation," Dec. 5, 1693. [Gen. Court Rec., Lib. Series, VI. 299.] It is believed that he was also elected as the representative from New Oxford the same year. Mr. A. C. Goodell, Jr., Commissioner for the publication of Province Laws, writes in relation to the subject: "He subscribed the qualifying oaths with the representatives chosen to the Court which convened Nov. 8, 1693; and on the strength of that, I included him in the list of deputies to that Court. It is not, however, absolutely certain that he was a deputy, since this subscription may have been made in qualifying" for the office of justice of the peace. "I have given the town the benefit of the doubt, since no other deputy from Oxford appears that year,—Daniel Allin of Boston, who represented Oxford the previous year having this year been chosen by the inhabitants of Marblehead."

Answer to Sigourney's Petition. PAGE 13.

"In answer to the petition of the Constable of Oxford, Voted, That the Treasurer suspend the Calling in the last Tax laid on s^d town of Eight pound Six shillings tell may court next." [Acts of 1694—5, Chap. 31.]

The Johnson House. PAGE 14. This house being near the Woodstock road or "Connecticut Path," was kept as a tavern. [Mayo's manuscript.] The Chimney stone now stands in front of Memorial Hall.

Huguenot Industries. PAGE 24. Glove-leather in addition to furs, was an important production of the "chamoiserie," and this commodity was shipped hence in quantities to the Boston and Newport glove makers. But more than in any other respect in the line of industries our country is indebted to the Huguenots for their skill in agriculture and horticulture. Smiles says, "They were acknowledged to be the best agriculturists, wine growers, merchants and manufacturers in France. No heavier crops were grown in France than on the Huguenot farms in Bearn and the southwest provinces. The slopes of the Aigoul and the Epernon were covered with their flocks and herds . . . The diligence, skill and labor with which they subdued the stubborn soil and made it yield its increase of flowers and fruits and corn and wine, bore witness in all quarters to the toil and energy of the men of the Religion."

Disosway says, "the different parts of the country were greatly benefitted by the introduction of their superior modes of cultivation, and of different valuable fruits which they brought from France."

Signal Station. PAGE 25. There must have been, during the Huguenot occupation in those days of peril and alarms, means of communication between the fort and the valley below. As the shoulder of Bondet Hill obstructed the view from the fort at the lower and most thickly settled portion of the village, near the "old mill," it became necessary to establish some conveniences for transmitting intelligence from the latter eminence. There now exists at that locality a considerable earthwork or mound which was, as is supposed, the site of a watch-tower or signal-station for this purpose. As this spot is in full view of Woodstock Hill, probably communications were here also exchanged with that place.

French Road. PAGE 9. On a plan of land granted to Jethro Coffin in Northbridge in 1713, is laid down a road east and west entitled "The French Road;" from which it is inferred that the Oxford settlers had abandoned the old route through Grafton and Marlboro' to Boston, and chosen a more direct course, further south.

Location of the French Chapel. PAGE 11. According to the recollection of Mrs. Huldah Daniels, familiar with the locality from childhood, the large stones, said to have been the foundation of this building, were near the present road, a few rods east of the house now standing at the top of the hill, on the Humphrey farm. The late Willis H. Humphrey, born on the farm and who in boyhood heard Dea. Ebenezer Humphrey discourse on these matters, was of the same opinion, as to its location.

Richard Moore's Legislative Bill. PAGE 48. In 1721, Mr. Moore being Oxford's representative, probably elected chiefly for this purpose, presented to the General Court a request for a law to oblige the larger land proprietors to aid in building a Meeting-house. On this favorable action was taken but was not consummated until March session 1722, when, as supposed, was enacted a bill the title of which follows:—

"An Act to enable the town of Oxford to lay a tax on the resident and non-resident proprietors towards building their Meeting-house." [Prov. Laws II., 234.]

It is a very singular fact that the title only of this bill appears on the official records at Boston. The bill itself cannot be found in any department of the State Archives. The records of Oxford give no light on the subject, and whether the town was benefited by it can only be conjectured.

"Land Bank." PAGE 46. In the session of 1743 the General Court passed an act "for the more speedy finishing of the Land Bank or Manufacturing Scheme." The preamble runs—"Whereas notwithstanding the Directors and Partners of the late Land Bank Company have in general publicly renounced their Scheme, and great Numbers of them have redeemed their just Proportions of the late Company's Bills and delivered them to be consumed, yet many of the Partners still neglect to do it, by means whereof those who have paid a due Obedience to the Law . . . still remain exposed to the Actions of the Possessors of the late said Company's Bills, etc.

Now for the more speedy finishing of the said Scheme . . . and preventing such of the Directors and Partners as have complied with the Law from suffering Ruin or Dammage thro' the Obstinacy or Neglect of their delinquent Partners,—

Be it enacted . . . that John Jeffries, Samuel Danforth, and John Chandler, Esqrs., be commissioners," etc., for the purpose aforesaid.

Charlton District. PAGE 40. When Charlton was first detached from Oxford it was made a District, with power to elect officers, levy taxes, etc., but was not allowed representation in the Legislature. From 1770 to 1774 inclusive her voters joined with Oxford in the choice of a representative. In 1775 Charlton elected its first member of the General Court, indicating that the privileges of a township had then been granted.

Rev. John Campbell's Decease. PAGE 55. On 25 May, 1761, the day of Mr. Campbell's decease, the town authorities issued precepts to both north and south constables ordering the warning of a town meeting to be held on the 26th to make preparations for the funeral. The meeting was holden but no recorded action appears excepting a vote appropriating £10 to pay expenses. The funeral was on the 27th.

The following is in the town archives:—

“Received in full by the hands of Josiah Wolcott Town Treasurer the sum of Sixty Pounds Salary and also the sum of Thirty Seven Pounds nine Shillings for Bearers, Preaching, and also for a ten pound grant by said Town for Funeral Charges, it being in full of all Demands the Heirs of Rev. Mr. Campbell has against the Town.

WATERTOWN, MAY 5, 1775.

WHEREAS his Excellency General Gage, since his Arrival into this Colony, hath conducted as an Instrument in the Hands of an Arbitrary Ministry, to enslave this People; and a Detachment of the Troops under his Command, has of late been by him ordered to the Town of Concord to destroy the public Stores, deposited in that Place for the Use of the Colony: And whereas by this clandestine and perfidious Measure, a Number of respectable Inhabitants of this Colony, without any provocation given by them, have been illegally, wantonly, and inhumanly slaughtered by his Troops:

Therefore RESOLVED,

THAT the said Gage, hath by these and many other Means utterly disqualified himself to serve this Colony as a Governor, and in every other Capacity, and that no obedience ought in future to be paid by the several Towns and Districts in this Colony to his Writs, for calling an Assembly, or to his Proclamations, or any other of his Acts or Doings: but that on the other Hand he ought to be considered and guarded against, as an unnatural and inveterate Enemy to the Country.

JOSEPH WARREN, President, P. T.

Attest SAMUEL FREEMAN, Secr'y, P. T.

It is evident from various papers in the town archives that much of the patriotic action of the town in the Revolutionary crisis was suggested and stimulated by Boston influence. The order that “the Publick Money for 1773 be paid to Henry Gardner, Esq.” (page 128), was in response to a peremptory demand of the Provincial Congress that such action be taken. In the Council at Watertown 23 Aug., 1775, it was resolved that each Town and District in the Colony be required to exhibit . . . the sum total of their assessments . . . from 1769 to 1774 inclusively, and to whom they were delivered, also that each Constable or Collector, report the sums total committed to him to collect for the same time, and their payments with receipts.—Also, that Sheriffs or their deputies be required forthwith to pay to Henry Gardner [Receiver General] all monies they have received still remaining in their hands, etc., indicating that a scrupulous supervision over the towns was maintained by the authorities.

Army Supplies. PAGE 128. Soon after our soldiers had gone into camp at Roxbury, a call was sent to the town for arms:—

“Oxford May y^e 8th 1775 upon a Request Made by Col Eben Learned & Cap^t Wil. Campbell & Thom^s Fish for Fire Armes: there was Sent to them at Roxbury One Gun by Mr. Eben^r Humpherey by estimation Worth £1. 8s. L. M. and one Gun by Mr. Newcomb worth £1. 16s. Mr. Stephen Pratt one gun at £1. 4s. and A Blanket at 7s. Ed Davis Esq. gun £1. 13s. Cap. Eli Davis gun £1. 16 Ens John Willson Gun, Lt Daniel Hovey Gun, Mr. David Millen Gun, Mr Smith Johnson Gun.”

Another memorandum without date, but later is as follows:—

Method of raising Soldiers in the Revolution. PAGE 131. In 1777, a tax was assessed on the town at large for the sum of £1014. 14s. 11d. for paying soldiers, indicating that classing had not then been adopted. The receipt of Seth Washburn 30 Aug., 1781 (page 131), shows that in that year that plan had been pursued. As to the year 1782, the evidence is conclusive. In the town archives appears the order of Henry Gardner, Treasurer and Receiver General of the Province, for the assessment of the sum of £296. 6s. 8d. “being the average Price of the Cost of raising the Men.” Four soldiers were re-required, the sum per head was therefore about £75. The heading of one of the tax lists under this order follows:

“The following persons are hereby Classed to Raise one Soldier for the Continental Army for three years or during the War agreeable to a Resolve of the General Court of March [8], 1782.”

Class one embraced the southeasterly part of the town extending to the Plain, 54 names, Capt. Jeremiah Kingsbury, Chairman; class two, the south-westerly part also extending to the Centre, 58 names, Peter Shumway, Chairman; class three, the north part of the Plain and northwest part of the town, 59 names, Capt. Sylvanus Town, Chairman; class four, the northeast part of the town, 55 names, Capt. Elias Pratt, Chairman.

JOSEPH PRATT."

Rev. Joseph Bowman's Letter. Oct. 23, 1777, Mr. Bowman wrote a friendly letter to General Learned a part of which follows:—"The most particular account that we have had of affairs in your quarter, that we can depend upon, have been in your letters to Mrs. Learned: one of which was published in the Worcester paper: viz. that which gave an account of the action of the 19th of Sept. I do not know how it is, but it seems that our printers have no correspondents in the Army, and consequently we have but few particulars, and those collected from one, and another, are vague and uncertain & sometimes unintelligible, & some accounts contradicted by others so that we know not what to believe. . . . there is a strange spirit of lying that prevails in the Country . . . I hope that you will continue to give us as circumstantial an account of things as you can . . .

It has been remarkably healthy with us the Summer past . . . the season has been good & very fruitful, we have plentiful crops (thro' Divine Goodness) tho' every thing is excessive dear—our privateers bring in many prizes, tho' not so many as they did last year; . . . I was about to add something further, but having just now received authentick intelligence of a most important event, viz. the surrender of the whole British Army commanded by Gen. Burgoyne to the American force, I therefore stop short to congratulate you on this most singular, important and happy event [etc., etc.] Your affectionate friend & very humble servant.

JOSEPH BOWMAN."

"STILLWATER, Sept. 25, 1777.

"On Thursday the 18th instant marched about 4 miles at 5 o'clock A. M. in order to attack the enemy on the right flank on their march; but they not marching according to expectation prevented our doing anything of considerable consequence.

"We attacked a small party about 60 or 70 rods from the enemy's front, killed some, said to be five or six, took and sent in that day, as I was informed after my return, 36 prisoners. We all returned about sunset, without the loss of one man killed or wounded.

"The next day (September 19th), we were early alarmed, being informed the enemy were on their march towards our Camp. Agreeable to a result of Council of War, the Riflemen and Infantry from the left of our army went and attacked the Enemy's right Wing, or rather their front guard about 5 minutes before one o'clock. The enemy gave way, we took some prisoners. The enemy reinforced, which caused us to do the same; which was alternately done by the enemy and on our part of the Army till the battle became almost General between the Enemy and our Division.

"I was ordered to send out one Regiment at first, and the rest in succession, except the last.—I then received orders to march to the attack. We marched on briskly and came up to the Enemy's right wing, which was endeavoring to surround our left. A most severe fire lasted till the cover of the night prevented further action. We went back to our camp, and the enemy have encamped near the ground where the battle was fought. We are near neighbors. Our lines and those of the enemy are but about a mile and a quarter from each other. Both armies are fortifying, but time only can determine the further event. The effect of this battle is that we have lost two Lieut.-Colonels killed, with a number of other officers of different ranks. In the whole our killed, wounded and missing are about 318. By the best accounts the enemy's loss, killed and wounded, amounts to a thousand. These are facts. Capt. Wiley is wounded. Our army are in high spirits. We took eighty on the day of battle.

"P. S. On the day of battle, and since, two of our Captains were taken Prisoners, also one Lieut. and 27 privates. This is an exact account of the Prisoners sent by Burgoyne to Gen. Gates, each man's name specified in the list."

General Learned in the Revolution. PAGE 141. The story of the American Revolution will never cease to be interesting and instructive, and any new light which may be thrown on Learned's contemporaries is specially to be welcomed in this connection. A very able work on the great contest from the pen of Prof. John Fiske has recently been issued, of which a review appeared in the New York Tribune, June, 1891, which contains in substance the following:—

In most old histories the truth was obscured by a mistaken feeling of patriotism which ignored or belittled all that was discreditable in the men of the Revolution. Happily history is no longer written in that way. Under the new methods—in which the whole truth is told—we encounter abundance of error and frailty, no little vice, corruption, malice, treachery and incompetence. Some long-held reputations fade and wither, some shine out even more resplendently than before. The fact of all others to be rejoiced over is the undiminished brilliancy with which the character and cause of George Washington emerge from the fiercest scrutiny. We see and know now better than was possible fifty years ago how greatly Washington was the Revolution, how indispensable to the achievement of American Independence. He was constantly engaged in a struggle against political perversities and incapacities. Congress was the most discreditable feature of the Revolution . . . a body of meddlers and muddlers, which, it may well be surmised would have paralyzed any other man than Washington. Its most disgraceful record was the treatment of the Army, which it seemed to consider a necessary evil, withholding from it food, clothing, munitions and pay. Corruption was not wanting, political adventurers grew fat while the soldiers starved and froze at Valley Forge.

And to cap the climax cabals existed in the Army itself aimed at Washington. Mr. Fiske has brought out with special prominence the concern in one such intrigue of a man who for a long time Americans delighted to honor—General Gates, the so-called "hero of Saratoga." . . . The surrender of Burgoyne was brought about by the splendid gallantry and the initiation of Arnold and Morgan, Gates having opposed the movement and done nothing to support it. Yet he coolly appropriated all the honors of the day.

Mr. Fiske emphasizes the continued ill-treatment of Arnold by Congress; an ill-treatment which while it cannot excuse or condone his treason certainly makes it less difficult to understand why he played the traitor. While he was still faithful no general in the field was more distinguished both for valor and military judgment. He fell "like Lucifer, never to rise again," but he had a career before his fall the contemplation of which must in every candid mind temper execration with regret.

Oxford may take an honorable pride in the fact that a son of hers so efficiently seconded this man in a crisis the issue of which was of such vast import to the country.

Case of Alexander Nichols. PAGE 133. In the latter part of 1776 a draft of men for the army was made "at the meeting house at the Parish," so called, [Ward], and Alexander Nichols was drafted.

A petition from him appears as follows:—"The petitioner was drafted . . . and being unable to march myself or do a soldier's duty I exerted myself to procure money to pay the penalty and did in 24 hours after being drafted tender to the Captain of the Company £10 which he refused to take, then your petitioner repaired to the subaltern officers and made tender of the same which they refused, and notwithstanding the Selectmen and Committee of Correspondence signed a mittimus to commit me to gaol"—asking relief.

8 Jan. 1777.

A hearing was ordered.

A counter statement is recorded of Jonathan Stone, Lieut., the import of which was that Nichols did not answer the call or offer the money, £10., or provide a substitute in 24 hours.

JONATHAN RICE, Dep. Sheriff.

A County Tax for 1776, was assessed on the following :—

The Embargo. PAGE 224. The law of Congress Dec. 22, 1807, closing all the seaports of the country passed in retaliation for spoliation on our commerce by England and France, which nations were then at war, caused general stagnation of business, and especially on the seaboard considerable suffering among the laboring classes. The North was much agitated over the subject and in the summer of 1808, in response to the request of the selectmen of Boston, great numbers of petitions from the towns in the State were presented to the President for relief, one as noted having been sent from Oxford. They were, however, of no avail and the depression continued. The presidential candidate of the opposition party was elected that year, and in March, 1809, the odious law repealed to all nations excepting Great Britain and France.

The petitioners for a town meeting to act on this subject were James Butler, David Lilley, Abijah Davis, Jeremiah Kingsbury, Jr., John Torrey, Jr., James Gleason, William Moore, Elijah Pratt and Jonathan Harris.

The house here referred to was the old tavern house, H. 205, a part of which Capt. Elijah Moore appears to have occupied after its purchase by Doctor Campbell.

Bridle Roads. PAGE 111. March, 1752, a road was accepted from John Larned's, H. 72, north through land of Capt. Higginson, and Ebenezer Coburn "to the bridge above Ballard's mill," (the first mention found of a bridge here) and thence, northeast, through land, in 1770 of Rev. Joseph Bowman, to John Shumway's land, H. 183, and through the same to the main road near Turcott's, "to be a bridle road to be passed with convenient gates." After 18 years, in March, 1770, this way was discontinued.

On 12 March, 1753, a way was accepted from Benjamin Davis', H. 23, "on the side of the Hill on the backside of the Great Meadow," northwesterly, "into the highway that comes from Amos Shumway's (H. 171) to the meeting house. Said Highway to be a driftway." This was voted an "open road" in 1757; in 1758 changed the route in part and voted it be $1\frac{1}{2}$ rods wide; in 1761 discontinued, and again made a bridle road. A "driftway" was for foot or horseback travel, with gates wherever needed. An interesting point in reference to the location and making of old roads is here suggested. This "way" ran some distance on a hillside. Excavating to much extent to build a road in such a location was thought impracticable, or it was not attempted in early times, and we have here an explanation of the fact that many old highways passed over steep hills. A lateral level grade was a necessity for wheeled vehicles and as this was impossible on a hillside without excavation, when hills stood in the line of a proposed road a long detour was required to pass around them or they must be mounted directly on their front. The latter alternative was usually adopted.

First Bridge over Maanexit River. PAGE 111. Among the early roads laid out in town was that voted 1 March, 1728, to run southerly through Paul Dudley's farm past his house, H. 58, beginning at the 8-rod way on Johnson's Plain, and running "over the bridge." This is the first mention we find of a bridge over the river. This road was accepted May, 1729.

March, 1758, the town voted to build a cart-bridge over the river above the river meadows, where the foot-bridge now stands. In 1759 voted that this bridge be built further up stream and that the road be turned further north.

Bridge over the Maanexit. PAGE 115. June 22, 1807, there was a public "vendue" of the building of the bridge on the present Dudley road (the first at that locality), at which its construction was sold to the lowest bidder—"on the following Conditions, viz:—"

"The bridge to consist of two stone butments each of which to be founded on mud sills 12 inches broad on the top . . . 33 feet from each other & 17 feet up & down the stream and a streak sill one foot thick on the top of each butment; there to be five string pieces to be locked & pinned into the streak sills to extend three feet at each end into the butment or bank & confined with stone or timber at each end & to be ten inches through at the least end. . . . The plank to be . . . two inches thick & pinned firm with two pins in each plank to the upper string-piece & one pin to the lower one. The top of the bridge to be one foot below the hight of the bank on the east side & to lie level, the west butment to extend to the hard land . . ."

"Samuel Campbell being the lowest bidder it was struck off to him at fifty-four dollars seventy-five cents."

"Tavern Expense (?) 60 cents not paid."

Capt. Jer ^b Kingsbury	90 rods at $54.00.

Bridge over Little River. PAGE 115. The two rivers, the Maanexit and Little River, for many years to some extent isolated the southwest neighborhood from the rest of the town. From the report of a committee, May, 1827, on a school district west of the river, we learn what has been gathered from no other source, namely, that a bridge early, for many years existed over Little River near its junction with the main stream, over which was a way from the southwest to the mill, and thence to the Meeting-house and to the Plain. This report recommends the establishment of this district, the addition of the Oxford Woolen Village to the same, the building of a school-house on the Coburn farm, a short distance south of Little River, and the building of a bridge "at or near where the old Coburn bridge once stood." The old roadway through the fields south of Howarth's toward this bridge can now be traced. This project for a school district, which seems from the present point of view, most commendable, was not carried out, doubtless on account of the sentiment then prevailing in favor of small schools and small districts.

Repairs of Bridges. PAGE 115. In April, 1807, a committee chosen to consider the state of the bridges injured by the freshets of the previous winter, reported:—to repair that near Reuben Lamb's would cost $25; that near James Williams' $15; that near Capt. John Nichols' $10; that near Elijah Pratt's [H. 58, "Great bridge"] $10; that near Thaddeus Hall's [Hawes place, H. 136] $10; that near James Wallis' [East Village] $10.

By reference to page 41, "South Gore land annexed," it will be seen that the name of James Wallis of Dudley was among those whose estates were set to Oxford 6 Feb., 1807. He then owned the water-power, mills, etc., at the outlet of the "Great pond," with contiguous land partly in the South Gore and partly in Dudley, his residence being on the latter portion. So far as appears the dividing line between Dudley and the Gore was direct, from near where the stream issues from the pond to near where it runs into the Maanexit, indicating that none of the territory of the town of Dudley was thus taken off, but that the part of Wallis' estate lying in the Gore only, was included in the act.

Town's Pond. PAGE 2. This body of water has long been known as "Carbuncle Pond," the name having been derived from a popular myth current many years ago, both in Europe and America, which ran that a carbuncle of large size might at certain favorable hours be seen gleaming from its depths. Crofton Croker, in his Killarney Legends, gives the same story in reference to that celebrated lake. It is undesirable that this name, based on mere fiction, should be perpetuated.

The Town family, perhaps as worthy as any in the English settlement, owned and lived upon the lands surrounding it, and pond and adjacent plain were early in the records uniformly styled "Town's Plain" and "Town's Pond." It is altogether fitting that the memory of so estimable a family, which has been many years extinct in Oxford, should be preserved and honored in the name of this, perhaps the most beautiful natural object in the town.

Town Poor. PAGE 222. Receipts in the town archives attest that James Freeland was paid for boarding Margaret Fosdick from 1 Oct., 1776, to 1 April, 1777, at 6s. per week.

A draft of a petition from the selectmen to the General Court—no date—represented that Jemima Tolle was born in Oxford, now Auburn, and married 20 July, 1786, to William Tolle of Leicester, who soon thereafter enlisted in the Revolutionary army from that town and did not return to his wife, that so far as could be learned he was formerly of Providence, R. I., etc.; that she had become a public charge, asking that she be received as a dependent of the Commonwealth. [Designated as "Widow Tolley." Town archives].

In March, 1801, the town refused to pay £100 to Daniel Wyman for the support of his father and mother [John and wife].

In Nov., 1808, it was voted to instruct the town agent to agree with some person to support Rachel Smith during her life.

Dinah, "a slave." PAGE 44. In the town papers appears the draft of a petition to the General Court, from the Selectmen, representing that "Dinah a Negro Woman is in the Town of Oxford without any means of support by which reason she has become chargeable to said Town she being Aged and infirm, by the best information we can get she was born in Sudbury in the County of Middlesex & came into this Town upwards of 30 years ago & at length became a servant of one Charles Dabney who came into this Town from Providence in the latter part of y^e year '76 [or a little later] but did not in any wise gain a habitation in s^d Oxford, & remained servant to s^d Dabney until y^e adoption of this State Constitution soon after which time S^d Dabney her master removed back to s^d Providence & there soon after deceased & left S^d Negro in Oxford without any means of support by which reason she has become chargeable to s^d Town. Therefore your Petitioners pray your Honours to take the case into your consideration & [give] us relief by considering her one of this State's Paupers, etc."

An indorsement on this paper is dated 1807.

Dinah, as appears, was for many years after Dabney's removal a faithful domestic in the family of Josiah Wolcott.

"Warning out of Town." By a law of 1692 every person coming into any town and being there received and entertained for a period of three months, not having been warned to leave, was to be reputed an inhabitant, and if brought to want was to be supported by the town, unless a father or grandfather, mother or grandmother, child or grandchild was of sufficient ability, then such relative should relieve such poor person as the justices of the peace of the county should assess. In 1700 the time in which said warning might be given was by law extended to one year.

We find no evidence that the custom of warning out of town prevailed in Oxford prior to 1789. At this date the finances of the town were in a low state, the number of indigent persons had largely increased in consequence of the Revolutionary war, and public burdens were oppressive. In Dec., 1789, a man with a family from Sutton, and a "spinster" from Ward were officially ordered to leave town, they "having come . . . for the purpose of abiding therein not having obtained the town's consent therefor." In Feb., 1792, seventy-eight, in the following June, twenty-three, and in Dec., 1793, forty-two persons were thus warned. This wholesale warning indicates either a widespread destitution among the people, or an over solicitude on the part of the authorities as to the town's possible pecuniary liabilities.

In the division of the dependents, March, 1833, between Oxford and Webster, after the settling off of that town, the following, "as a full fourth part of the persons chargeable to Oxford," were set to Webster: Rebecca Mellen, Polly Mellen, Jemima Tolley, Ezekiel Davis, 2d, and David Rich, his wife Polly and 12 children.

Appraising and dignifying the Pews. PAGE 86. In this subject there comes to light a very interesting phase of old-time life. Little in reference to it appears on our records, but it is not probable that Oxford was exceptional. It would not apparently be a difficult thing to give to each locality in the Meeting-house its proper "dignity," and this duty was at times assumed by the towns, as when in 1715 Framingham voted "As for dignity of the seats, the table and fore seats are accounted the two highest." Those at the "table" were probably under the pulpit facing the audience, and for the wives of those sitting here it was voted a pew should be made in the north corner of the house. Furthermore, it was voted "the front gallery is accounted in dignity equal to the second and third seats in the body of the house, and the side gallery . . . to the fourth and fifth . . . in the body of the house."

But the seating of the people was an entirely different affair. Committees were chosen for this purpose and we may well believe the position was not one to be coveted. The criterion was to some extent fixed by the towns, but much was left to the discretion of the committee. In Medfield in 1732 it was voted "that the committee shall place persons in the meeting house by age and estate, that is to say: to balance one year of age with one pound of real and personal estate . . . excepting such persons as are 50 years of age and upwards it is left in the judgment of the committee to advance as they please." In Sutton the committee were "to go by age and rate and offices; Heds not Regarded." Wives ranked with husbands but sat on the opposite side of the house. A certain committee was instructed to "consider of what men have paid toward building, what charges they now bear, what they are likely to pay for the futer, and to have respect to persons." In some instances towns seated individuals. In 1738 Framingham voted that two certain persons should be seated in the deacon's seats; another in the second seat in the body seats, and a third in the front seat in the side gallery.

That much ill-feeling resulted from this usage cannot be doubted. In a certain town it was ordered that the inhabitants "rest silent, and sett down satsfyed" with the committee's decision; in another, individuals were chosen to "take special notice of all disorderly persons on the Lord's day that do not keep to their own seats appointed for them, but keep others out of their seats, whereby the sabbath is profaned."

As time progressed the "mens and womens seats" in the body of the house were displaced by pews built by persons who had permission from the town thus to occupy space, and the practice of seating by committees gradually declined.

"Pew-ground." In 1781 there was a demand for more pews and on the report of a committee, 19 July, it was voted to "sell pew-ground in the Men's and Women's Body Seats" for building pews, as follows: No. 1, on Women's side to Anthony Sigourney for 20½ hard dollars; No. 2, on Men's side to James Butler for 20 hard dollars; No. 3, on Women's side east alley to John Dana for 17 hard dollars; No. 4, on west side of Men's seats to Jesse Jones

(the tanner) for 16½ hard dollars. [Jones sold 4 March, 1782, to Nathaniel Hamlin.] The proceeds of these sales were voted to the support of soldiers' families and the town's poor.

In April, 1805, it was voted to sell "pew-spots" at the east and west ends of the "Body seats," one each, and also one in each side gallery, indicating a prosperous condition of ecclesiastical affairs.

Repairs of Meeting-house. PAGE 87. May, 1793, the town granted the "east and west enteries" of the Meeting-house and the ground occupied by the present stair-cases to erect pews on, to the individuals who had undertaken to build a porch to the said house.

Gratuity. May, 1765, the town voted that Dea. John Willson and his wife, for service he has done the town, be allowed to sit free in the pew on the west side the broad alley in the Meeting-house.

Adherents of Rev. Joseph Bowman. PAGE 58. The following stood by Mr. Bowman in his time of need, and Feb., 1782, signed an obligation to be taxed according to their valuation for his support. It was an unsuccessful endeavor as not a sufficient number subscribed.

Preaching. On 27 Oct., 1788, the town gave its promissory note for £4. 16s. to John Taylor for preaching four sabbaths at 27s. per sabbath. There was also paid for him 1 Nov., 1788, for horse hire to Coventry seven shillings, six pence.

Rev. Josiah Moulton's Memorial. PAGE 63. The refusal of the town to aid in supporting Mr. Moulton drew from him the following note, dated March 1, 1813:—

"To the freeholders of the Town of Oxford in Town meeting assembled.—Gentlemen, Whereas the raising of my annual Sallery by general taxation upon the whole Town is attended with considerable inconvenience and seems to have been made the occasion of no small disturbance, and whereas I am not disposed to be the instrument of discord and contention in society, it is therefore my desire and request that the contract formed between me and the said Town, A. D. 1805, respecting sd Sallery be dissolved and cease from and after 27th of March, inst.: the above is respectfully submitted by the subscriber.

JOSIAH MOULTON."

Upon this the town voted that the said contract be dissolved. Two weeks later the Congregational Society was formed.

The first Centre School-house was a building of more than ordinary historical interest, not only from its prominence among the public buildings of the town (it having been between 1748 and 1793 the only public edifice on the Plain), but from the fact of the Universalist Society having been formed in it. It stood on the north side of the Sutton road about 15 rods east of the present railroad track, and was in size about 16 by 20 feet. The outer door was at the southeast corner, where was an entry about four feet square, against which was a large stone chimney, the fireplace of which easily received four-foot wood as fuel. At the northeast corner was a small closet, which with the chimney and entry filled the east end. The school-room was therefore about 16 feet square, and on the south, west and north attached to the sides of the room were the desks of the larger scholars, who sat facing the walls. Inside of this outer tier was a line of low benches without desks or backs on which sat facing inward the smaller portion of the school. The teacher's table occupied some convenient spot in the middle of the room. This building in 1803 was much dilapidated, weather worn and moss covered. In Nov., 1803, a meeting of the district was held to consider its condition, at which were present 18 persons, of whom two declined voting, four favored repairing the old house and 12 voted to build anew. A tax list appears dated Dec., 1803, assessing on the district the sum of $253.03 for building a new school-house. This stood on the Charlton road near the site of Dr. Rawson's present house, and was built probably in 1804. It was more pretentious than the old house and was in size 24 feet square with hip roof and a porch or entry about six by eight feet. It is now standing about a fourth of a mile west of its original position and has been many years used as a tenement.

Report of a School Committee, 1810. "To the Freeholders and Voters in the Town of Oxford in Town meeting assembled. Gentlemen, your committee chosen to inspect the several schools in sd Town beg leave to report—

"1st your committee in company with the Rev'd Josiah Moulton and the Gentlemen Selectmen of sd Town have attended their Duty and find the several Schools with the exception of Mr. Harwood's ward, viz. No. 2, in a flourishing State being Surplyd with Able Teachers and Actuated with a Landable Ambition to Excell—the reason of your committee's making an Exception of Mr. Harwood's ward is that a large part of the Parents and Guardians in sd ward are opposed to having there schools Inspected and keep there children at home, which Practice in the Opinion of your Committee is very Injurious as it tends to Sap the first principals in Society and frustrate every necessary regulation.

"2ly in regard to the Grammar taught in the Schools it is the Opinion of your committee that Murry's Grammer has the preference and that each ward would do well to have no other taught.

"3ly it is the Opinion of your committee that the Town would do well to grant fifty or an Hundred Dollars more for Schooling in sd Town, all which is respectfully Submitted.

Miscellaneous Land Conveyances. 1729, May 20. William Dudley for Paul Dudley, Samuel Sewall, Jr., and wife Rebecca, Hon. William Dummer of Boston, wife Catharine, Mary Wainwright, widow, Josiah Willard of Boston, guardian of children and heirs of Daniel Allen, deceased, and Ebenezer Pierpont of Roxbury and wife Anne, which said Paul Dudley, Rebecca Sewall, Catharine Dummer, Mary Wainwright, Daniel Allen and Anne Pierpont were legatees or devisees of the will of Hon. Joseph Dudley, to Richard Kidder of Oxford 150 acres. [This land, then in Oxford, was in the Upham neighborhood, now northeast part of Dudley.]

1729. John Eddy to Samuel Eddy, a 60-acre lot in the northeast part of Oxford, now Auburn.

1730, Oct. 7. Jeremiah Morse of Walpole and Uriah Morse of Medfield to Ebenezer Eddy of Watertown, land on Prospect Hill, Oxford.

1732, Jan. 1. Abial Lamb to Abial Lamb, Jr., half of all his real estate in Oxford.

1745. Richard Williams to William Campbell, blacksmith, 23 acres, bounded partly on "Brown's land," being "a part of the farm whereon I now dwell."

1747. By authority of the State, John Willson, Jeremiah Shumway, Samuel Eddy, Jonathan Pratt and Duncan Campbell, committee, to John Nichols 80 acres, joining a lot sold 12 June, 1740, to Larned from Danforth land, for taxes for building the new Meeting-house.

1761, Oct. John Nichols to his son John, 100 acres, apparently the same, "bounded on all sides by Danforth's estate."

1756, March 20. Ebenezer Learned to Edward Davis one-half a lot of 340 acres in the east part of Charlton, and one-half another lot of 800 acres in Charlton, bounding 410 rods on Oxford line. [This deed shows that Learned and Davis owned other lands in partnership and were transacting business as partners in selling lands. Quite a number of conveyances as such appear.]

1763, Jan. 31. Heirs of Joseph Dudley to Edward Davis of Oxford, one square mile, "adjoining the Meeting-house in the town of Dudley," being that which William Dudley leased to the Indian natives April 9, 1724, excepting for said Indians 200 acres on the east side thereof . . . so long as they shall continue to improve the same, agreeable to a resolve of the General Court, Jan., 1763, etc. [Worcester Records, XLIX., 314.] Edward Davis' son Edward settled on this estate.

1767, March 1. Samuel Fairbanks to Nathaniel Davis of Oxford, 274 acres and buildings, in the southeast part of Dudley, bounding a half mile on the French river. Davis removed thither.

1767, Sept. 10. Isaac Larned to Joseph Davis, 100 acres [southwest, near north village, Webster], bounded N. on John Larned, Jr., S. and E. on grantor. Davis is supposed to have lived here before purchasing H. 34.

1768, April 16. Moses Gleason to Rev. William Phips of Douglas, 60 acres with buildings in Oxford, now Auburn. Phips removed thither.

1769, March 6. Benjamin Davis of "Oliver's Farm," near Oxford, to Ruth, wife of Joseph Davis, land in Douglas. The only instance noted where Thompson's grant is called by this name.

1785, June 15. The State's Committee to Ebenezer Davis of Charlton, 740 acres in Charlton and Oxford, part of the confiscated estate of William Brown of Salem.

Richard Rogers' Real Estate. May 14, 1743, Jedediah Barton deeded for £155, 32 acres and buildings in the north part of Oxford to Richard Rogers, Scrivener. This estate, which has not been identified, was bounded partly on a 4-rod road, partly on land of widow Eddy and also on land of Ebenezer Learned. Rogers sold it 28 Dec., 1743, to Jacob Cummings who in Sept., 1744, deeded to Cornelius Waldo of Worcester, "being the place whereon I now dwell." In 1746 Waldo sold to Ebenezer Learned.

Old Time Housekeeping. The following annual provision for a widow by her husband in his will shows what were considered the necessities of life a hundred and fifty years ago: 9 bushels corn, 3 bushels rye, 1½ bushels barley malt, 3 barrels cider, 5 pounds beef, 100 pounds pork, fire-wood, 8 pounds sheep's wool, 12 pounds flax, the use of a horse and saddle, house-furniture, attendance in sickness and health.

Early Carriages. The first wheel vehicles to be used solely as conveyances were the square canvas-top chaises, with bodies swung on leather "thoroughbraces," heavy affairs with large wood axles, and tires in separate pieces fastened upon the wheels, and usually with a large window in the back of the top. Of these the following were owners in 1800 or soon after: Josiah Wolcott, James Butler, John Larned, 3d, Amasa Kingsbury, Gen. Ebenezer Learned and Jonathan Davis.

A few years later appeared a novel carriage, the ponderous, square canvas-top two-horse family conveyance of Capt. John Nichols, for a long time the only two-horse vehicle in town. About 1810 one-horse open wagons came into use and soon every prosperous farmer in town was owner of one, and thereafter horseback travel fell into disuse. Chaises were fashionable until about 1840, after which they were gradually displaced by the four-wheel phaeton now used.

An Old Man's Reminiscences. A native of the town, absent more than fifty years, living on the western plains, recently wrote: "I should like to see those old hills again, especially old 'Camp Hill,' for close by there I attended school five or six months, and was sent home because I had no wood to warm by." This is an allusion to a custom of the olden times when the father of every family was required to furnish wood for the school fire in proportion to the number of his children attending.

The Printing of Town Reports began 1841, when the selectmen's report was printed on a single sheet. This continued until 1855. In 1856 and later, "Auditor's Reports" were printed in pamphlet form; in 1863 the school committee's report was added, and in 1865 the present plan of incorporating all officers' reports together was adopted.

Homestead 214. In 1771 Abijah Harris, then owner of this estate of 12 acres and buildings, bargained with James Brown, the tailor, for the sale of it, and executed a bond to give him a warranty deed within four years, Brown to pay £52. On the back of this bond is a receipt dated 6 Feb., 1771, for four notes from the purchaser for the said sum, which would indicate that Brown took possession of and occupied the premises. But he evidently did not become bona fide owner. In 1783 Harris sold to Jonas Collier, who in turn on 12 April, 1786, bargained for £60 the premises to Adams Streeter, the minister of the newly formed Universalist Society, and also gave a bond for a deed. Mr. Streeter died the following September and this sale was therefore not consummated. A receipt of Daniel Fisk in behalf of Samuel Davis, administrator of Streeter's estate, for £3. 4s. indicates that Streeter had made partial payment, and that he was in possession at the time of his decease.

Right of Way over the Town Farm. There was a long controversy between the N. & W. R. R. Co. and the town as to the amount of damages to be paid for the railroad crossing the town farm. In April, 1836, it was voted in town meeting that a way 175 rods long and 3 rods wide be granted for $350, the company to build passes across the same for the convenience of the farm. Later a vote of the town conceded the privilege in consideration of the railroad company building the new piece of road across the meadow at the north end of the Plain. But neither of these propositions was the basis of a settlement. On 7 Dec., 1837, a board of referees, Morris Larned of Dudley and Samuel Taylor of Sutton, met at the centre tavern, heard the case and awarded the town $400 damages; but the railroad was built and had been operated two or three years before the matter was adjusted. In town meeting Nov., 1842, a committee of three strong men was chosen to settle with the railroad company, with instructions if they could not do it as they judged expedient, to "prosecute the claim." The report of this committee was made and accepted April, 1843, but is not recorded. As nothing appears later on the subject, it is inferred that a settlement was then effected.

Gleanings from the Town Records. 13 March, 1714. John Bolles of Simsbury, Conn., sold to Ebenezer Chamberlain two horses. [Marks described.]

On 30 Nov., 1716, David Tillotson of Lyme sold to Ebenezer Chamberlain a horse. [Marks described.] The fact that one of this name had thus early transactions with Oxford people strengthens the opinion that Jonathan Tillotson the settler was from Lyme.

The house built for Mr. Rogers seems to have been after his decease a kind of foot-ball. In March, 1764, it was voted to sell it. In May an attempt was made to appropriate it for a school-house, which failed. In May, 1765, it was voted to sell "the house Mr. Bixbee lives in at Vendue," and it was struck off to Capt. Griffin at £53. O. T. In May, 1766, it was voted to take it again for a work-house, but the vote was not carried into effect. In 1774 it was again voted to sell it. In 1789 a committee reported the house lately occupied by widow Fuller sold for five dollars to Obadiah Allen. [See page 96.]

Oct., 1761, voted to sink the rates of the son of Uriah Gleason, he having died in the public service.

April 30, 1783, is recorded a deposition of Mary Gardner, widow of Nathaniel, giving the name of her brother, Joseph Green, Esq., of Boston, and declaring that he left that place in 1775, at which time she, the deponent, lived with Charles Dabney in Providence, R. I.

She being then of Oxford, undoubtedly came hither with Mr. Dabney from Providence.

In a warning for March, 1785, was an article "To see if the town will allow Capt. William Campbell his proportion of the 'Sword in Hand' money which said Campbell paid before he left Oxford." Dismissed. The purport of this vote is not clear. This "money" was an issue of Massachusetts currency named from its bills having on them the figure of a man with a drawn sword in his hand.

March, 1792, voted "to petition to have the South Gore laid to some other town, or disconnected with Oxford." Also to have the North Gore annexed to Oxford.

May, 1798, is recorded the mark by which Rev. Elias Dudley recognized his sheep, a very suggestive entry. Ministers of those and previous days "lived of the Gospel" only in part, but were in an important degree dependent in common with the rest of the community upon the produce of the soil, and much care and often drudgery were thus entailed upon them.

From town action May, 1802, we learn that the saddler's shop built on the common that year by Archibald Campbell occupied the site of the blacksmith shop of Mr. Trow, then removed. [See page 227.]

16 June, 1837, paid to Stearns DeWitt,	$2,287.66
22 July, 1837, paid to Samuel Dowse,	1,301.92
[See page 45.] Total,	<hr/> $3,589.58

The highway from near Charles H. Wellington's to the North Oxford railroad station, it was thought, was not in the first instance legally laid out. In 1890 the selectmen re-located it and April, 1891, it was duly accepted by the town. [See page 119.]

Return of the Fifteenth Mass. Regiment. PAGE 169. The Worcester Palladium of 27 July, 1864, says of this regiment, "only 85 officers and men returned." The Aegis and Transcript of 30 July reported "about seven officers and eighty men remain of this gallant and glorious old regiment," adding, "eleven of the prisoners of 22 June were of the number." Capt. Gale of Northboro' was in command, and there were present two surgeons, Captains Albert Prince of Oxford and George W. Brown of Leominster, and Lieut. Nelson V. Stanton of Northbridge, acting adjutant, and Lieut. William Bixby of Hopkinton, Quartermaster.

John Eckersley died 13 June, 1890, at Lonsdale, R. I. [Page 172.]

Roman Catholic Parsonage. PAGE 95. This house was built by William H. Thurston, having been begun in 1872 and finished Sept., 1873. It passed from him to Sylvanus Robinson, the executors of whose estate deeded 2 July, 1885, to John E. Kimball, who on 20 Aug., 1886, conveyed to Rt. Rev. P. T. O'Reilly of Springfield, diocesan Bishop.

Who was the first Flannel Maker? PAGE 201. At the date of the establishment of flannel manufacture at North Andover, from time immemorial home-made flannel had been spun and woven in most of the farm houses of Massachusetts. A quest might as well be instituted for the first baker of a loaf of brown bread.

Old time Currency. In the earlier days of New England the amount of currency (which was furnished chiefly by the mother country) was very limited. Indian wampum was largely in use, and up to 1661 was a legal tender, and in minor transactions was current many years into the 18th century. As early as 1652 Massachusetts began coining pine-tree shillings and sixpences. Another expedient was the issuing of Bills of Credit as noted, page 44. Banking and the issue of Bank Notes began in country towns early in the present century, but at first there was much distrust of these institutions as a foreign innovation, tending, as often declared, to "bring the people under Lordships."

Defences against the Indians. PAGE 13. At the date of the action of the Council in reference to the Indians at Keekamoochaug, 1 Aug., 1693, the following was passed :—

"Upon application made by the Town of New Oxford they are allowed to enclose two of the most convenient houses in said Town with Stockado's for the security and defence of the Inhabitants against the Indian Enemy, two English men to take up their residence among them, one at each Garrison, to have the Inspection of them.

WILLIAM PHIPS."

Isaac Bertrand Du Tuffeau. PAGE 22. The following concerning this important member of the Huguenot colony has been gathered from Dr. Charles W. Baird's "Huguenot Emigration to America." He was a refugee in London in 1686 from Poitou, became warmly interested in the plan of the settlement at Oxford and induced Bernon to furnish means by which he was able to join in the project. He came a short time after the settlement began, bringing letters from Bernon and Mr. Thompson to Dudley, who soon made him a grant of 750 acres of land, as previously set forth. He was at this time about 40 years of age, and after his arrival was married to "demoiselle de la Rochefoucauld," but had no issue. With him came as servants or employés two Englishmen (one being John Johnson) and Jacques Thebaud and daughter Catherine. The glowing accounts he forwarded to Bernon concerning the country induced the latter also to emigrate, and with "above 40 persons" whose passage he paid he landed in the summer of 1688.

In 1689 the General Court, meeting 1 June, appointed Du Tuffeau "Commissioner for the Town of New Oxford," with power to try petty cases and to act "as any other Assistant may doe as the laws of the Colony direct."¹

Du Tuffeau's appointment was exceptional. Letter of A. C. Goodell, Jr.

Johnson's residence so far from the main village is explained by the fact of his having been employé of Du Tuffeau, who, as supposed, resided at H. 64.

In 1694, reverses having come, he left the settlement in discredit. "Being called to account for gross mismanagement of interests committed to him, he sold the stock and furniture of Bernon's plantation and abandoned the place." Soon thereafter he went to New Rochelle, N. Y., where he continued several years, and later, as asserted by Bernon, went to London, where he died. [Mass. His. Col. 3d Series, II. 69.]

The Papillon family. PAGE 283. Dr. Baird thought them descended from the Huguenot family of the name in Avranches, Normandy, which had suffered severely from persecution. Whitmore, in "Sewall's Diary," refers to Mr. Papillon of London, a distinguished person in his day, of great wealth. Peter, the emigrant, of Boston in 1679, supposed to have been his descendant, removed about 1681 to Bristol, where he died; date of inventory 26 Nov., 1697. His widow Joan 23 March, 1700, was granted by a special act of legislature leave to sell real estate for her support, she having "several small children." Judicial Courts had then no power to authorize the sale of lands of minors. [Prov. Laws, VI., 73.] Peter, Jr., known as Captain, was a Boston merchant and held a high social position. He died 1733 and was buried "under arms." His widow Katherine and son-in-law John Wolcott, Esq., of Salem, were appointed administrators 10 May, 1733. Among his effects were "a farm in the Huguenot settlement at Oxford," and a mansion-house on Bennet Street, Salem. His widow died a few months later.

Presentation of Ensign to the "Invincibles." PAGE 157. This ceremony took place 13 Sept., 1824, two days before the annual muster, which was at Sutton. The addresses, believed to have been prepared by Ira Barton, Esq., were printed in full in the Massachusetts Spy of 29 Dec., 1824.

Burning of Old Huguenot Mill. PAGE 194. On 1 Oct., 1891, between 2 and 4 o'clock A. M. the mill at the south end of the Plain and also the old saw-mill near, used as a store-house, were with all their contents entirely consumed.

"Chase Mill No. 2." PAGE 210. Manufacturing at this locality by Chase & Son, Webster, was suspended in the summer of 1891.

Changes in School affairs. PAGE 100. At April meeting, 1891, an important step was taken in reference to school interests, Oxford voting to unite with some adjoining town or towns in employing a superintendent of schools. Upon this vote the committees of Millbury, Oxford and Dudley came together and engaged to fill this position Mr. John S. Cooley of Enfield, Conn.¹ At the close of the Spring term of 1891 George A. Willey and Albert G. McIntyre, respectively, resigned their positions as principals of the High and Grammar Schools, and Edgar L. Willard of Leominster, a graduate, 1891, of Brown University, was engaged as teacher in the High School, and Edith M. Keith, a graduate, 1891, of the Bridgewater State Normal School, of the Grammar School. These all began their term of service with the opening of the Fall term, 1891.

¹ Mr. Cooley is a native of Springfield, educated in the city schools and Collegiate Institute, was a teacher in Enfield and Windsor Locks for 20 years, the last seven in the latter place as principal of High School, and also superintendent of schools of the town; member of the faculty in Summer schools at Saratoga, N. Y., Asbury Park, N. J., Conn. State, Texas State, and Martha's Vineyard National; and also employed for several years by the Conn. State Board of Education as lecturer on educational subjects throughout the State.

The Will of Jeremiah Learned. Date, 27 June, 1888.

"Item 1. After the payment of my just debts and funeral charges and expenses of settling my estate I direct and request my Executor of this my last will to deposit and put on interest in the Worcester County Institution for Savings in said Worcester the sum of two thousand dollars, the interest and dividends thereon to be paid semi-annually to the Town of Oxford in said County for the purpose of maintaining and improving my burial lot and the burial lot of my sister Clarissa Alverson and her husband Rufus G. Alverson, situated in the north cemetery in said Oxford, also the burial lot of my parents and of Nathaniel Stockwell in the cemetery at Oxford Plains in said Oxford, and I do give said sum of two thousand dollars accordingly to the inhabitants of said town of Oxford in trust for said purposes."

He then disposes of a portion of his estate in legacies to relatives and friends. The residuary clause follows:—

"Item 13. All the rest, residue and remainder of my estate, real, personal or mixed I give, devise and bequeath as follows: one third part thereof to the inhabitants of the town of Oxford, in trust, to expend one half the income thereof in maintaining a free public library for the use of the inhabitants of said town, and to expend the other half of the income thereof in maintaining and improving said cemeteries at North Oxford and at Oxford Plains in said town of Oxford,—one third part of said rest, residue and remainder to the Old Men's Home in the City of Worcester,—one third part of said rest, residue and remainder to my nephew George Henry Kelley . . . but in case said Kelley shall die before he shall be entitled to the possession of any portion of his share of said residue, then such portion so remaining in the hands of said Executor or Trustee shall belong to and shall be paid over and delivered to the other two residuary legatees aforesaid in equal shares for the uses and purposes above stated."

On 25 March, 1889, Mr. Learned executed a codicil to his will, changing the manner of the disposition of the residuum of his estate, item 4 of which follows:—

"Whatever balance may remain in the hands of my said Executor after settling my estate paying the legacies provided for in said will and this codicil and making the appropriations for the trust funds as therein provided I give to said George Swan, in trust, to pay the net income thereof semi-annually to my said daughter Blanche Warren Learned during her life, and at her decease to pay over the principal to my residuary legatees in manner provided, and for the uses stated in the residuary clause, Item No. 13, in my said will."

Mr. Learned's estate was inventoried at $121,000. The town of Oxford will receive no immediate benefit from it, and no estimates as to the future are possible. It is believed however that at some future day $25,000 at least, and possibly a considerably larger amount, will come to the town treasury for the benefit of the Free Public Library and cemeteries.

Ancestry of Rev. John Campbell. PAGE 422. The doubts so long enveloping this subject appear to have been in late years to an extent removed in the minds of some of his descendants. Through the efforts of Mrs. M. DeW. Freeland communication was opened with a supposed collateral branch of the family in Scotland, and a letter received, which while not positive and conclusive, offers a plausible solution of the mystery. Cecil Campbell Higgins, Esq., of New York (who has kindly furnished a copy for publication), after five or six years of investigation in England, asserts his belief that this account of Mr. Campbell's identity is correct. Much significance is attached to the fact of Lord Loudon's visit to Mr. Campbell at Oxford which has doubtless always been considered by the public a remarkable event, and from present view to be explained only on the hypothesis of a family relationship.¹ The letter follows :—

“TREESBANK HOUSE, Kilmarnock, 16 January, 1876.

“MADAM :

“On receipt of yours of the 23rd August, 1875, my father, Col. Campbell, at once wrote to me and requested me to give you any information in my power. Absence from home, however, not being able to have access to my books and other reasons quite beyond my control have rendered it impossible for me to answer your enquiries sooner. I hope that this will account for my apparent want of courtesy.

“The Rev'd John Campbell, to whom you refer as mentioned in Boswell's 'Life of Johnson,' was brother to my great-grandfather James Campbell of Cessnock. The said John Campbell was 'Minister' of Riccartown and died there in 1761. The following is an extract from his brother's (elder) pocket-book (in my possession) recording it: 'Rev'd. Mr. John Campbell Minr of Riccartown my Broyr Died very suddenly of a' plethory upon yr morning early (as supposed being found dead in bed) of the third day of Aprile 1761 and buried upon the 6th yr after. Marked James Campbell.' It is a curious coincidence that he should have died the same year as your ancestor, but they could not possibly have been identical as the one never left the country and lies at Riccartown in the family vault. The interest attached by Dr. Johnson to his collection of books arose merely from the fact that it was a large and most valuable and in those days almost unequalled one. He left them all to his elder brother (my direct ancestor). Many were afterwards destroyed by fire, but those that escaped are still in my father's library here. I am writing these lines in the room in which Dr. Johnson slept when on his visit here.

“I believe your ancestor to have been Colonel John Campbell of Shankston. If, however, this is the case he must have been more than 71 years of age at the time of his death I should suppose, and this is not improbable as the family is very long lived. My reason for believing in this identity is the disappearance of said John Campbell from a family history where the minutest details of all the other members are chronicled. I believe he must have got into political troubles and have been obliged to fly the country. The visit of the Earl Loudoun (his nephew?), a proud and austere man who was unlikely to have visited a private individual merely because his name was Campbell, would thus also be accounted for. But the most cogent reason of all is that Sir John Campbell of Lawers (afterwards 1st Earl of Loudoun) had only two descendants named 'John,' viz. : John 4th Earl of Loudoun and John Campbell of Shankston. All you write of the relations of Glenlyon, Lawers and Loudoun is quite correct and shows that your traditions are true. If your ancestor was John Campbell of Shankston his heirs of line can claim the Earldom of Loudoun and all the baronies granted in 1633 to Sir John of Lawers, but the estates are 'proscribed,' i. e., having been held without challenge for upwards of 40 years the right of the present possessor can

¹ On that occasion, according to unquestionable tradition, the visitor was entertained, not at Mr. Campbell's house but at that of Josiah Wolcott, his son-in-law, for the reason, perhaps, that his residence was, from its appointments, best adapted to the reception. It has been said the meeting was at the stone bridge, now standing, over the brook which runs about midway between the two houses. This would have been very natural if Loudoun came by way of Worcester, as at this point the road from Mr. Campbell's residence intersected the main highway. Thence they proceeded together, it is said, to Wolcott's where they spent the night.

no longer be disputed. They are held by the present Earl of Loudown of the Hastings family to which they went by the marriage of Flora Campbell, only child of the 5th Earl, to the Earl of Moira, afterwards Marquess of Hastings. If you can follow up the clue I have given you and prove the identity of your ancestor there can be no doubt of the claim of his heirs of line, for although your ancestor dying before John, 4th Earl, could of course, never have claimed the titles and estates, and having no exact account of who he was, his descendants never did so when the succession opened to them. Yet the fact remains that they must succeed before the heirs of their ancestor's younger brother. I think you will understand it by referring to the annexed pedigrees.

"My father is the representative of the original house of Loudown, for although the estate went to the granddaughter of the first baron by marriage to Sir John of Lawers yet the chieftainship of the house remained with the heir male of the family, the first baron's cousin, Sir Hugh Campbell of Cessnock, my direct ancestor. All branches acknowledge my father as chief of the House of Loudown, as you will find by referring to Burke's 'Armory County Families' and 'Robertson's History of Ayrshire,' wherein he is styled 'Chief of the Campbells of Loudown and Cessnock.' I annex pedigrees and will be very glad to hear that this reaches you in safety. A century ago there seems to have been no stigma attaching to illegitimate branches of great houses (in many cases peerages being granted to them), so you will have thoroughly to sift all the evidence. The House of Loudown has several branches of this kind here possessing large estates. You will understand, Madam, that I find it necessary to caution you on this point, disagreeable though it is to me to do so. I am, Madam,

"Your obedient servant,

PEDIGREES.

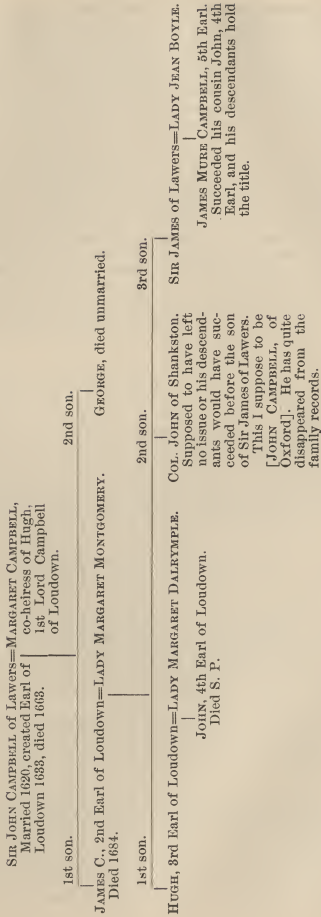

In 1620 Sir John Campbell of Lawers, eldest son and heir of Sir James Campbell of Lawers, married Margaret Campbell, co-heiress of Hugh, 1st Baron Campbell of Loudown. They had (with daughters) two sons, James, who succeeded, and George died unmarried.

James, 2nd Earl (his father having been created Earl of Loudown, Baron Faryman, etc., in 1633), married Lady Margaret Montgomery. They had three sons: 1st, Hugh, who succeeded; 2nd, Col. JOHN of Shankston; 3rd, James, afterward Sir, and to whom his father left the estate of Lawers.

Hugh, 3rd Earl, married Lady Margaret Dalrymple and died in 1731. They had one son, John, who succeeded (and two daughters).

John, 4th Earl, a distinguished military commander. [Visited Rev. John Campbell, at Oxford]. He died unmarried in 1782, when his estate and titles devolved upon James Mure Campbell (son of his uncle Sir James). He succeeded as 5th Earl and had an only child, Flora, who took the estates by marriage into the "Hastings Family," where they still remain.

FORMULATED PEDIGREE OF THE CAMPBELL FAMILY.

Miss Mary Butler Campbell. Since the printing of the notes on the Campbell family, page 428, Miss Campbell, a much honored and beloved member, has deceased. Her father died when she was eight years of age and soon thereafter the family removed to Dudley that the children might receive the benefit of the Academy. Here we find Miss Mary at 11 years of age among the brightest of its pupils, contemporary with Peter C. Bacon and Samuel C. Paine, and taking a prominent part in a public exhibition of the school. When about 16 she began her career as teacher in the district school at Oxford centre. Later she for a short time was under the tuition of Rev. Mr. Phelps (father of Prof. Phelps, Andover), at Brookfield, and went thence to Miss Fiske's school at Keene, N. H. Miss Porter, her intimate friend, wrote "probably no other person beside her noble mother had so happy an influence in determining her aims and character as Miss Fiske." In 1829 she went to Springfield as teacher in the popular and "attractive" school of Miss Hawkes. Two years later Miss Hawkes removed to Philadelphia giving the Springfield institution into the charge of Miss Campbell and Miss Porter (later at the head of the celebrated Farmington school), which arrangement continued about a year, and the school was given up. The winter of 1833-4 Miss Campbell spent at Charleston, S. C. She next joined her old friend, Miss Hawkes at Philadelphia as assistant, continuing about two years, going thence for a year or more to Wilmington, Del., into the family of Hon. Richard H. Bayard, as governess.

Miss Helen L. Campbell, her niece (to whom we are indebted for many of the facts of this sketch), writes: "It must have been in the autumn of 1838 that Miss Campbell and her sister Celia opened their school in University Place, New York." Here, to quote Miss Porter, "under the auspices of excellent friends (and there, as always before, they made firm and valuable friends), the school was happy and prosperous." But the mother, who resided with them, and also Miss Celia, preferred country life, and at their solicitation, buildings having been fitted for the purpose at the mansion at Oxford, in the spring of 1843 the school was removed thither. Here it was only moderately successful, and in the autumn of 1844 another removal was made at the urgent invitation of old friends, to Springfield, where until the marriage of Miss Celia in the fall of 1849 the institution was conducted with marked success. That event terminated operations at Springfield, and Miss Mary removed to Boston, where she remained until after the decease of the wife of her brother James B. at Charleston. In the fall of 1851 she went to that city to take charge of the bereaved household, entering upon a new but no less important sphere, "presiding with dignity and grace over an elegant home, entertaining many of the distinguished people of the day, always welcoming with cordial hospitality all who found their way to the ever open door, interesting herself in every charitable work and always ready with sympathy, counsel and money to help the sick, the suffering and the needy."

At the breaking out of the war most of the teachers of the Normal School at Charleston returned to their homes in the North, and Miss Campbell, that the work might not cease, engaged with characteristic efficiency in the service, thus "for a year filling a wide gap" in the institution. At the bombardment of the city, while other members of the family, in common with a large portion of the people, left for places of safety she remained in the mansion to protect the property, and with the help of a faithful Union soldier detailed for the purpose, did so effectually amid great danger from fire and freebooters.

In 1869-70, she with her two nieces travelled a year or more in Europe, and again in 1887 she spent a winter in Rome, and the following spring and a part of the summer in England. In the summer of 1889 some of the strongest ties which bound her to the city of her adoption having been broken, she, with many regrets, left Charleston, thereafter to make a home with Northern friends. The summer of 1890 was passed at the homestead in Oxford, during which time she had much enjoyment in renewing old acquaintances, but her home for most of the time after leaving the South was with her nephew, Cecil Campbell Higgins, in or near New York city. At his summer residence at Pound Ridge, N. Y., in the last days of June, 1891, she was taken seriously ill, and after two months, in which there was a gradual decline, died peacefully on the 24th of August.

The Charleston News and Courier soon after her decease printed an obituary notice which contained the following:

"Endowed with a strong intellect and fixed intensity of purpose, Miss Campbell reaped all the advantages afforded by the best New England schools, though she did not consider her education completed when she left the school-room as a pupil or afterwards as a teacher, but kept abreast with the thought and discoveries of her time, being a bright exemplar of general culture up to the last year of her invaluable life. Gentle and winning in manner, affectionate in disposition and with a singularly sweet and attractive face, her clear and strong, though not bigoted, religious convictions, completed the character and suggested to all the realization of the 'Perfect woman, nobly planned.'

"Miss Campbell was one of the original board of ladies who, in 1867, organized in this city the 'Home for the Mothers, Widows and Daughters of Confederate Soldiers.' She was the soul and guiding spirit of the educational feature of this excellent institution, and was at the time of her death Vice-President of the Home Association. The loss the Home suffers in her death is irreparable, and hundreds of its alumnae, girls and young matrons throughout the State, will read with deep sorrow of the death of their beloved guide, counsellor and friend.

"Miss Campbell's gentle yet ardent spirit and many benefactions bring to mind the lines which mark the tomb of Gunfreda de Warren, a noble woman of mediæval times:

"A Martha to the homeless poor, a Mary in her love,

"The House of Rest," Charleston, S. C. Miss Celia, daughter of Hon. James B. Campbell, was a devoted Christian and gave largely of her means as well as personal effort to charitable work. In coöperation with a kindred spirit, Miss Wagner, she rented a large house in Charleston, where in March, 1874, was opened the "House of Rest," an asylum or retreat where sick and destitute orphan children were received and cared for. This institution supplied a long felt want in the city and was a real boon to the poor. To its interests Miss Campbell was unsparingly devoted and was at her post of duty there when stricken with the illness which ten days later terminated her life, 28 Feb., 1887.

Ancestry of Benoni Twitchell. PAGE 729. BENJAMIN of Dorchester removed probably before 1663 to Medfield. Of his children were Mary, who m. Josiah Rockwood, Bethia, who m. John Rockwood, and Abiel, b. 1663 at Medfield. The latter "and her child," in 1683 lived with her brother-in-law, Josiah Rockwood, at Medfield. This child is supposed to have been Benoni—the son of my sorrow.

The Will of Cyrus Kidder. Mr. Kidder died 27 Aug., 1891. His will was dated 17 Sept., 1879, extracts from which follow :—

“Third. I give and bequeath to the First Congregational Church of Oxford the sum of one thousand dollars, in trust, nevertheless, to the following uses and purposes, to wit, to invest the same permanently as a fund, and to use the income thereof in relieving such worthy members of the Church as are in indigent circumstances through sickness or misfortune of any kind, and especially in providing such persons with the comforts of life in their last sickness, and a suitable burial and headstone.

“Fourth. I give and bequeath to the inhabitants of the town of Oxford the sum of five hundred dollars, the income of which shall be appropriated so far as may be necessary and proper for taking care of my lot in the north cemetery of said town and the two lots which my brother and I may hereafter purchase in said cemetery, and for the keeping of said lots in perfect order, and if there shall be any of said income remaining annually, said balance shall be applied and appropriated for the general care and improvement of said cemetery.”

In November, 1891, steps were taken to contest in the Courts the validity of this will.
